

President Ford is shown through a window in the Oval Office as he worked on his upcoming State of the Union address.

Ford to Report Country Still Has Long Way to Go

Washington (AP) — A year ago President Ford told Congress "the state of the Union is not good." He'll report on Monday night that it is better, but the country still has a long way to go.

"I've got bad news," Ford declared last year, as he outlined problems in such areas as energy, employment and the economy.

In the State of the Union 1976, he'll report the same problems persist, most to a lesser degree, and he'll propose a belt-tightening budget of $394 billion.

On foreign affairs, the President will declare the United States is continuing its efforts in 1976 toward a Middle East peace settlement, toward reaching a second phase nuclear arms agreement with the Soviet Union and improving detente with the Russians.

And he may provide an initial indication of his plans for the long awaited reorganization of the nation's intelligence apparatus.

The President is scheduled to deliver the half hour message before a joint session of Congress at 8 p.m. CST Monday.

In discussing the speech with reporters the other day, Ford said the state of the union "is better than what I said last year," but he did not elaborate.

White House sources said the President will present a broad overview of domestic and foreign affairs, leaving specific details to his budget, economic, state of the world and other messages to be delivered in the coming weeks.

Presidential press secretary Ron Nessen also said the address "will present a philosophical overview of the goals and vision of where the President wants to lead the country over the next several years."

Ford met on Saturday with Gov. Robert Ray of Iowa, chairman of the National Governors Conference, to brief him on the state of the union and budget messages.

While they posed for photographers, Ford held a copy of his State of the Union message, saying, "This is the fifth draft and we're going to have one more and that's it."

Political Overtones?

The President planned to work through the weekend on the speech. Because it is an election year, Democrats will be watching closely for any political overtones in the State of the Union message.

Some Congressional sources said Ford faces strong opposition from the Democratic controlled Congress for his plan to hold down spending.

The President will say in his message that the economy has to be improved in 1976, that the country must have continued economic growth without inflation, that there must be jobs for everyone who wants to work.

As an economic pump primer, Ford will propose an additional $10 billion tax cut, above the $18 billion already approved by Ford and the Congress in a compromise last month that extended 1975 cuts six

Federal Spending Top Issue

94th Congress Back in Session Monday

By Steve Gerstel
Washington (UPI) — The second session of the 94th Congress begins Monday with the budget and the ballot very much in the picture this election year.

The Democratic optimism of a year ago is gone. Despite huge majorities, they expect only a standoff with President Ford.

Fighting for his political life, Ford will be even tougher. He is expected to reject anything that might swell his under-$395 billion budget or dispel his conservative image.

Adding to the outlook is the fact that the House and one-third of the Senate are up for reelection and many freshmen congressmen who swept into office in 1974 fear getting swept out in 1976.

As Congress returns Monday from a one-month holiday, the major issue is federal spending — not just how much, but also on what.

After his State of the Union message before Congress Monday night, Ford offers his budget Wednesday. It will have no room for new programs.

Congress Makes Own Budget

And for the first time, Congress must work out its own budget. Under a law taking effect in fiscal 1977 (starting in October), Congress must meet its budget or raise taxes.

There will be pressure to hold spending close to Ford's, although there will be differences on where the money goes. Generally speaking, Congress will try to get money for social programs from defense spending; the administration will resist.

Main issues as the election-year session opens:

Economy — A strong push by Democrats for legislation creating jobs as long as unemployment is around 8%, and for an extension of unemployment benefits.

Energy — Dispute over oil prices resolved last year; fight this year possible on deregulation of natural gas prices. Congress might try to tap military oil reserves for civilian use, adjust environmental standards to accommodate energy plans, tax energy users, provide tax incentives for energy cutbacks. No gas tax.

Foreign Aid — Waiting for congressional approval is Ford's request for aid to the Middle East, which helped make the interim peace agreement between Israel and Egypt. Ford wants $2.2 billion for Israel and $800 million for Egypt.

Taxes — Prospects are for moderate changes but no major restructuring that could be ballooned as reform of the tax system. Because of the election, individual taxes could be cut more after June 30.

Military — The Pentagon will bear the brunt as Congress looks for politically safe money for defense programs.

CIA — Congress will establish committees to monitor CIA activities and lay down guidelines on intelligence functions. Covert military aid to foreign countries — such as Angola — will get deeper scrutiny.

Crime — Revision of the federal criminal code is languishing in committees. There also will be a push for gun control — especially "Saturday night specials." The opposition is formidable.

Revenue Sharing — Congress must extend, kill or make permanent the revenue sharing program. The administration is for it, but there is concern that all share — need or no need.

Consumers — The big bill, to create a consumer advocacy agency, is in a Senate-House Conference and Congress may hold it until Ford has to veto it at a politically more critical time.

Environment — Congress still is trying to amend and extend the Clean Air Act of 1970 which expired. It will try to pass another strip mining bill.

Legislative firsts whose prospects were bright last January but now are doomed include: a national health insurance program, no-fault car insurance, expanding picketing powers at construction sites, and increased farm price supports.

Whoa! Mizzou Mules Best?

By Paul Siemer
(c) Newhouse News Service
St. Louis — Missourians are complaining that their mules have been slandered.

The dispute began with a recent report that the army of Ghana was in need of 2,000 mules to haul its portable artillery.

It was learned the African nation's army was doing its mule shopping in — forgive them — Switzerland, of all places.

Horse Sense Applauded

Raymond Gentinetta, a leading Swiss mule breeder, added insult to injury by applauding the Ghanaian generals' horse sense and saying they had "come to the right place if they were seeking the finest mules in the world . . . our mules are the best in the world — the offspring of Jura mares and male Italian asses . . . unmatched in endurance, work performance and health."

Hey, whoa there, says Missouri.

"It is shocking to me," says Harry Morley of the St. Louis Regional Commerce and Growth Assn., "that anyone looking for a mule or several mules did not come first to the recognized capital of muledom."

"I trust that when the Ghanaian army needs wristwatches or cheese, it will place its order in St. Louis."

St. Louis Zoo General Curator Charles Hoessle declares: "The Missouri mule is definitely a better mule. It is well known for its stamina."

Dubious of Swiss Boast

Roger Conklin and his friends in Columbia, Mo., ride mules when they go hunting. Conklin, for one, is dubious of the Swiss boast. "I don't really see how these Swiss mules could be better," he muses. "I don't want to contradict these people, not having seen their mules and all. But Missouri is known as the mule capital of the world, and I think they're just blowin' their horn, personally."

Claude Adams of Lamar, who has been breeding mules in southwest Missouri for 35 years, doesn't buy it either. "I doubt that very much . . . why, I've never even seen a Switzerland mule."

Rep. William Hungate, D-Mo., whose district includes a lot of mule country: "Anybody that doesn't buy his mules in Missouri takes the chance of making an ass of himself."

And, the last shot, a practical note from Ralph Smith, an aide to Missouri Gov. Christopher Bond:

"Well, I'll say this — if the Swiss mules are as stubborn as ours, the Ghanaian army will not be able to move their artillery at all. Who knows? It might prevent a war."

Lebanon Calls Cease-fire—Again

Beirut (AP) — Premier Rashid Karami went on Beirut radio early today to announce that leaders of battling Christians and Moslems have agreed to a new cease-fire.

Karami said the truce calls for blockades to be lifted around two Palestinian refugee camps and four predominantly Christian towns.

There are at least 25,000 Christians besieged in the seaside towns in southern Lebanon, including Interior Minister Camille Chamoun. Witnesses said "corpses are strewn all over the place."

Police reported 116 persons were known dead and 174 were wounded by midday Saturday but the casualty toll was steadily mounting in Lebanon's nine-month-old civil war that has claimed more than 9,000 lives. It pits right-wing Christians against leftist Moslems and their Palestinian allies.

Karami, a Moslem, said the cease-fire would take effect at 6 a.m. Sunday (11 p.m. EST). The government will guarantee that all roads will remain open, he said, and all sides had agreed to lift their blockades.

These include the Palestinian camps of Tel Zaater and Jisr Basha in Beirut's suburbs that have been encircled by Christians for two weeks, and the Moslem sieges of the Christian towns of Jiyeh, Naameh, Saadiyat and Damour.

The Palestinian camp of Damieh that was captured by Christians three days ago will be returned to the guerrillas and Moslem militiamen and Palestinians will withdraw from Christian territory that they seized, according to the agreement, Karami said.

Many Lebanese were doubtful that the cease-fire would hold. Dozens of truces have been called, but only 16 were successful for brief periods.

The army and Palestinian guerrillas had agreed to a cease-fire Friday, but it collapsed immediately when the Moslem and Christian militias refused to accept it and fighting intensified.

The partial occupation by guerrillas of Damour on Friday sent air force jet fighters on their first antiguerrilla bombing and strafing missions in the conflict.

Chamoun, 76-year-old former president and Lebanon's Christian leader, was trapped with his family in their mansion in Saadiyat, 13 miles south of Beirut.

There were conflicting reports on efforts to evacuate him.

Palestinian spokesmen said guerrilla leader Yasir Arafat sent some of his soldiers to Chamoun's home to protect him. They added that Chamoun refused an offer to evacuate him.

An official of Chamoun's National Liberal party denied the guerrilla reports. He said Chamoun and thousands of Christian refugees in the area "are determined to fight to the end for their honor."

He claimed that about 25 guerrillas in two boats tried to land on the beach behind Chamoun's villa under cover of darkness but said they all drowned when their vessels were sunk by Christian defenders.

Chamoun's son Danny, a leader of the Tiger militia in Beirut, demanded that the government send army troops to rescue his father. He said President Suleiman Franjeh, a Christian, rejected his plea.

Iowans Open '76 Presidential Search

By Norman Sandler
Des Moines, Iowa (UPI) — As many as 100,000 Iowans are expected to assemble in over 5,000 precinct caucuses Monday to begin the 10-month process of selecting the nation's next president.

It is the first voting test of the presidential campaign in the country.

Democratic and Republican leaders are expecting the caucuses to yield the largest turnout of voters on the local level in Iowa history.

There could be surprises in store for the more than one dozen presidential hopefuls by the time the votes are counted.

For weeks, six Democratic candidates — Indiana Sen. Birch Bayh, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris, Washington Sen. Henry Jackson, R. Sargent Shriver, and Arizona Rep. Morris Udall — have been crisscrossing the state.

Shadow of Humphrey

But despite their scramble, they have been unable to escape the shadow of the party's most consistent presidential contender, Hubert Humphrey.

A recent United Press International poll indicates that, when faced with the problem of unseating an incumbent, active Democrats in Iowa appear prone to call upon the veteran from Minnesota.

The UPI poll, taken of a statistically valid random sample of Democratic county chairmen, shows Humphrey the first choice of 37.5% of the party leaders, trailed by Carter, 18.8%; Bayh, 12.5%; and Shriver, Harris and Udall, with 6.3% each.

When tested for acceptability, considering first and second choices, Humphrey's viability is enhanced. A full 50% of the Democrats said they could support Humphrey, while Bayh had 43.8% and Carter 31.3%.

Monday night, however, the polls and projections will be irrelevant. After 8:30 p.m. CST the only thing that will count is the votes and the likely winners will be Carter and Bayh.

Carter has carried out a well-staffed, well-orchestrated campaign which his opponents partially trace to a heavy influx of campaign money. Bayh, has the support of most organized labor forces.

Regardless of their pre-caucus showings in the polls, the Democratic candidates will be looking for the magic 15% margin they will need Monday night to remain in the Iowa campaign.

Under party rules, candidates earning the support of 15% or more of the voters attending each caucus are eligible for county convention delegates and, therefore, to advance in the delegate selection system. If the magic number is not reached, the show is over.

"One person could make the difference between whether a candidate gets delegates or not," a Shriver aide told two supporters at a recent campaign stop. "You could be the difference in seeing that we get the 15%."

Impact of Uncommitted

A major impact of the caucuses will be the number of uncommitted delegates elected at large.

With Humphrey not officially in the race, many Democrats are expected to withhold their support for any candidate at the precinct level. Democratic leaders indicate anywhere from 25 to 50% of the delegates elected Monday will be uncommitted.

If the uncommitted faction reaches 30% or more, Iowa Democratic chairman Tom Whitney said, "The caucus system will come to no resolution and the nomination is not going to be settled on the first ballot."

The caucuses begin a five-month process in Iowa to elect delegates to the national nominating conventions, although each party will work by its own schedule and actual selection process.

"In the precinct caucuses, the first thing will be to elect members to the county central committee," said Ralph Brown, executive director of the Republican State Central committee. "Then the caucuses will elect delegates to the county conventions."

The county GOP conventions are scheduled for Feb. 28 but it is not until the June 18 district caucuses that Republicans will actually select national convention delegates to be ratified by the convention the next day. Prospective delegates will not be required to state their candidate preferences at any point throughout the caucus process.

Democrat Process Faster

The Democrats' delegate-selection process will be faster than that of the GOP, with precinct caucus representatives advancing to county meetings March 6, district gatherings April 10 and the state convention May 29.

The Democratic race is crowded, but the fight for the Republican nomination is shaping up to be a long, hard one in a state which might normally be expected to throw its support to President Ford.

A UPI survey of Republican county chairmen shows Ford and Ronald Reagan running even in Iowa, with 47% each, and another 6% of the GOP leaders undecided.

That caught many Republican leaders off guard for two reasons.

First, both candidates had until last week maintained low profiles in Iowa and had not run active campaigns here.

Second, Ford has the support of the state's leading Republicans, including Gov. Robert Ray, who has been mentioned as a possible Ford running mate, and National Committeewoman Mary Louise Smith of Des Moines.

But Reagan's record appears to have influenced Iowans.

"Basically, I believe Mr. Reagan has a good record in California," said one central Iowa Republican, "and I think we need a change in Washington. I think we need new thinking in Washington. Mr. Ford has been there for 25 years and that warps your thinking."

Kissinger Sees Quick End to War

By Jeremiah O'Leary
(c) Washington Star
Washington — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has told African diplomats he expects the civil war in Angola to be over in a month, and he appears to foresee a diplomatic rather than a military solution.

There was no press coverage of Kissinger's closed-door session with the 37 African diplomats at the State Dept. last week, but disclosure by informed sources of his expectation of an early end to hostilities immediately raised two possibilities among officials here. They are:

—That Kissinger already may have a Soviet commitment to terminate the flow of Russian arms to the Popular Movement faction in advance of his visit to Moscow this week.

—That the Soviet naval vessels reported off West Africa may be there for the purpose of taking the 5,000-to-7,000-man Cuban expeditionary force out of Angola and back to Cuba.

If Kissinger and the Soviet Union already have a secret deal to end the presence of the outside Marxist powers, it would help explain why Kissinger was so ready to indicate that the Angolan intervention would in no way interfere with his efforts to achieve a new strategic arms limitation treaty in Moscow.

Soviet Writer Blames Bureaucrats for Disastrous Harvests

By Barry James
Moscow (UPI) — The one excuse repeated over and over by Communist party officials for this year's disastrous grain crop was that the weather was bad.
Now a Soviet writer has dismissed this as nonsense, saying bureaucrats do more harm than the coldest winter or driest drought.
Writing in the magazine Nash Sovremennik, Yuri Chernichenko, a journalist specializing in agricultural problems, said Soviet weather is so repeatedly and regularly bad that it could be overcome with proper planning.
Bureaucrats Accused
Chernichenko accused bureaucrats and planners of ruining some of the Soviet Union's best land in their attempts to boost production at any cost.
He said they pay no attention to such elementary details as contour plowing, crop rotation, timely sowing or the choice of the right seeds for the climate.
Chernichenko focused on the black soil zone of southern Russia and the Ukraine, once known as the breadbasket of Europe, where most of the winter wheat is sown.
He said every third winter since 1891 was as cold as the one which was credited with destroying much of the winter wheat crop in 1972.
Yet in that year, he said, proper precautions and sowing would have saved more than 90% of the lost crops.
Weakness Accentuated
"The level of land cultivation is defined not by the years with favorable weather, but by the seasons of poor weather," he said. The real problem, he added, is that the standard of agriculture does not keep pace with the science of agronomy "and the weather merely accentuates this weakness of ours. It is not the major cause of our bad grain crops."
Chernichenko listed these shortcomings in agricultural planning:
— Wrong plowing. Fields are plowed straight up and down, allowing water to run off and causing drought and dust storms. Only a small minority of farms practice contour plowing.
— Wasting fertilizers. Chernichenko said only one farm in 30 digs the fertilizer into the roots of winter wheat where it counts. The rest spray from the air often onto bone-dry fields, and "the weeds are just as happy to get this kind of fertilizing." Some new wheat varieties produce enormous yields given adequate fertilization, but Chernichenko said planners parcel out inadequate quantities of fertilizers so that all farms get an equal share "but no wheat gets enough."

— Lack of crop rotation. Because the development plan usually calls for sowing on the maximum acreage, bureaucrats do not allow farmers to leave fields fallow. In the black earth zone, only 9% of fields are properly rotated. "It's a dead investment when we use new kinds of grains without crop rotation," he quoted agronomist Ivan Kalininka as saying. "The main thing is not how many hectares we sowed but the height, reliability and quality of the yield."
— Wrong choice of seeds. "We need grain that give a good crop under bad conditions," Chernichenko quoted another agronomist, Vasily Remeslo, as saying. Instead, the bureaucrats insist on using super varieties that look good on paper, but which require special care and intensive fertilization. Remeslo said regional authorities, "who do anything to fulfill and overfulfill their plans" treat agronomists like "errand boys" and reject their advice about the proper seeds to be used.

— Over-emphasis on winter wheat. Because the new varieties of seeds are theoretically high yielding, they get the priority for machinery and fertilizers. Yet Chernichenko said 1948 was the only year since the war when the Soviet Union succeeded in harvesting its entire winter crop. And only reasonable spring wheat harvests in recent years have staved off total catastrophe. Chernichenko said the amount of winter wheat lost in the black soil zone has increased from about 20% to 58% in the past 15 years. From 1968 to 1972, for example, the gross grain yield increased 24%, but winter varieties accounted for only 7.5% of the increase.
— Untimely sowing. Chernichenko said the development plan pays no heed to the delicate balance of nature. Workers who received a prize in August for completing their sowing ahead of the time stipulated by the plan saw the result of their efforts thrown away in April.
Lost to Erosion
Because of bad farming and over cultivation, soil erosion is enormous. In the Don River region alone, 19,200 acres is lost to erosion every year, Chernichenko said, and 27 million tons of soil are annually washed from the right bank of the Don River. Yet this could be prevented.
In a blunt attack on the planners, Chernichenko said agriculture should be left "to agronomists and not to calculators."
"We should learn how to refrain from sowing. We should admit that it sometimes happens that the soil is dry and that there are no guarantees of prospects for a good crop, that the risk is not justified. In such cases we should not waste seeds at all, but wait for the spring. The seeds we thus save will be on addition to our crop and not a detraction from it."
He condemned what he called a make-or-break philosophy that demanded ever greater results, instead of accenting safer but surer targets with grain varieties suited to climatic conditions.
Seldom Publicized
"We would not use the wrong kind of gasoline for a Zhiguli (automobile) or an IL-62 aircraft," he said. "The same goes for wheat. These new varieties are not adapted to bad conditions and under bad conditions they perform worse."

Seldom has such factual indictment of agricultural mismanagement appeared in the Soviet press. It seemed to support many of the worst things Western experts have been saying about the dead hand of bureaucracy on the nation's farms.
Although Nash Sovremennik is an intellectual magazine with a circulation of little more than 100,000, the publication of the article must have had high official support in a country where everything is censored. An explanation is that the magnitude of this year's grain disaster — the Soviets produced an estimated 137 million tons of grain compared with a planned 215.7 million tons — has prompted some officials to open a serious debate about the agricultural problem. Similar but milder articles have appeared in other publications.
Nonetheless, the emphasis still is on ambitious production targets. The 1976-1980 development plan calls for an average annual harvest of 215-220 million tons, 22% above the average in the 1970-1975 plan.

Wallace Adds Earthy Touch to Campaign

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace, updating his feud with the federal courts, has added a phrase of rough-hewn slang to the American political lexicon of 1976. The phrase: "a political barbed wire enemy."
Wallace used those words at a news conference Wednesday as he assailed a federal judge or an order requiring massive reforms in Alabama's prison system.
The governor first said that "thugs and federal judges have just about taken charge of our society." Then when asked if the judge's order might damage Wallace's presidential hopes, he added unexpectedly:
"I don't know but that a good vote for George Wallace ... might give a political barbed wire enemy to some of these federal judges."
Wallace made the remark before a packed room of reporters. His campaign camera crew was taking footage for possible use in his race for the Democratic presidential nomination. He drew startled laughs and sounds of chagrin from his audience.
It was the most cutting, earthy phrase in a news conference marked by strong rhetoric. Wallace's language recalled the fiery rural slang of his attacks on the federal courts in the 1960s, when he described one federal judge as an "integrating, scalawaging, carpetbagging liar."
That federal judge was U.S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. of Montgomery, who issued the prison reform order and drew the renewed wrath of the governor last Wednesday.
Wallace didn't mention "political barbed wire enemy"

Permit Denied
Authorities have refused dissident Andrei Sakharov a new permit to live in Moscow and he is staying in the capital illegally, the Nobel Peace Prize said Saturday. The nuclear physicist told Western correspondents he has not been threatened with legal action, but the decision has left him nervous. He said authorities apparently wanted to place him in conflict with Soviet law. "This is a serious and unexpected complication of my position," he said.
Asian Summit
Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos and Indonesian President Suharto agreed Saturday to proceed with the proposed Southeast Asian summit meeting in Bali Feb. 23-25.
Boy Found
While his father, neighbors, 350 policemen, national guardsmen and volunteers backed by helicopters and radio equipment scoured the ponds and fields of suburban Gahanna, Ohio, Friday night for Paul Thornton, the 8-year-old was sleeping soundly at a friend's house. It took young Mike Kapavik only a moment to save the day when the Boy Scouts were called in Saturday morning. "He spent the night at my house," he said. Paul's father Joseph Thornton attributed the whole thing to a misunderstanding. Thornton said Paul is in for "at least a severe talking to."
'Inappropriate'
For President Ford's campaign committee to pay the White House salary of Rogers Morton would be as

Andrei Sakharov

"inappropriate" as having a Cabinet officer on the payroll of General Motors, Howard (Bo) Callaway said Saturday. However, Callaway, chairman of the Ford Election Committee, said the organization will comply with whatever the Federal Elections Commission rules on the government-paid $44,000 salary of Morton.

No Annie Oakley
Daphne Hudson, 60, has been told she is no Annie Oakley, but she still dalkies airplanes. She says they upset her Irish wolfhounds. The Dereham, England, woman dislikes planes so much she fired her shotgun at a cropduster spraying near her kennels — and was fined 100 pounds, about $200, for indulging in behavior likely to endanger the aircraft and its pilot.

Special Service
President Ford plans to attend a special service Monday at the National Presbyterian Church, which invited members of Congress and other government officials "to rededicate themselves to God and country prior to beginning the new year's work."

Castro: Cubans Staying in Angola

By The Associated Press
Soviet-backed forces in Angola said Saturday they will reject U.S. proposals for peace and keep fighting until they win, and Fidel Castro said Cuban troops spearheading the onslaught will stay as long as they are wanted.
The Soviet news agency Tass said Popular Movement — MPLA — forces, armed with Soviet tanks, rockets and heavy artillery, continued driving Western-supported National Front — FNLA — troops in panic toward Angola's northern border with Zaire.
The Zaire air force provided covering fire for troops retreating across the frontier, Tass said without elaboration.
Tass said Western propaganda has accused the MPLA of aggression against Zaire, which has threatened to declare war on the MPLA if its territory is violated. "In order to give Zaire a plausible excuse for a possible extension of the war in Angola," An MPLA spokesman was quoted by the London Daily Telegraph as saying "The war will continue until the enemies of the people are defeated," and that the MPLA will reject U.S. proposals for a coalition government of the warring factions.
The spokesman also said that MPLA forces have been ordered to crush retreating FNLA troops "in one or two weeks."
The newspaper said the FNLA holds only three major towns in Angola's northern third. U.S. sources said the National Front was "near collapse."
Tass said FNLA leader Holden Roberto had fled to Kinshasa, capital of Zaire. The New York Times reported from Kinshasa that Roberto was in the city, but denied the FNLA was collapsing.

New Grain Sales to Russia Unlikely

Washington (AP) — New large sales of U.S. grain to the Soviet Union this season appear to be remote, at least until delivery bottlenecks affecting wheat and corn already purchased are cleared up, says a top Agriculture Dept. official.
The Soviets bought about 10.2 million metric tons of grain last summer before an embargo was ordered by the Ford administration. When it was lifted Oct. 20, officials said Russia could buy another seven million tons without further consultation with the United States.
Only about three million tons more were bought, the last announced on Nov. 6. If Russia chooses, it can buy another four million tons. A metric ton is 2,205 lbs.
Assistant Secretary Richard E. Bell, who oversees Agriculture Dept. international affairs and commodity programs, said Friday that "we still have a considerable way to go" on Russian grain sales before further talks would be triggered.
Lid Removed?
Bell was asked at a news conference to respond to a proposal by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., that the informal lid of 17.2 million tons be removed or increased so Russia would be free to buy more without negotiations.
"I think that if there was an opportunity to sell more than another four million tons, we would look at it, and I really don't see any reason why we wouldn't go ahead," Bell said. "I have no evidence at this stage, though, whether the Soviets are interested in buying an additional quantity of grain of that magnitude in the 1975-76 season."
Bell added he had not predicted Russia would wind up buying 17 million tons of U.S. grain this season.
During last summer's embargo, a new long-term agreement was worked out in which the Soviets pledged to buy six million to eight million tons of U.S. wheat and corn annually for five years. If more than eight million tons is wanted, the Russians would have to consult U.S. officials to get the additional grain.
The five-year agreement calls for deliveries to begin Oct. 1 and does not include the current orders since that grain is needed to help meet Soviet requirements.
"My own feeling is that we will still sell them some more wheat before the new agreement begins," Bell said.

Outlawing English Makes Many Frenchmen Outlaws

By Milt Freudenheim

(c) Chicago Daily News

Paris — By outlawing English words in advertising, business and broadcasting, France overnight has turned itself into a nation of language criminals.

The new law is billed as the first language law here since King Francois I outlawed Latin in 1539. It became official last week, although parts of it won't go into effect until early 1977 — "If ever," cynics are quick to add.

Passed by the National Assembly in December and signed New Year's eve by President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing, the French language usage law has opened many eyes here to the English on every side.

The bread truck that narrowly missed me on the way to the train is labeled "King Corn." A "pop music" poster is at the head of the subway stairs. "Hollywood chewing gum" signs are everywhere in Paris.

Better Days

French is a proud language that has seen better days. Only about 85 million of the world's 4 billion population have French as their native language, compared to 345 million for English.

Somewhat like the New York ad-men who used to say "dress British and think Yiddish," the French long have considered foreign ways, especially English and American, to be very "snob," as they say.

They not only have taken many English and American words into everyday speech (just as French words like "menu" and "cuisine" have been adopted into English).

They have gone further and invented their own, often hilarious meanings for English words in what is called "Franglais."

For 50 years, Parisians have called black-tie dinner jackets "le smoking." They used to call tea "un five o'clock," and they still label their uneatable cocktail snacks as "les lunch."

"le pull" or "le pull-over" is French for sweater in a thousand shop windows. Cars are left in "parkings" and television shows are introduced by "speakerines."

Commerce Minister Vincent Auzanet warned the assembly of the dangers of "une monoculture Anglo-Saxonne" which may make more sense in Gaulist political terms than in his native language.

Air France spokesman Lambert Mayer said the company now may have to change the name of its "welcome service" which used to irritate the late President Georges Pompidou.

'Anglo' Hater
Pompidou was appointed 10 years ago by President Charles de Gaulle, who hated "les Anglo-Saxons," as chairman of the high commission for the defense and promotion of the French language.

In 1972, after succeeding De Gaulle as president, Pompidou signed a decree banning "Franglais" in the oil, film and space industries. But the movie credits still talk about "mixage" and "la script girl."

Special committees were set up to invent French equivalents for words like oil rig and space capsule.

The new law says that all foreign words and phrases are banned where a corresponding French word exists — in advertising, trade marks, operating manuals, guarantees, and billing, radio and TV broadcasts and signs in public places, as well as anywhere benefiting from a government subsidy.

Lag to Lengthen

An English executive with an American computer components firm predicted the operating manual ban on English would add months to the already considerable lag in French technology. Most applied science writing is in English.

The Paris newspaper Le Monde noted that it carries advertising in English from countries like Pakistan asking for bids on government orders. "Are we supposed to turn down ads for 'marketing, career man, teleprocessing etc.?' it asks boldly.

"The only way to deal with this is to laugh," said John Thurn, overseas director of the British Chambers of Commerce Association.

'Ill-Equipped'

But the Economist in London stormed, "French is a poor language... ill-equipped to deal with 1976 technology."

Columnist Bernard Levin the Times delivered his tut-tuts in French at the "country that invented la liberte, le six-huitieme siecle (18th century), la civilization (and above all, la cuisine)."

French Commerce Minister Anquer denied he was advocating linguistic nationalism. He only wants to make French "as pure as possible."

Nothing that English is an approved alternative for all international air communication, Air France's Mayer said "France certainly doesn't want to isolate itself in a uni-lingual tower."

And the people at the Hollywood company began hunting for a catchy replacement for the product the French pronounce as "shooing gum."

Two Oklahoma Doctors Link Environment, Mental Illness

By Ervin Watson

Oklahoma City Times

Oklahoma City (AP) — Car exhaust fumes gave a 45-year-old man the delusion he was Jesus Christ.

A favorite salad dressing brought on severe depression and drove a 35-year-old man to the brink of suicide.

Plain milk led a 40-year-old woman into a state of deep despair.

These are but three examples cited by two Oklahoma City psychiatrists who have set up an environmental control unit at a private hospital.

Environment

They believe the air a patient breathes, the food he eats and all things he comes in contact with may trigger mental illness.

Even the material in the clothes a person wears or the lipstick a woman uses can produce reactions when a person is sensitive to them, the doctors said.

They say the evidence is so strong that they have set up a 20-bed hospital unit for treatment of such patients.

Dr. Harold G. Sleeper, president of the Oklahoma Foundation which governs Coyne Campbell Hospital, has been joined in the venture by Dr. William H. Philpott, a psychiatrist who came to Oklahoma City from Dana Point, Calif., where he has conducted research into such sensitivities.

Foods Cause Reactions

Dr. Philpott said such innocent-appearing foods as cottage cheese can cause allergic-type reactions causing the brain to swell, producing a mental disorder.

He said 92% of the 250 patients he has tested reacted to something. Tests on the remainder were inconclusive because the patients failed to cooperate, he said.

The psychiatrists said the Oklahoma City unit is the first in the United States of its type — devoted exclusively to psychiatric problems.

The causes of an allergy are unknown, they said, adding it might be factors like heredity, nutritional deficiencies or metabolic disorders.

They stress that ecology-related illnesses are not likely to produce the solution to all mental health problems and say that conventional therapy, including drugs, will continue to be used.

"Only those patients who do not show improvement under conventional care will be selected for treatment in this unit," Dr. Sleeper said.

During treatment, the patient is separated from outside influences of the environment as much as possible, including cigaret smoke. All foods are withdrawn for four days. Only the cleanest, untreated water is the diet for the four-day fasting period.

Patients are usually addicted to favorite foods which are often the culprit, the doctors said.

At the end of this period, the system has been cleared, the patient is exposed to foods and chemicals one at a time and the patient's reaction is gauged.

A patient's reaction to some foods and chemicals may be monitored up to two years.

Death, Taxes, Dreams

Inflation has given some people problems which they never might have otherwise considered. Problems they might even have fancied having in earlier days. What's under the microscope are death taxes.

Generally speaking, a person with a net estate of under $60,000 need not worry about federal estate taxes. For a man and wife, the net estate level above which other plans could profitably be made — to avoid imposition of taxes — ranges between $75,000 and $100,000, depending upon the kind of property owned.

Well, not so many years ago, having an estate of $60,000 was, for the average man, quite unthinkable. Inflation has made it more thinkable. Just reckon on the value of real estate.

Farmers and ranchers have been especially sensitive to the estate tax problem for decades. Their concern is that heirs might have to break up and sell an economic agricultural unit just to pay the federal and state estate taxes. As a matter of fact, one of the central causes of the continuing fight over Nebraska's property tax system is the understandable desire of ranchers to keep real estate values down. They want this not because of any real worry about the burden of local property taxes. Their anxiety concerns land values for federal estate tax purposes.

Now, it may be true, as some counsel, that if a person is smart enough to make a pile during his or her lifetime, he or she also is smart enough to do those things which minimize death taxes.

Yet the appeals of farmers and small businessmen for changes in the law to prevent estate breakups continue. They've been heard, too.

At St. Louis, President Ford told the American Farm Bureau Federation convention he will recommend Congress pass laws permitting a stretching out of estate tax payments — at low interest rates — over a period of 25 years after death. At present, payment of estate taxes on farms and small businesses that qualify for special treatment must begin nine months after the death of the former owner and the taxes must be paid in full within ten years.

The Ford plan would apply only to the tax due on farm or business property, worth $300,000 or less.

Perhaps only incidentally, a bill which Sen. Dennis Rasmussen of Scotia has introduced into the 1976 Legislature would exempt any payment of state inheritance taxes on estates of less than $300,000 net value. The present tax trigger point is $10,000, although Nebraska's inheritance tax is considered one of the country's lightest touches.

It is only natural and expectable that families which have built up estates want to keep those assets together for descendants. So changes in federal and state law which serve such an end seem quite attractive.

There is another side, however, rarely considered.

Millions of men and women came to the United States from Europe because there was not the slightest chance of them ever acquiring real estate. Those who held the land in Europe were of a social order with such power that fundamental economic betterment by the masses was most unlikely. America was the land of promise.

Yet today, in these United States, land is becoming ever more precious and difficult for the average young person, with no connections, to begin obtaining. Surely that is so with respect to farm and ranch land.

The opportunity for constant turnover of wealth and its reacquisition through the energy and thrust of new generations, has diminished. And whatever else might be said of them, laws facilitating the perpetuation of established estates won't do very much to widen that above-mentioned opportunity.

If you don't think there's still such a thing in foreign lands as the Dream of America, you're dead wrong. But perforce, it is a different and less spacious sort of dream from that driving the land-hungry poor of the 19th Century.

Pulchre! Bene! Recte!

(Beautiful! Good! Perfect! — Horace)

Often when man sets out to improve on nature, he succeeds only in royally screwing things up.

But so far, in its latest venture, the U.S. Agriculture Department seems to have accomplished a glorious goal — to make the good even better, or at least more reliable and more accessible.

With testing help from the University of Nebraska, agricultural experiment stations and Nebraska Roads Department, among others, the department has tamed a number of prairie wildflowers.

An immediate result: certified seed of three varieties will be available from commercial producers next fall. A longer-range result: a profusion of beautiful blooms in pastures, on ranges and beside roads.

Remembering Emerson's observation — "... if eyes were made for seeing, then Beauty is its own excuse for being" — one feels the impulse to embrace the ag department and its helpful elves and kiss them on both cheeks.

However, beauty isn't the only benefit here. Those plant experts were interested in more than pretty blossoms. The three varieties were selected because they have root systems that will retard erosion, will reseed themselves and, in some cases, will provide feed for wildlife. Talk about beauty wedded to utility!

Only in assigning trade names to the commercial seed did the ag department fall down. Or maybe the blame rests with the companies that will market the varieties. Of course, the purpose here was not to improve on nature, since nature didn't name the flowers. Yesterday's humans did that. In coming up with trade names, today's humans lapsed into illiteracy.

Booby Trapped

The continuing grin on the face of the office male chauvinist could mean but one thing. He'd scored a point in that game about which James Thurber wrote so tellingly.

"Why, good surrah," a friend approached

Thickspike gayfeather

The purple prairie clover — the name is a word picture — becomes "Kaneb." Thickspike gayfeather — a lyric that should be set to music — is "Eureka." And pitcher sage will be marketed as "Nekan." Yecch. Poison ivy deserves better appellations than those.

Oh, well. Wildflowers, even tamed utilitarian ones, can be admired without being addressed. Since all three varieties are suited to the Midwest, including at least parts of Nebraska, there should be ample opportunity for admiration. With a little cooperation from man, their glory can spread and blanket the prairies.

in mock solemnity. "How now. What delighteth your innards?"

Ho, ho, ho, he ho-hoed. "My wife bet me on the Super Bowl and she picked Dallas. Ho ho ho ho."

"Oh, sure, you've got time for all that ... Well, I've been asking you to fix that leaky faucet for a week."

WORK IN AMERICA

... From the Rhythm of the Soil to a Shadow Process

By Robert L. Heilbroner

Professor of Economics,
New School for Social Research

For every people, work is a common shaping experience — the curse, the salvation, more rarely the joy, of everyday life. Certainly work has shaped American lives and thoughts, often more deeply than we are aware. "Man is what he eats," said the German philosopher Feuerbach. But man is also what he does, and in the changing experience of doing, Americans have profoundly altered the nature of their existences.

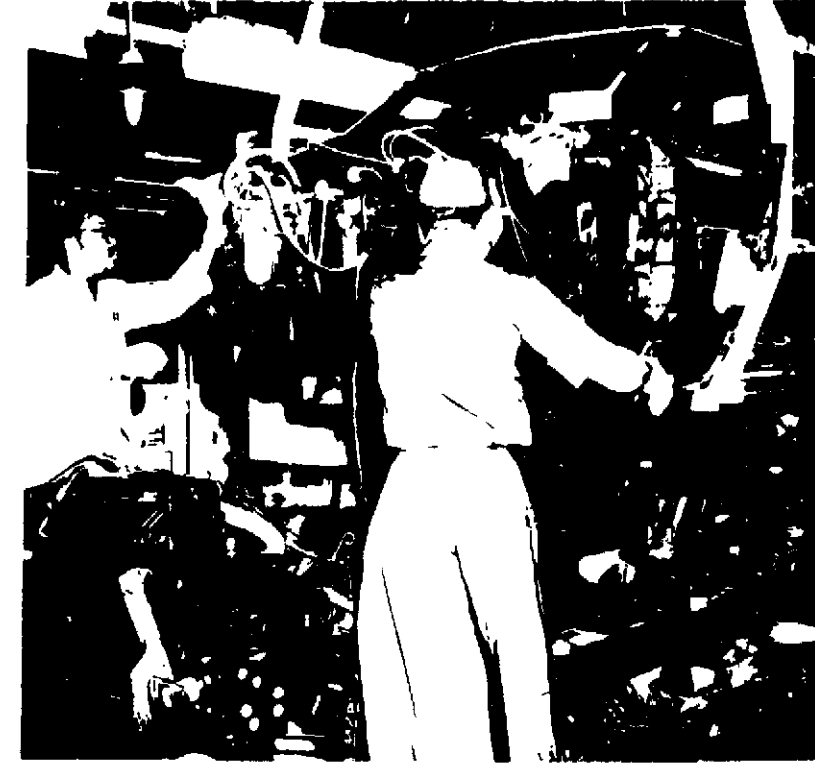

One of the main attractions of America, to the first colonists, was a chance to work. One historian has quoted a Marblehead fisherman as saying, "Our ancestors came here not for religion. Their main end was to catch fish."

They came also to ply a dozen trades whose names today sound quaint: wheelrights and smiths, coopers and joiners, drayers and saddlers. But mainly our ancestors came to work the soil. Even by 1815 only 10% of the people in the Northeast lived or worked in "urban" areas of 2,500 population or more, and a much smaller percentage in the South and West.

Thus the experience of work was indissolubly bound up with the rhythms of agriculture — sowing and reaping, busy seasons and slack ones. We look back with nostalgia on this "organic" quality of work, forgetting how bonecrushing were its tasks, how parochial its outlook. Today only one working person in 20 still comes into contact with the soil. We often fail to recognize how total was the change in our work experience from its agricultural origins, and how difficult that change was to bring about.

For when the first amateurish cotton mills were established — forerunners of the industrial America to come — their intrepid entrepreneurs had a hard time procuring a labor force willing to enter the mills.

The grim reputation of the mills had preceded their advent, frightening the farmers of New England as much as Thomas Jefferson who saw the "yeoman farmer" as the backbone of democracy. Moreover, unlike England, where sheer economic pressure forced men, women and children into the "dark satanic mills," in the relatively free and expansive United States, no such powerful recruiting agent could be relied upon. How, then, were the mills staffed?

The answer was finally provided by Francis Cabot Lowell, son of a comfortable Boston mercantile family, who recognized he could not run his powerloom mills without a steady work force. Accordingly, he set out to attract such a force by building dormitories, staffing them with house mistresses of unimpeachable reputation, and then scouring the countryside for young girls who would accept two or three years of mill work in exchange for a kind of finishing school education as well as wages.

The boarding system attracted the attention of reformers around the world. Charles Dickens came in 1842 and scrutinized the factory girls with care. "I cannot recall, or separate," he wrote in his "American Notes," "one young face that gave me a painful impression; not one young girl whom, assuming it to be a matter of necessity that she should gain her daily bread by the labour of her hands, I would have removed from those works if I could have."

The Lowell mills never employed more than a small fraction of America's work force, but they signaled a turning away from agricultural to industrial pursuits and introduced a new aspect to the national work experience. In 1810 only 75,000 persons were employed in manufacturing establishments of all kinds; but by 1840 the number was 10 times that; by 1900 it had again multiplied almost tenfold.

The process of industrialization is perhaps the most important theme in American economic history, but what interests us here is the effect that it had for the collective work experience of Americans.

For the Lowell mills were only a shortlived stage in a process whose next dramatic turn was exemplified by the emergence of another kind of mill — the great blaring plants of the steel industry that began to rise around Pittsburgh in the 1870s.

Here the technology of the new bessemer process, the driving pace set by steelmasters like Andrew Carnegie gave a wholly new face to the tasks of labor. "The lot of a skilled workman," said Carnegie, "is far better than that of the heir to an hereditary title, who is likely to lead an unhappy wicked life."

But Hamlin Garland, the novelist, saw a different side: "Everywhere the enormous sheds were pits gaping like the mouth of hell, and ovens omitting a terrible degree of heat ... one man jumps down, works desperately for a few minutes, and is then pulled up exhausted." Here the normal work day was 12 hours long, with a 24 hour stint every two weeks when the night and day gangs exchanged shifts.

Steelwork was not the "norm" of work experience in the last quarter of the 19th century any more than the Lowell mills had been in the first quarter. But the steel mill symbolized another attribute of work that stamped the American consciousness — the brutality of the work process. Yet the steel mill was only a milestone. Within a generation it had been replaced by yet another work milieu, the assembly line.

Henry Ford perfected the idea of moving work along before stationary workers, each of whom performed his specialized task on the work object. The object itself was raised to waist or shoulder height to prevent the time and energy lost in stooping. Each task was studied to see how it could be subdivided and simplified and thereby quickened.

And work? The sheer brutality of the steel mills was no longer evident: it was not an "efficient" way to organize work. With power tools and hydraulic lifts, conveyor belts and suspended tools, it did not take muscular strength to man many of the assembly line posts. It took the ability — or was it the resignation? — to perform identical tasks again and again.

A survey of the changing face of labor in America would not be complete without noting the emergence of "white collar work." Today, in the mid 1970s, almost three out of every four working Americans performs some kind of white collar job — selling, clerking, calculating, "pushing papers", teaching, administering.

Many white collar workers are no more than "factory workers" dressed in different garb and working in pleasanter surroundings. Some are highly skilled professionals, some are self-employed, some are harried drudges. Yet all white collar work is divorced from the contact with nature or with raw materials that is the very essence of work on the farm or in the factory. The experience of work has become curiously distanced from the physical objects that still constitute the underpinnings of what we call "wealth."

Thus the experience of work in America has changed, almost out of all recognition. More and more, work has become a kind of shadow process — a web of tasks through which we have to peer to discern the cultivation and extraction and shaping and transportation that still constitute the fundamental processes by which our society nourishes and sustains itself.

All this is part of a division of labor that now extends to every corner of our collective lives.

Focusing on Another 1st Amendment Freedom

By Dick Herman

Editorial Page Editor

Newspaper readers who may have received the idea recently the primary part of the First Amendment deals with the "freedom of the press" last week were served a potent reminder about another feature of The Great Amendment — freedom of speech.

Without so much as a single intramural quibble, the U.S. Supreme Court whacked off parts of New York state's fair campaign practices code. The Washington jurists didn't even bother writing an opinion. They merely affirmed the holding of three lower-court federal judges issued last summer.

In the national movement to be less uncivilized with each other and refrain from uttering what are sometimes called "fightin' words," the New York code was considered a forward step.

It said candidates for offices could not engage in "deliberate" misrepresentations. Fooey, the judges said. In much more scholarly phrases, of course.

The New York code empowered a board to spell out "specific prohibitions" against political campaign attacks "based on racial, religious or ethnic backgrounds." Nertz, the judges continued.

Well, what the judges really said was "Justification for such a sweeping prohibition rests on the assumption (these are) attributes which are completely unrelated to any candidate's fitness for office." Such an assumption is an exercise in self-decision ... It would be a retreat from reality to hold that voters do not consider race, religion, sex or ethnic background when choosing political candidates.

Furthermore, the judges hauled off, New York's well-motivated desire to squelch political misrepresentations could "cast a substantial chill" over campaign speech. "Free debate on public issues is essential to the survival of the Republic," the court said.

This is a kind of decision sometimes hailed by political liberals — until they, themselves, are grossly unfairly hit in rowdy, mud-slinging political campaigns.

Reforms and praised court decisions occasionally backfire. For example, the implementation of the one-man, one-vote doctrine throughout state legislatures transferred considerable political power not from rural precincts to central cities, but to suburban neighborhoods. And those tracts often are as conservative as the deepest boondocks.

An oft-quoted expression about free speech is that written by now-retired Justice William O. Douglas in 1949:

"A function of free speech under our system of government is to invite dispute. It may indeed best serve its high purpose when it induces a condition of unrest, creates dissatisfaction with conditions as they are or even stirs people to anger ... Freedom of speech, though not absolute ... is nevertheless protected against censorship or punishment, unless shown likely to produce a clear and present danger, of a serious substantive evil that rises far above public inconvenience, annoyance or unrest."

That Douglas quotation in support of almost-never-regulated free speech appeared last week in a Nebraska Supreme Court case.

The Douglas County Public Defender's office is appealing a $50 fine levied against an Omaha black man, John Guy, for "disrupting or disturbing" a meeting of the Omaha City Council one year ago.

Guy's conduct, according to the brief filed on his behalf, was such as not to qualify him for the year's Brotherhood Award. What he did was sound off, loudly, as an opponent of a pending rezoning ordinance.

SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Readers keep clamoring — if letters can clamor — for more columns on word usage and pronunciation, and I happened to think of a raffish contribution the other evening, when I was sitting on the dais at one of those book-and-author dinners.

Almost everybody calls it "dais." There must be something about the spelling of "dais" that repels people; maybe it doesn't sound like an English word.

Even program arrangers and college officials who have presided at many such events persist in rhyming the word with "bias." Not only that — they continue to confuse it with two other words.

"Dais," lectern, and "podium" are three quite different items, yet they are almost always used interchangeably. The distinctions are given quite clearly in the new book, "Harper Dictionary

The brief suggests Guy has been a frequent witness before the Omaha council through the years and the council was familiar with his style of rhetoric. As for the "disrupted" meeting, the brief says Guy "was asked by a member of his community, Mr. Snooky Grimes, to point out the problems and abuses suffered by his community in relation to past rezonings approved for the party the defendant referred to as a Jew landlord."

"... During his presentation, the defendant used some admittedly strong language, although the record is silent as to whether his rhetoric was any more or less disruptive, criminal or intentional as in the past."

Guy was warned to "cease and desist from that type of attack." Guy was told to depart.

When Councilman John Miller protested Guy was so loud a vote couldn't be taken, Guy was escorted from the room by a police officer and the council subsequently voted — with two dissents — to file disruption charges. According to the brief, there was neither violence displayed nor standard cuss words voiced.

How free or uncivil the speech, then, is the question to be posed to the Nebraska Supreme Court in coming months, in one of its more uncommon First Amendment cases.

of Contemporary Usage," by William and Mary Morris, "with a distinguished panel of language experts," of which I happen to be the least distinguished.

A dais is a raised platform on which a speaker, along with officers of the club or organization, sits or stands.

A podium is a special kind of dais in that it is intended to accommodate only one person, such as an orchestra conductor.

And the small stand on which a speaker rests his notes is a lectern, not a podium.

People are fond of saying, "Well, it doesn't matter what you call it, as long as others understand." But if the incorrect word is used, others don't understand — and speakers often ask for a lectern, only to have the engineer drag out a podium.

NBC came up with a new logo a few weeks ago after hiring a research company for what is reported to have been $750,000. It turned out to be the letter "N". Much to their horror and surprise, NBC big shots discovered the Nebraska Educational Television Network was using the same N which they had developed for less than $100. Everyone was laughing at NBC, but it's not very funny. Selecting a new logo is a very serious business as I discovered when I decided to change mine.

I went to Cratcher & Thumb, industrial designers. "The logo on my column seems old-fashioned and not up to date. I would like you to design a new one."

Cratcher said, "It's not going to be cheap."

"Money is no object. When someone changes his logo, he has to be prepared to pay for it."

Thumb said, "We may have to hire outside help. We only have 100 industrial designers on the payroll."

"I leave it in your hands. After all, you know your business."

Four months later we had the big meeting in Cratcher & Thumb's private screening room. Lights were dimmed and the first slide was flashed on the screen. It was a large A superimposed over a large B.

"How do you like it?" Cratcher asked.

"It's not bad. But is this the image we want to give? It seems to me the B dominates the A. Don't you think both letters should be the same size?"

"Yes, we do," said Thumb. "That's why we threw that one out and came up with this one." He buzzed for the next slide.

I studied it closely. Finally I said, "The A and the B are the same size, but they seem awfully small. There is so much white space around it. Editors hate white space of any kind. They're afraid someone in advertising might try to slip a classified ad into it."

"You're very observant," said Cratcher. "Thumb and I both caught that as soon as the artist showed it to us. So we came up with this radical idea which I'm sure will knock you dead."

The next slide just showed the letter B. "Where's the A?" I asked.

"That's just it," Thumb said. "Everyone is going to say where's the A? It will call attention to the logo and you'll double your readership."

Cratcher said, "Look at NBC. They have only an N. One-letter logos are the wave of the future."

"Well, why can't it be an A then instead of a B?"

"It can," said Thumb. "Cratcher and I and the entire staff all decided last week it should be an A instead of B."

The A came on the screen. "It looks just like an A," I said.

"Notice," said Thumb, "this isn't an ordinary A. The right leg is longer than the left leg."

"I think the left leg should be slightly longer than the right one. It gives me a running start."

"So did we. Here is a left-legged A. We tested it in 2,000 supermarkets and everyone knew it was you right away."

"Gosh, you fellows did a great job. What do I owe you?"

"Including the cost of the art materials, $635,000," Thumb said.

"Why," I said surprised, that's $100,000 less than NBC paid for its logo."

"That's because your name started with an A," Cratcher said. "The further along in the alphabet you go, the harder it is to design a letter."

Nebraska's Fourth Estate

Like it or not, land-use legislation is coming, says the Polk Progress, and in some form or other will be a part of the Nebraska farming picture by the year 2000.

"Authoritarian ownership of land is becoming a discredited practice," the editor writes. "In other words, because a man owns land he can do as he pleases with it is no longer acceptable..."

"Our democratic society was founded and developed on the basis of plenty. Two hundred years ago there was plenty — land, minerals, forests, water, wildlife — plus opportunities to exploit virgin territory. Now we face declining resources; our abundant material life has peaked and we are entering an era of less. This will be our democracy's most severe test."

"Land-use legislation is a recognition of this era of less. Our government must portion. Decisions must be made. We must trust. There must be a heritage for future generations."

"There must be clear flowing streams, forests, some wilderness, farmland, urban areas, room for wildlife to survive, space to breathe free, lakes, wetlands, mountains, distant horizons beckoning with hope, a seashore to contemplate, a wide prairie urging us to expand — to grow in knowledge and wisdom. We must insure the opportunity to marvel at the sight of a blossoming plum thicket, to hear the catbird sing, to experience the greening spring, the heat of summer, the colorful fall, and the cold white of winter."

"We want to live our allotted time on this unique planet and to help insure future generations a similar lifetime. We wish there had been land-use legislation a century ago. We have often wished we could have seen that sea of tall prairie grasses. It must have been an awesome sight. That grass was turned under by the plow with no thought of saving some for the future. In the name of production and profit we are still at it — destroying our natural heritage; exhausting it."

Action by the Legislature on malpractice insurance for physicians would be good medicine, says the Scotts Bluff Star-Herald.

If a law is not passed to help Nebraska doctors in their fight to keep up with rising malpractice insurance premiums, medical service will suffer, says the paper.

But, (it adds), a good insurance base for doctors might not only keep those Nebraska already has but also act as a magnet to attract doctors from states in which malpractice insurance premiums have become impossible to pay.

The York News-Times stands behind Indian Commission Executive Director Robert Mackey in his refusal to accept his "firing" by the commission. The commission voted 4-3 to fire Mackey, but since there are 15 members, even a vote of 7-0 probably would have meant little, the editor said.

Mackey seems to be a good administrator, says the editor, but "perhaps the best reason for retaining Mackey is the fact AIM leader Russell Means once called him an apple — red on the outside, white on the inside."

"Anyone placed in the position of arbitration must have that dual insight and the ability to understand two sides of a question."

The Grand Island Independent applauds the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College area board's decision to keep the Fairbury campus open.

The editor said the community colleges were built by local residents who decided to tax themselves, and any action by an area board to move such a campus (in this case to Beatrice) would be "a slap in the face" to those local taxpayers.

The Norfolk Daily News supports Scottsbluff Sen. William Nichol in his efforts to get a bill passed that would provide compensation for crime victims.

But, says the editor, such a bill should not relieve criminals from the obligation to pay back their victims.

The Alliance Times-Herald is against the so-called Sunshine Act.

Citing a stand taken by the Alliance City Council, the editor of the Times-Herald says he believes the law might just create more government "paper shuffling" and "we have too many paper shufflers now."

Ford Mixes Diplomacy, Politics to Woo Curtis

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

Washington — Despite reservations in the State Department and likely Senate rejection, President Ford has asked the Bahamas to accept Turner Shelton as the new U.S. ambassador — mainly to get a leg up on Ronald Reagan in the Republican presidential nomination race.

Shelton, who compiled a highly criticized record as ambassador to Nicaragua, is strongly backed by his close friend, Sen. Carl Curtis of Nebraska. Curtis, a senior conservative Republican still uncommitted in the Ford-Reagan contest, could Without announcement, Ford three weeks ago requested an "agreement" from the Bahamas, the prerequisite for sending any ambassadorial nomination to the Senate. There has been no answer. Some officials feel — and hope — the answer will be no.

OPINIONS

A reason, besides Shelton's Nicaragua performance, was his record in the Bahamas from 1966 to 1970 as consul general when today's Bahamian government officials were black nationalists awaiting independence. They accuse Shelton of ignoring them in favor of what a Senate critic called "the white power structure."

Bank Regulation Examined

By Lee Mitgang

New York (AP) — Two congressional committees say that they are about to investigate just how effectively federal bank examiners have been keeping watch on the nation's banks and whether their findings should remain concealed from the public.

A spokesman for the House subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer and Monetary Affairs, headed by Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., said that panel will be calling as witnesses James E. Smith, the U.S. comptroller of the currency, as well as representatives of First National City Bank and Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's No. 2 and 3 banks.

Analysis

muttee about "his failure to do a vigorous job on bank regulation."

Those hearings were announced this past week as The Washington Post published a series of articles — quoting from highly confidential bank examinations reports — that Chase and Citibank had been placed on the U.S. Comptroller's so-called "problem list" of banks that have enough questionable loans outstanding to require more scrutiny by the government.

Laws Devised in '30's

This was no ordinary news leak. Under national banking laws devised during the 1930s, when one of the great fears of lawmakers was a run on the banks, it is a federal crime to reveal the contents of the bank examinations conducted routinely by the government's 2,000 examiners.

These laws still have the blessing of bankers, Wall Street figures and some government officials, who believe that the public would not understand the reports and might react to them hysterically. They also believe, that if a bank is in real trouble, it can only straighten itself out if it is sheltered from storms of publicity that public bank examinations would create.

"The reports are supposed to be looking for things that are wrong with the banks. It is not supposed to be a balanced report. It's something we understand, but the public doesn't," said a spokesman for one of the two banks mentioned in the Post article who asked not to be identified.

"If tomorrow the government started revealing these reports, it would be bad news. The public has absolutely no perspective on these numbers. They don't know what to conclude," says Warren Marcus, a bank analyst for Salomon Brothers.

Other Wall Street and banking sources said that the general industry reaction was that the hard numbers in The Post articles last week were well-known, at least by those who know banking. But they were shocked by the fact that an examination report had been leaked and made public.

Not All Bad

Not everyone thought the leak was such a bad thing, however. Robert Dugger, a staff aide to the House subcommittee, says, "It's the subcommittee's view that disclosure is the better policy. Under the current system, investors are uninformed, the public is uninformed, and banks are left free to engage in risky practices with the knowledge that the federal government will keep their secrets and bail them out."

What actually happened as a result of the leak?

The public learned that Chase and Citibank had joined about 200 other banks on a list kept by the comptroller as having questionable loans equal to 65% of cash-on-hand. This isolated statistic by no means meant that either was in danger of going under, Comptroller Smith, the banks and The Post were quick to point out.

As a rule of thumb no more than 10 or 12% of that 65% ratio of questionable loans — much of that in real estate loans — could be realistically classified as unrecoverable, analysts said.

Despite the long-standing fears that revelations like those in The Post would lead to misunderstanding and overreaction by the public, a Chase spokesman said last week, "There's been no run on the banks. There's been no indication that depositors were acting on this news."

Viets Impress McGovern With Forgiving Attitude

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Sen. George McGovern said Saturday the Vietnamese have assured him they will make every effort to "secure all possible information" about U.S. soldiers missing in action and that the remains of two U.S. Marines killed in the final phase of the war will be returned as soon as identification is completed.

He added that he was told that Americans stranded in Saigon will be allowed to leave soon.

He also said that the leaders of North and South Vietnam want to "forget the past" and establish normal friendly relations with the United States. McGovern made the assessment after ending a five-day visit to Hanoi and Saigon, becoming the first American congressman to go to both Vietnams since the end of the war last year.

"What startled me — what most impressed me the most — was their forgiving attitude," the South Dakota Democrat said in a telephone interview from Bombay, where he stopped over briefly after flying in from Hanoi.

"Every person and leader I talked with both in the North and the South said they are eager to establish normal relations with the United States," he said. "They also expressed an eagerness for American trade and American reconstruction assistance."

McGovern said that during a visit to Saigon on Thursday and Friday Foreign Minister Nguyen Thi Binh had told him that two Americans — James Klassen, a Menonite social worker, and Joseph Brickman, who was not otherwise identified — would be able to leave for the United States shortly.

"I gave Madame Binh a list of about 50 Americans and dependents when we met for a working dinner Thursday evening and by Friday noon I was told that these two men had been located.

"Madame Binh also said that as a direct result of my visit she is going to accelerate steps to arrange for the transportation and departure of Americans and dependents remaining in Saigon who wish to leave."

The South Vietnamese also will return the remains of two U.S. Marines killed during the final evacuation of Saigon last April as soon as final identification is completed, McGovern said he was told by Mrs. Binh.

McGovern said he met and had talks with the key leaders of the two Vietnams during his stay, including North Vietnamese Premier Pham Van Dong.

He said Dong had given him a personal assurance that the North Vietnamese "are making every reasonable effort now to secure all possible information on Americans missing in action."

McGovern said the Vietnamese "are interested in rebuilding their country and in establishing relations with the United States. That was the constant, recurring theme in my talks with them."

"Premier Pham Van Dong said they are willing to start talking right now about establishing normal relations with us."

McGovern said he was given no official message to carry to President Ford. "But they asked me to assure my colleagues in Congress and in the administration and to tell the American people they want friendly relations with us. They stressed that even in the past they were always willing to be friends and that they never had any animosity toward the American people and admired our ideals."

McGovern said he and his wife toured both Hanoi and Saigon. In Hanoi, he said they saw parts of the city that had suffered great damage during the war and that were being repaired.

McGovern said he found Saigon, which he previously visited in 1965 and 1971, a lively city with "all the characteristics of a San Francisco or a New Orleans."

"The city is flourishing," he said. "It's a much gay and happier city now than it was when I was there before."

"You don't see the military vehicles or the military presence. All surface indications are that the people are happy and relaxed."

"The most serious problem is unemployment, including finding work for one million members of Thieu's army in the labor market."

McGovern said that the former American Embassy in Saigon was being guarded by a few Vietnamese and "it seemed to be in good order," it was still unoccupied, he added.

McGovern and his wife leave Bombay early today for Rome, where they will remain until flying back to Washington on Tuesday.

Before going to Vietnam, McGovern visited Portugal and then went to Pakistan, India and Bangladesh in his capacity as chairman of the Senate's Subcommittee on the Near East and South Asia.

HEW Softens Spanking Order

Washington (UPI) — Apologizing for "any inconvenience caused," the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) said Saturday it is sharply reducing the scope of a student spanking order issued last summer to the nation's public schools.

The original order required all 16,000 U.S. public school systems to keep detailed records on student punishment. It touched off a controversy, with some critics charging HEW was trying to tell schools how to discipline students.

In softening that directive, the

Reward Offered For Big Bird

San Antonio, Tex. (UPI) — An Abilene, Tex., oil man Saturday offered $5,000 for capture of the South Texas "Big Bird."

Jack Grimm — who describes himself as a geologist, amateur poker player, film maker and earth scientist — said his interest in offering the reward was to keep the bird alive and prevent bounty hunters from capturing protected birds in their search for Big Bird.

Big Bird is the name given a creature with dimensions similar to an automobile which South Texans recently reported sighting gliding silently at night.

Persons who claimed to have seen the bird said it had a wing span of 15 feet or more and rumors flourished that the creature was from space or that it had a face like a monkey, bat or human.

KRIO radio, McAllen, Tex., already offered a $1,000 reward for the live capture of the bird. Wildlife officials expressed concern rare endangered birds would be harmed in the quest for the reward.

Grimm said to earn his reward, captors of the creature would have to have it certified by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept. as "having a wingspread in excess of 15 feet and be a species not heretofore identified — or a species thought to be extinct."

If a bounty hunter brings an endangered brown pelican or other species into a wildlife office, he would be subject to a fine up to $5,000 and one year in jail.

"The bird has no value to us dead," Grimm said. "I'm a geologist and things like this have always interested me. My main concern is to preserve the creature, if it exists, and protect it."

Grimm said his offer of $5,000 would expire within 90 days and if Big Bird were captured he would donate it to a zoo or sanctuary.

Several persons already were hunting nightly in the valley for Big Bird before the latest reward was offered.

One or More Too Many Fred in Bed Is Red

Lyndney, England (UPI) — Fred Spiby had one too many at the party, so his wife left without him. Then Fred Spiby had one or two more too many.

When he lurched home to his street in Lyndney, England, which is lined with identical houses, befuddled Fred was a bit annoyed. The door key didn't fit.

"I thought my wife had barred all the doors to keep me out," Spiby, 26, told a magistrate last week. So he broke a window, climbed in, took off his shoes and "tipped upstairs to bed."

Enter Irene Jupp, the Spibys' next-door neighbor — herself out late. On the stairs she found a strange pair of shoes, and in her bed — was Fred.

"I was annoyed at first," Mrs.

Jupp said. "But now I can see the funny side of it."

Magistrates didn't laugh much. They fined Spiby $10 for breaking the window and ordered him to pay $64 in costs and compensation.

"I've never been as drunk as that before," Spiby said. "I was terribly embarrassed," said Rosina Spiby. "But I've forgiven him now."

Cash Benefits

Washington (UPI) — Under Social Security insurance programs, monthly cash benefits replace some of the earnings lost because of retirement, disability or death.

department said extensive record-keeping now will be required only at the 3,000 elementary and high school systems that have 90% of the nation's minority students and will not take effect until the school year starting next fall.

At the same time, however, HEW increased the complexity of other disciplinary records required at all schools receiving federal aid — a category covering most of the 16,000 public districts and some private schools.

Those less-detailed requirements called for numerical statistics on the race and sex of students disciplined to help in enforcing laws prohibiting federal aid to schools that practice discrimination.

HEW said schools now must include new racial information showing whether disciplined students are American Indian or Alaskan native; Asian or Pacific Islander; black, not of hispanic origin; hispanic; or white, not of hispanic origin. Previous racial designations were less specific.

The revised policy lists five disciplinary measures the 3,000 high-minority school systems must record — expulsion, suspension, spanking and padding, and transfer to another class or school.

Newsprint Agreement Reached

Chicago (UPI) — Four newsprint companies and the Canadian Paper Workers' Union ended their four-month long strike Saturday and signed a new labor contract, the Chicago Tribune reported. The agreement was reached between negotiators for the union and the four companies: Quebec Northshore Paper Co. Ltd., Reed Paper Co., MacLaren Paper Co., and Dom Tar Paper Co. To become effective the settlement must be approved by the 3,500 striking workers in ratification votes on Monday and Tuesday.

Nixon Defends Wiretapping

(c) New York Times

Los Angeles — Richard Nixon, according to associates of the former president, testified in a closed session in San Clemente that he never personally selected the persons to be wiretapped by the FBI in 1969 to find the sources of leaks of information. Nixon, his associates said, strongly defended his decision to use wiretapping to find the government officials who were allegedly leaking national security information to the press. He reportedly said he had left the selection of the persons to be wiretapped to Henry Kissinger, then his assistant for national security affairs. His testimony, these sources said, appears to contradict a sworn statement by Kissinger, made public earlier last week.

Communications Satellite Launched

Cape Canaveral, Fla. (UPI) — A communications satellite aimed at bringing television and telephones to primitive Canadian Indians and Eskimos blasted off the launch pad Saturday night. The satellite was reported in its planned orbit and all appeared to be well.

Explosion Rips Aerosol Plant

Cumberland, R.I. (AP) — "When I got to the window, there was no wall left. It just blew me right through," said Norman Brule. Brule was one of at least 27 persons working in the Peterson-Puritan Aerosol spray plant when an explosion ripped through the building Saturday, tossing chunks of cement 20 feet from the one-story building. Twenty workers were injured, seven critically, authorities said. Much of the interior of the building was demolished and two outside walls were knocked flat.

British Soldier Killed

Belfast (AP) — Three youths pushed their way through a line of people at an army checkpoint in a Londonderry shopping center Saturday and opened fire on British soldiers, killing one and injuring two others, officials reported. The killers then escaped in the crowd, authorities said. Meanwhile, a bomb exploded in a Belfast tavern patronized by Roman Catholics, killing two persons and injuring 18, and the body of a man who had been executed was found in south Belfast.

White House Intruder Arrested

Washington (AP) — A 33-year-old man climbed over a White House fence Saturday but was quickly arrested on the south grounds by security police, the Secret Service said. Ken Lynch, a spokesman for the Secret Service, reported that Joseph Cruz, a native of San Juan, Puerto Rico, scaled the fence at about noon, was quickly spotted and was taken into custody. Cruz was turned over to District of Columbia police and charged with unlawful entry, Lynch said. Cruz' motive in climbing over the fence was not immediately known. Cruz was not armed, a Secret Service spokesman said.

Rows of comic books are a common sight nowadays with more than 200 million sold each year at prices ranging from 25¢ to $1.50.

Super Human Traits Revealed

Comics Are Big Business

Los Angeles (AP) — Loki, God of Evil, is about to destroy an entire city. Not far away, Antman is fuming while he waits in his rocket car for the Wasp, his girlfriend.

"I don't know why you have to powder your nose every time we have a mission," Antman snaps as they finally speed away to defeat Loki.

In case you haven't guessed, Antman, Loki and the Wasp are comic book characters, part of a stable belonging to Marvel Comics, the world's largest seller of comic books.

Comic books are big business. More than 200 million are sold in the United States each year at prices ranging from 25¢ for a single issue to $1.50 for multi-story editions. Comic book conventions attract thousands of collectors each year, and first editions of some comics sell for thousands of dollars.

Human Qualities

Marvel publisher Stan Lee, whose Spiderman character has overtaken Superman as the biggest selling superhero, says the human qualities of his protagonists endear them to readers. Lee, who started in comics in 1939, cites Spiderman as an example.

"People can relate to him because he's so human. He means well but things go wrong. He's fighting a villain and his costume tears. He once was on the Ed Sullivan show and made a thousand dollars performing, but then realized he couldn't cash the check because he didn't have an account in the name of Spiderman and couldn't reveal his true identity."

Lee has written two books chronicling the increasing popularity of comic books, "Origins of Marvel Comics" and, of course, "Son of Origins of Marvel Comics." In them he explains such things as how he came up with the name "Thor, God of Thunder."

"It was short, easy to remember, and if you lisped nobody would know," Lee quipped in an interview.

Craze Began in 1961

Lee said the comic book craze began in 1961, when he was turning out such classics as "X'm, the Creature Who Swallowed the Earth" and "Thomgorr, the Anti-Social Alien." Lee created a squad of superheroes called "The Fantastic Four" and sales skyrocketed.

"The Fantastic Four heralded a new style of costumed superheroes — heroes plagued with the problems that torment us all: money worries, romantic hangups, feelings of inadequacy, jealousy, vanity and fear," said Lee.

Today, Marvel sells more than 75 million comics annually, with the antics of Spiderman, The Fantastic Four and Thor reprinted in 30 languages. Next is D.C. comics, with sales of about 45 million, much of it from Superman, and Archie Comics, purveyors of Archie, Jughead and other perennial adolescents.

Movie, Too

Marvel licenses the use of their copyrighted characters to firms making T-shirts, toys, games, puzzles, soap and vitamins. The company, a division of New Jersey conglomerate Cadence Industries, is also producing a full-length movie on Spiderman.

Marvel has a permanent staff of about 40 people in its New York office, but uses scores of freelancers to turn out its 80 different characters. A single comic book takes about a month to complete, Lee said. An Illinois printing company produces virtually all of the comic industry's output.

Despite Marvel's success, Lee complains that people don't take comic books as seriously as they should.

"A comic can be a great artistic creation," he said. "The comic book is one of the great, unexplored mediums in the world."

Aid to Reader

Lee claims comics can help problem readers because the artwork keeps them interested and aids them in understanding the text.

The 52-year-old publisher also dismisses complaints about violence in comic books.

"Violence is a subjective thing," he said. "Who would want to read about a terrible old lady who takes children and burns them in an oven? But that's the plot of Hansel and Gretel. We turn away from violence in our books."

Thirty-seven years in the comic book business has left Lee with a few personal preferences regarding his creations.

"One of my many pet peeves has always been the young, teen-aged sidekick of the average superhero," he said. "If yours truly was a superhero, there's no way I'd pal around with some freckle-faced teenager. At the very least, people would begin to talk."

Albert: TV Lacks Judgment On Presidential Air Time

Washington (UPI) — House Speaker Carl Albert charged Saturday the television networks use "little or no news judgment" when a president seeks air time for a speech but give "rigorous" consideration to Democratic party requests.

The networks denied the charges.

The Oklahoma Democrat said a Library of Congress study shows in the past decade the three commercial TV networks — ABC, CBS, NBC — "provided simultaneous coverage of the President on almost every occasion that he has sought to deliver a nationwide television address."

"Being keenly aware of the rigorous news judgment applied by the networks to requests by the Democratic leadership for air time, I wanted to know whether or not the networks applied the same kind of judgment to presidential requests," Albert said.

"I must conclude that the networks have exercised little or no news judgment when considering presidential requests for air time for television addresses."

Network Denials

Richard Wald, president of NBC News, said: "NBC presents live coverage of presidential addresses when the President — regardless of party affiliation — has something important to say to the American people as the chief executive. In each case, we exercise our independent news judgment."

William Lord, ABC Washington Bureau chief, said: "In the past, when the President requested air time we assume that it was in the national interest to grant it, but we are looking more closely at it since that Kansas City speech."

Lord's reference was to President Ford's Oct. 15, 1974, speech to the Future Farmers of America convention in Kansas City. After the networks declined to cover it live, the Albert report said, Ford requested air time "and all three networks immediately reversed themselves and complied."

CBS News President Richard Salant said Ford's Kansas City speech and one by President Johnson were the only two CBS challenged on grounds of questionable "newsworthiness."

Salant said CBS policy since June 1973 has been to make time available to the opposition when the President makes a TV speech "over which there was significant national disagreement."

Lord called Albert "the No. 1 offender when it comes to offered air time" because of the speaker's refusal to visit the House television gallery and comment on issues of the day.

Major News Event

But a spokesman for Albert said his criticism had to do with major news events, not day-to-day stories. He said the Democrats have asked for simultaneous air time on the three networks 11 times since 1969 but have gotten it only three times.

The report said during the Eisenhower, Kennedy and early Johnson years the networks "occasionally declined" presidential requests but "during the latter years of the Johnson administration through the Nixon and into the Ford presidency a pattern emerges of the networks almost always making television airtime available when presidents have sought it."

"From January 1966 through December 1975, Presidents, Johnson, Nixon and Ford sought simultaneous television network time to address the nation on 45 identifiable occasions and received it 44 of those times from all three networks," the report said.

Economic Crimes Get FBI Attention

(c) Newhouse News Service Washington — The FBI now considers white collar crime one of its three top problems. Along with battles against organized crime and terrorists, special attention will focus on fraud, embezzlement, bribery, conflict of interest, antitrust and perjury.

These white collar crimes, which some officials believe should more properly be labeled "economic crimes," cost the country an estimated $40 billion annually. The FBI is investigating 25% more crimes in these areas than they were five years ago. Almost 3,500 persons were convicted in fiscal year 1975 in cases investigated by the FBI, a 15% jump from the previous fiscal year.

Abortion Issue

Opponents and supporters of abortion arrive in the capital this week to mark the third anniversary of the Supreme Court decision making the procedure a matter to be decided by a woman and her physician.

Abortion foes, rallying on Capitol Hill and across the street from the White House on Thursday, will distribute red roses that are the symbol of their campaign to overturn the court ruling through a constitutional amendment.

Advocates of legalized abortion will focus their effort on a Wednesday news conference called by the Religious Coalition for Abortion Rights.

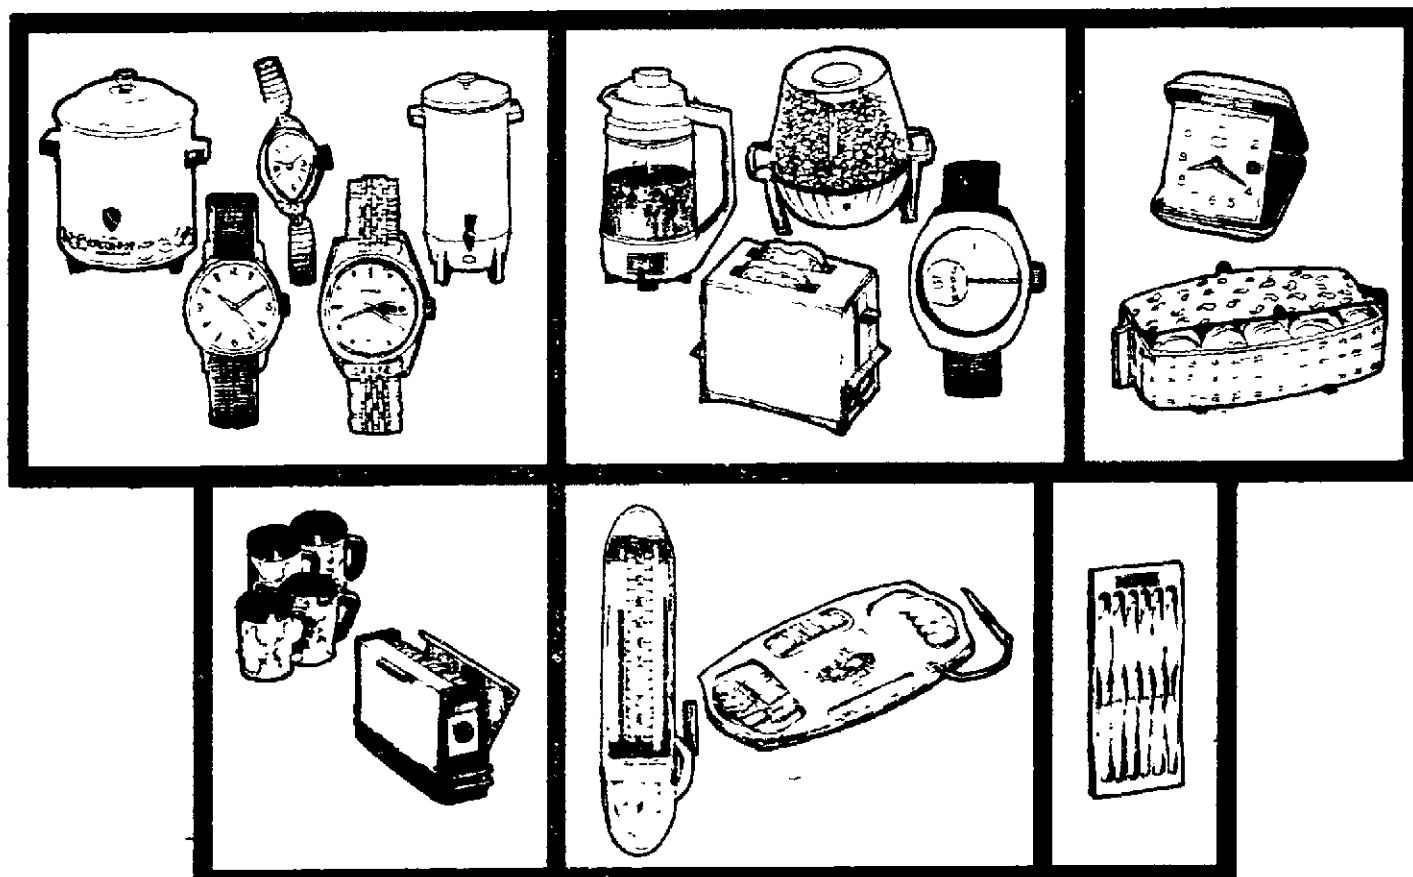

Not Cheapest

If you ever get invited to a White House function, eat hearty because it's costing a young fortune.

White House press secretary Ron Nessen estimates it costs upwards of $3 per person just for cookies and punch, $9-10 per person if drinks and hors d'oeuvres are served. He does not estimate what it costs for breakfast, brunch, lunch or dinner, but comments: "This is not the cheapest hall to hire."

American Influence In World Uncertain

By George Gallup
Princeton, N.J. — Against a backdrop of debate concerning the direction and character of American foreign policy, the U.S. public is divided over the question of whether American power in the world will increase or decline. At the same time, there is widespread agreement that the influence of Russia and China will increase.

While 42% of the public feels American strength will increase during 1976, about the same number, 44%, believes it will decline.

However, nearly two-thirds of Americans expect both Chinese (65%) and Russian (63%) power to grow. Both figures represent the largest proportion of Americans expecting either Chinese or Russian strength to increase since these surveys were initiated in the early '60s.

The uncertainty of Americans concerning the expansion of U.S. power is shared by citizens of our closest allies West Germany, Britain, Canada, Switzerland and Sweden.

While Americans are most likely to predict increasing influence for the Chinese and Russians, this view is generally shared in the other nations surveyed.

This question was asked to determine attitudes toward American power during 1976:

"Which of these do you think is likely to be true of 1976: a year when America will increase her power in the world, or a year when American power will decline?"

6 Guilty Verdicts Returned

Psychiatric Data Discussed Most By Simants Jury

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

North Platte — The foreman of a Lincoln County District Court jury that convicted Erwin Charles Simants of six murder charges Saturday said the most discussed aspect of the case was its contradictory psychiatric evidence.

"With three expert witnesses testifying the defendant was not insane and two saying he was, it seemed kind of odd to us," said Richard M. Anderson. "We finally came to the conclusion the lay opinions were just as good as the psychiatrists'."

Anderson, a North Platte insurance adjuster, said at least three votes were taken on each of the six counts. The first, which came Friday night during the jury's first 2½ hours of deliberations, elicited 10 ballots of guilty and two of innocent by reason of insanity. At least one other vote was 11-1.

"There were emotions up there," said Anderson of the deliberations in the Lincoln county courthouse. "We had an excellent jury, people who were really interested in how the law would apply."

Verdict at 10:32

The seven women and five men came to agreement at 10:32 a.m. after 4½ hours of deliberation. Simants, a 30-year-old laborer, admitted in a tape-recorded interrogation that he shot to death six members of the Henry Kellie family of Sutherland on Oct. 18, but he pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

Interestingly, Anderson voted alone in an unusual straw vote taken informally by Judge Hugh Stuart after the 18-minute session at which the verdicts were read.

Stuart, who triggered a free press-fair trial controversy of national proportions by invoking a gag order on pretrial press coverage, asked whether the jurors felt they could have been impartial had they been aware that Simants had made statements of confession. Anderson said yes, nine jurors no and two did not respond.

11-1 Negative Note

The vote was 11-1 in the negative when Stuart asked if they could have remained impartial had the defendant's taped confession been publicized. That recording, played during the trial, was a key item of prosecution evidence.

In an impromptu press conference following Saturday's court session, Anderson explained that because of his occupation as an insurance adjuster, he "has learned to go on facts rather than hearsay."

The foreman said that to his knowledge the gag order controversy was never discussed by any of the jurors.

Half-apologizing for his order to sequester them during the trial, Stuart got apparently unanimous agreement from the jurors that his action was proper. No straw vote was taken on this matter, however.

Noting that this was the first time he has sequestered a jury, the judge said his intention was to protect its members from both exposure to outside influences and from personal harassment. He said he has been receiving letters on the case from all over the United States.

Controversy Expected

Stuart said he anticipates some controversy over the sequestering order within his own profession. But, he said, he still prefers the jury system, even if sequestering is sometimes necessary, to verdicts from the bench.

"Anytime you do anything different in a court of law," Stuart commented, "you're going to get shot at."

United Press International reported that juror Gertrude A. Black, a North Platte housewife with two grown children, said the color photographs of the victims "did disturb me."

'We Had To ...'

"Nobody liked to do this (convict Simants)," Mrs. Black said. "It was a matter of justice. We had to do this."

After the jury had been excused, defense attorney Leonard Vyhalek said: "The verdict is in. What more can I say?"

Chief prosecutor Marvin Holscher said: "I feel justice was done."

Independent publisher Clark said it wasn't the first time that Judge Dixon has taken "capricious action" to take advertising out of that newspaper. Clark said he doesn't contemplate any further proceedings in the contempt matter "at this time."

Relatively Calm

Initially appointed as Hall County Judge in February, 1965 to fill out an unexpired term, Dixon at 26 was one of the youngest — if not the youngest — of the state's county judges.

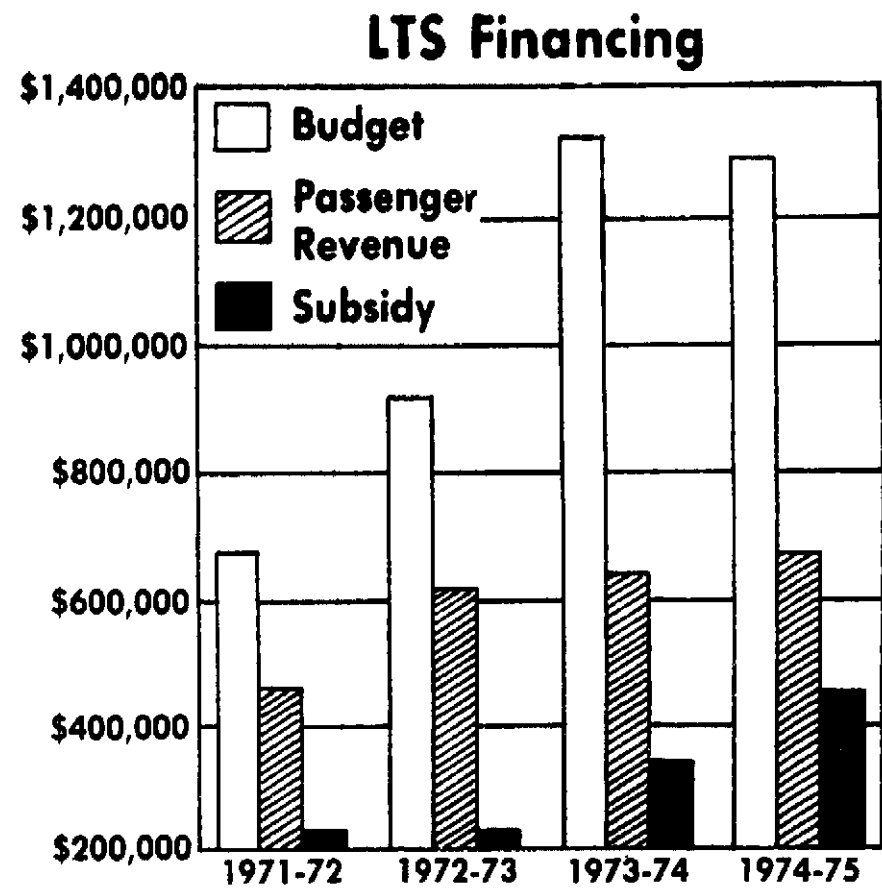

The bulk of his years on the bench, during which he was reelected in 1968 and 1972, were relatively calm ones. But shortly after he started his present four year term, he began establishing water marks in what might be considered a rising tide of eyebrow raisers:

- His threat in the spring of 1973 to withhold fees collected by his office from the state treasurer unless legislative steps were taken to provide necessary funds to run the district county courts in Nebraska.

Judge Dixon, who had charged that Gov. J. J. Exon and the Unicameral had not accurately reported the true picture of the situation to the people, said the withholding became unnecessary because the Legislature "came through with the funds."

- His August, 1974 declaration that Grand Island's parking meter laws were unconstitutional.

Dollar Road Bumpy For Lincoln Buses

By Warren Weber

City Hall's take-over of the bus operation here was a governmental shot of penicillin to the ailing bus lines.

Although medical charts show a marked improvement, the city bus system still is undergoing therapeutic treatment.

Experts believe it may never be completely well because while the Lincoln Transportation System (LTS) is improving its service and hauling more passengers, it keeps on rolling into debt.

Federal, state and city subsidies are keeping the municipal bus operation off the deathbed and chances are that it will continue to be a money loser, at least during the immediate future.

Public Service

City Councilwoman Sue Bailey says the city's bus system should be viewed as a public service and not a money making or break-even operation.

"We have to accept the fact that LTS probably will always have to be subsidized," she says.

It's something of a circle, she says. "We have to spend money to increase ridership to make money to improve the system."

Transportation planners say buses

probably will remain as Lincoln's primary mode of public transit for the near future since the city isn't large enough to support or financially justify another form of public transportation, such as a monorail or subway system.

Lip Service

Although much lip service is given to the use of public transit as both an energy saver and a tool for reducing traffic congestion, transportation planners don't envision a large increase in bus ridership over the next 25 years.

It's estimated that 2% of the total trips people take from one point to another here are made via the bus system and it's predicted that by the year 2000 that figure will increase to 4%.

Although 4% is a doubling of the present usage of the transit system, it's still far short of any notion of a major usage of buses for getting about the city.

The question of bus ridership is something of a sore point with City Councilman Bob Sikyta.

Sikyta says the city and LTS board should take a hard look at bus routes and search for innovative ways to increase ridership.

Primary Point

He says most bus routes are geared to the downtown area, which is the primary point of transfer from one route to another.

Since not everyone has a need to go downtown, there should be other transfer points coupled with an expansion of routes to serve other major employment areas and activity centers such as schools, Sikyta says.

Sikyta says he wants downtown Lincoln to continue receiving the best available bus service and doesn't want to detract from the commercial and business district.

The point is there are other areas that need improved bus service, he says, and steps should be taken to see that those transportation needs are met.

'Simple Enough'

Sikyta says he believes there isn't going to be a significant increase in bus usage unless

Is Double Trouble Haunting 2-County Judge E. E. Dixon?

By Bill Kreifeld

C stands for county, as in county court. C stands for controversies, as in rather commonplace.

C, therefore, might also stand for Edward E. Dixon, District County Judge of Hall and Howard Counties — a man who, it appears at least, stands for those same things.

With outspoken candor, Judge Dixon, 37, acknowledges that his tenure on the bench has been marked by a larger amount of controversy than normally expected at his station in jurisprudence.

And he concedes that he has stirred some of that bucket himself.

"But," he says, "that's just the way I am. I don't do it deliberately. It's just my own makeup."

The latest hubbub in which Judge Dixon found himself as a pivot point involved contempt citations he issued against a Grand Island auto firm and the Grand Island Daily Independent newspaper.

That action stemmed from an ad placed in the Independent by Diers Motor Co. which said, "Don Diers goes free; judge orders instructed verdict of not guilty; says if anyone should be on trial, it would be Diers' competitors for overpricing their cars and service work."

Citation Dropped

Judge Dixon subsequently dropped the citation against Diers, and last week, District Judges Donald Weaver and Lloyd W. Kelly Jr. upheld a writ of prohibition stopping any contempt proceedings against Independent publisher Ralph Clark.

Judge Dixon calls that District Court action "a slap in the face — a discourtesy that it even went to a hearing."

"I was going to dismiss it (the contempt citation), and would have told them so if they had asked," Dixon said.

He said he had to request a Tuesday hearing at which he said he planned to drop the contempt action and tried to explain that he had brought it in the first place because "people were calling my office about the ad — to see if a judge would really do that."

Did Something

"It reflected on the integrity of the court, so I had to do something."

Dixon said that while he now considers the matter closed, "I don't like it when the ship starts to go down and all of the sailors leave it and I'm left standing naked and alone."

He said he has never heard of such action by a district court toward a lower court before, observing "Perhaps personality conflicts (with Judges Weaver and Kelly) are part of the problem."

Judges Weaver and Kelly declined to comment on Dixon's remarks.

By Tom Cook

Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Fremont — At 9:32 a.m. Jan. 10, an explosion shattered the crisp, winter air in Fremont. It would drive the community to the depths of sorrow and to the tragic heights of heroism.

What started out as a quiet Saturday ended with the explosion and fire that destroyed the Pathfinder Hotel leaving behind 18 dead.

In a matter of minutes, the community was united in a frantic battle to save those still trapped in the blaze and to care for the injured.

The battle would soon involve the resources of county and state government and prove the worth of community disaster training.

Already on Duty

Fire Chief Howard Schneider had taken his wife to a doctor's appointment when the blast hit. He phoned the station and immediately left for the scene.

"We have a force of 29 people and a volunteer force of approximately 75. Most of these people were on duty when I arrived," he said.

Screams of anguish and calls for help mingled with the smoke that billowed from the hotel, which had many elderly occupants.

Firefighters entered the building wherever possible to escort victims to safety and used their own equipment as well as cherry pickers from the city's Department of Utilities and Parks Dept. to rescue about 20 persons trapped on upper floors of the six-story building.

The tragic death toll could have climbed much higher but for the heroic efforts of those fighting the blaze, Schneider said.

'Yeoman's Job'

Schneider cited as an example of the tremendous community response to the disaster the efforts of retired Fremont Fire Captain William Stratman, who was asked by the chief to coordinate the use of the Omaha aerial ladder.

"He left before I could thank him. He did a yeoman's job — he's still a firefighter," Schneider said in a broken voice.

The fire was extinguished by 3 p.m.

Saturday, the chief said, and workers searched the rubble in the gutted and dangerous structure until Thursday.

Fremont Police Chief Fred Whitt was finishing a cup of coffee before leaving for the office when he felt the force of the explosion, which was across the street from the police station.

"When I got there, I helped some woman through the door and the assistant chief met me and said 'Chief, can you get some stretchers?' I didn't have time to stick my nose out the door for about eight hours," he said.

'No One Knows'

The dispatcher had already initiated emergency operations notifying the Dodge County Sheriff, State Patrol and the Memorial Hospital of Dodge County.

"I'm sure no one person knows exactly what happened after the explosion," Whitt said. "Everybody was here before we had time to think."

The police, sheriff's office and State Patrol quickly cordoned off the area and directed traffic to allow the flotilla of fire and rescue units that poured into the city to get to the scene of the disaster. They also insured speedy access to and from the hospital.

The police set up a command post and issued tags, which limited access to the hotel area to emergency personnel, news media and civilians with emergency requests.

Chief Whitt said this prevented unnecessary confusion. He said some individuals carrying cameras tried to pose as newsmen to get closer to the scene of the tragedy.

The State Patrol was soon at the scene with their Bluebird van to provide emergency communication and a self-contained command post.

About 20 State Patrol officers took over routine surveillance of the city to relieve police for duty at the scene.

Gov. J. J. Exon called in the National Guard, which took posts around the downtown area to prevent looting or injury to curious sightseers.

Dentist Praised

County Atty. F. A. Gossett began to reconstruct events in the hotel at the time of the explosion to determine who might have been trapped in the building.

He praised local dentist Larry Gausman and the State Patrol Identification team for their efforts in identifying victims of the tragedy.

"I don't know what we'd have done without Dr. Gausman," Gossett said.

By 9:40 a.m., the disaster plan at the Memorial Hospital of Dodge County was in full swing.

Hospital officials requested the local radio station to recall all medical personnel to duty, and within 30 minutes most of the community's 21 physicians were on duty.

Communications were established with the police department to prepare the staff for the number and types of injured that were on the way.

Easily Handled

Mike Miller, hospital administrator, said 41 persons were brought to the hospital, 90% of them in the first hour after the explosion.

The staff could easily have handled twice that number, Miller said.

Local ministers were integral in handling the large number of persons who came to the hospital seeking word of friends or relatives, Miller said, and freed hospital personnel for more urgent work.

When Region 5/6 Civil Defense (CD) director Marvin Hafits saw the immensity of the disaster, he prepared for the worst. He notified all CD cities in Dodge County

Fremont May Get Some Federal Help

A spokesman for First District Rep. Charles Thone said Saturday that federal assistance for the demolition of Fremont's Pathfinder Hotel is unlikely but that federal Small Business Administration loans may be made to damaged businesses in the vicinity of the hotel.

There also may be some federal dollars available for repairs to Love Opera House, a historic site across the street from the hotel. The opera house was being restored at the time of the Jan. 10 hotel explosion.

to respond with rescue units and ordered other members in this four-county mutual aid district to standby.

Passing Heroic Buck

Countless other people responded to the emergency, some heroically. Those who are singled out for heroism always point to someone else, whom they say did much more.

The Red Cross, Salvation Army, Seventh-Day Adventists and countless citizens volunteered many hard hours.

"We poured so much coffee," one woman quipped Saturday night, "it's a wonder they had enough water to put out the fire."

The common thread that tied the thoughts of community officials together in the aftermath of the catastrophe was the importance of community disaster drills during the past two years.

The fire department, police, sheriff, State Patrol, media, the hospital, ministers, city officials, National Guard and relief organizations all took part in the drills.

Many of the emergency procedures learned in the mock drills — some with students acting as victims — saved time and probably lives, officials agree.

Bottom Line

CD Director Hafits put it this way: "Had there not been drills, planning, resource lists and the dedication of all local government, I feel there would have been mass confusion. He advised:

"To city or county board members — if you haven't got a disaster plan, get out of the business."

Is Double Trouble Haunting 2-County Judge E. E. Dixon?

By Bill Kreifeld

C stands for county, as in county court. C stands for controversies, as in rather commonplace.

C, therefore, might also stand for Edward E. Dixon, District County Judge of Hall and Howard Counties — a man who, it appears at least, stands for those same things.

With outspoken candor, Judge Dixon, 37, acknowledges that his tenure on the bench has been marked by a larger amount of controversy than normally expected at his station in jurisprudence.

And he concedes that he has stirred some of that bucket himself.

"But," he says, "that's just the way I am. I don't do it deliberately. It's just my own makeup."

The latest hubbub in which Judge Dixon found himself as a pivot point involved contempt citations he issued against a Grand Island auto firm and the Grand Island Daily Independent newspaper.

That action stemmed from an ad placed in the Independent by Diers Motor Co. which said, "Don Diers goes free; judge orders instructed verdict of not guilty; says if anyone should be on trial, it would be Diers' competitors for overpricing their cars and service work."

Citation Dropped

Judge Dixon subsequently dropped the

citation against Diers, and last week, District Judges Donald Weaver and Lloyd W. Kelly Jr. upheld a writ of prohibition stopping any contempt proceedings against Independent publisher Ralph Clark.

Judge Dixon calls that District Court action "a slap in the face — a discourtesy that it even went to a hearing."

"I was going to dismiss it (the contempt citation), and would have told them so if they had asked," Dixon said.

He said he had to request a Tuesday hearing at which he said he planned to drop the contempt action and tried to explain that he had brought it in the first place because "people were calling my office about the ad — to see if a judge would really do that."

Did Something

"It reflected on the integrity of the court, so I had to do something."

Dixon said that while he now considers the matter closed, "I don't like it when the ship starts to go down and all of the sailors leave it and I'm left standing naked and alone."

He said he has never heard of such action by a district court toward a lower court before, observing "Perhaps personality conflicts (with Judges Weaver and Kelly) are part of the problem."

Judges Weaver and Kelly declined to comment on Dixon's remarks.

North Platte — The foreman of a Lincoln County District Court jury that convicted Erwin Charles Simants of six murder charges Saturday said the most discussed aspect of the case was its contradictory psychiatric evidence.

"With three expert witnesses testifying the defendant was not insane and two saying he was, it seemed kind of odd to us," said Richard M. Anderson. "We finally came to the conclusion the lay opinions were just as good as the psychiatrists'."

Anderson, a North Platte insurance adjuster, said at least three votes were taken on each of the six counts. The first, which came Friday night during the jury's first 2½ hours of deliberations, elicited 10 ballots of guilty and two of innocent by reason of insanity. At least one other vote was 11-1.

"There were emotions up there," said Anderson of the deliberations in the Lincoln county courthouse. "We had an excellent jury, people who were really interested in how the law would apply."

Verdict at 10:32

The seven women and five men came to agreement at 10:32 a.m. after 4½ hours of deliberation. Simants, a 30-year-old laborer, admitted in a tape-recorded interrogation that he shot to death six members of the Henry Kellie family of Sutherland on Oct. 18, but he pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

Interestingly, Anderson voted alone in an unusual straw vote taken informally by Judge Hugh Stuart after the 18-minute session at which the verdicts were read.

Stuart, who triggered a free press-fair trial controversy of national proportions by invoking a gag order on pretrial press coverage, asked whether the jurors felt they could have been impartial had they been aware that Simants had made statements of confession. Anderson said yes, nine jurors no and two did not respond.

11-1 Negative Note

The vote was 11-1 in the negative when Stuart asked if they could have remained impartial had the defendant's taped confession been publicized. That recording, played during the trial, was a key item of prosecution evidence.

In an impromptu press conference following Saturday's court session, Anderson explained that because of his occupation as an insurance adjuster, he "has learned to go on facts rather than hearsay."

The foreman said that to his knowledge the gag order controversy was never discussed by any of the jurors.

Half-apologizing for his order to sequester them during the trial, Stuart got apparently unanimous agreement from the jurors that his action was proper. No straw vote was taken on this matter, however.

Noting that this was the first time he has sequestered a jury, the judge said his intention was to protect its members from both exposure to outside influences and from personal harassment. He said he has been receiving letters on the case from all over the United States.

Controversy Expected

Stuart said he anticipates some controversy over the sequestering order within his own profession. But, he said, he still prefers the jury system, even if sequestering is sometimes necessary, to verdicts from the bench.

"Anytime you do anything different in a court of law," Stuart commented, "you're going to get shot at."

United Press International reported that juror Gertrude A. Black, a North Platte housewife with two grown children, said the color photographs of the victims "did disturb me."

'We Had To ...'

"Nobody liked to do this (convict Simants)," Mrs. Black said. "It was a matter of justice. We had to do this."

After the jury had been excused, defense attorney Leonard Vyhnales said: "The verdict is in. What more can I say?"

Chief prosecutor Marvin Holscher said: "I feel justice was done."

Independent publisher Clark said it wasn't the first time that Judge Dixon has taken "capricious action" to take advertising out of that newspaper. Clark said he doesn't contemplate any further proceedings in the contempt matter "at this time."

Relatively Calm

Initially appointed as Hall County Judge in February, 1965 to fill out an unexpired term, Dixon at 26 was one of the youngest — if not the youngest — of the state's county judges.

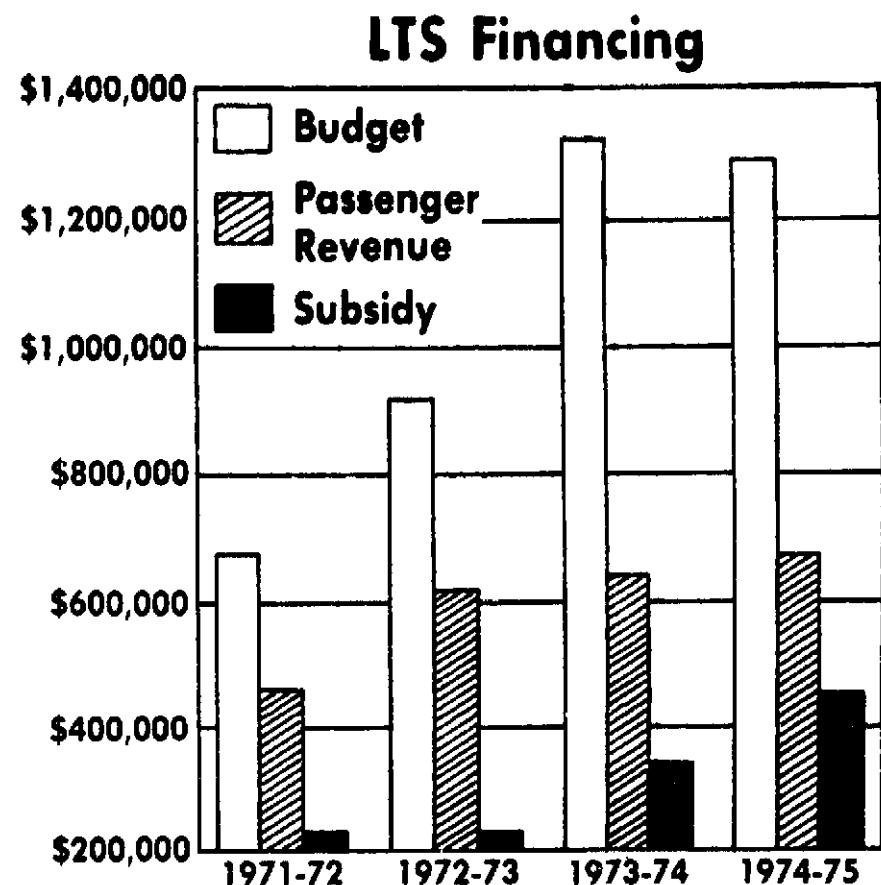

The bulk of his years on the bench, during which he was reelected in 1968 and 1972, were relatively calm ones. But shortly after he started his present four year term, he began establishing water marks in what might be considered a rising tide of eyebrow raisers:

- His threat in the spring of 1973 to withhold fees collected by his office from the state treasurer unless legislative steps were taken to provide necessary funds to run the district county courts in Nebraska.

- Judge Dixon, who had charged that Gov. J. J. Exon and the Unicameral had not accurately reported the true picture of the situation to the people, said the withholding became unnecessary because the Legislature "came through with the funds."

- His August, 1974 declaration that Grand Island's parking meter laws were unconstitutional.

Dollar Road Bumpy For Lincoln Buses

By Warren Weber

City Hall's take-over of the bus operation here was a governmental shot of penicillin to the ailing bus lines.

Although medical charts show a marked improvement, the city bus system still is undergoing therapeutic treatment.

Experts believe it may never be completely well because while the Lincoln Transportation System (LTS) is improving its service and hauling more passengers, it keeps on rolling into debt.

Federal, state and city subsidies are keeping the municipal bus operation off the deathbed and chances are that it will continue to be a money loser, at least during the immediate future.

Public Service

City Councilwoman Sue Bailey says the city's bus system should be viewed as a public service and not a money making or break-even operation.

"We have to accept the fact that LTS probably will always have to be subsidized," she says.

It's something of a circle, she says. "We have to spend money to increase ridership to make money to improve the system."

Transportation planners say buses

probably will remain as Lincoln's primary mode of public transit for the near future since the city isn't large enough to support or financially justify another form of public transportation, such as a monorail or subway system.

Lip Service

Although much lip service is given to the use of public transit as both an energy saver and a tool for reducing traffic congestion, transportation planners don't envision a large increase in bus ridership over the next 25 years.

It's estimated that 2% of the total trips people take from one point to another here are made via the bus system and it's predicted that by the year 2000 that figure will increase to 4%.

Although 4% is a doubling of the present usage of the transit system, it's still far short of any notion of a major usage of buses for getting about the city.

The question of bus ridership is something of a sore point with City Councilman Bob Sikyta.

Sikyta says the city and LTS board should take a hard look at bus routes and search for innovative ways to increase ridership.

Primary Point

He says most bus routes are geared to the downtown area, which is the primary point of transfer from one route to another.

Since not everyone has a need to go downtown, there should be other transfer points coupled with an expansion of routes to serve other major employment areas and activity centers such as schools, Sikyta says.

Sikyta says he wants downtown Lincoln to continue receiving the best available bus service and doesn't want to detract from the commercial and business district.

The point is there are other areas that need improved bus service, he says, and steps should be taken to see that those transportation needs are met.

'Simple Enough'

Sikyta says he believes there isn't going to be a significant increase in bus usage unless

By Tom Cook

Fremont — At 9:32 a.m. Jan. 10, an explosion shattered the crisp, winter air in Fremont. It would drive the community to the depths of sorrow and to the tragic heights of heroism.

What started out as a quiet Saturday ended with the explosion and fire that destroyed the Pathfinder Hotel leaving behind 18 dead.

In a matter of minutes, the community was united in a frantic battle to save those still trapped in the blaze and to care for the injured.

The battle would soon involve the resources of county and state government and prove the worth of community disaster training.

Already on Duty

Fire Chief Howard Schneider had taken his wife to a doctor's appointment when the blast hit. He phoned the station and immediately left for the scene.

"We have a force of 29 people and a volunteer force of approximately 75. Most of these people were on duty when I arrived," he said.

Screams of anguish and calls for help mingled with the smoke that billowed from the hotel, which had many elderly occupants.

Firefighters entered the building wherever possible to escort victims to safety and used their own equipment as well as cherry pickers from the city's Department of Utilities and Parks Dept. to rescue about 20 persons trapped on upper floors of the six-story building.

The tragic death toll could have climbed much higher but for the heroic efforts of those fighting the blaze, Schneider said.

'Yeoman's Job'

Schneider cited as an example of the tremendous community response to the disaster the efforts of retired Fremont Fire Captain William Stratman, who was asked by the chief to coordinate the use of the Omaha aerial ladder.

"He left before I could thank him. He did a yeoman's job — he's still a firefighter," Schneider said in a broken voice.

The fire was extinguished by 3 p.m.

Saturday, the chief said, and workers searched the rubble in the gutted and dangerous structure until Thursday.

Fremont Police Chief Fred Whitt was finishing a cup of coffee before leaving for the office when he felt the force of the explosion, which was across the street from the police station.

"When I got there, I helped some woman through the door and the assistant chief met me and said 'Chief, can you get some stretchers?' I didn't have time to stick my nose out the door for about eight hours," he said.

'No One Knows'

The dispatcher had already initiated emergency operations notifying the Dodge County Sheriff, State Patrol and the Memorial Hospital of Dodge County.

"I'm sure no one person knows exactly what happened after the explosion," Whitt said. "Everybody was here before we had time to think."

The police, sheriff's office and State Patrol quickly cordoned off the area and directed traffic to allow the flotilla of fire and rescue units that poured into the city to get to the scene of the disaster. They also insured speedy access to and from the hospital.

The police set up a command post and issued tags, which limited access to the hotel area to emergency personnel, news media and civilians with emergency requests.

Chief Whitt said this prevented unnecessary confusion. He said some individuals carrying cameras tried to pose as newsmen to get closer to the scene of the tragedy.

The State Patrol was soon at the scene with their Bluebird van to provide emergency communication and a self-contained command post.

About 20 State Patrol officers took over routine surveillance of the city to relieve police for duty at the scene.

Gov. J. J. Exon called in the National Guard, which took posts around the downtown area to prevent looting or injury to curious sightseers.

Dentist Praised

County Atty. F. A. Gossett began to reconstruct events in the hotel at the time of the explosion to determine who might have been trapped in the building.

He praised local dentist Larry Gausman and the State Patrol Identification team for their efforts in identifying victims of the tragedy.

"I don't know what we'd have done without Dr. Gausman," Gossett said.

By 9:40 a.m., the disaster plan at the Memorial Hospital of Dodge County was in full swing.

LES Chief: Power Shortage, Mandatory Cutoffs Approaching Fast

By Harold Simmons

The prospect of electric power shortages is becoming so real that utilities may have to impose rotating power outages among customers by the end of the 1970s, suggests Lincoln Electric System (LES) Administrator Walter Canney.

Although such shortages are not absolutely certain, he said, the possibility is likely enough that public officials should face the problem by developing plans and being prepared to order outages if necessary.

Canney broached the subject of mandatory power outages — something discussed more often in private than in public by utility operators — during a recent meeting of the Mid-West Electric Consumers Assn in Denver.

"I am becoming increasingly convinced that the general public is not aware of the essential requirement for adequate electric power to meet our daily needs," Canney said.

"I am just as convinced there is substantial sentiment among public officials that the utilities, not people and industry, use electric power; that utilities promote power and therefore the elimination of any advertising, or a bit of conservation, will substantially reduce future needs."

No Plan or Prediction

Canney stressed that he is not outlining a plan for future rotating power outages in Lincoln. Nor is he predicting that such outages are inevitable, he said.

But unless the general public and public officials recognize the demands and restrictions they have placed on electric utilities and take steps to correct them, Canney said, power outages may be inevitable soon.

The oil embargo of late 1973 demonstrated that power generating plants are very susceptible to fuel shortages. But the problem electric utilities are facing in the late 1970s is not just fuel shortages, he said. It is a questionable ability to meet continually growing demands for electricity.

These problems result not only from questions of availability of fuel (primarily coal), but also ability to transport fuel and ability to build power plants and transmission lines, he said.

Consumption Increasing

And while utilities face severe problems in increasing power generation, power consumption continues to increase, both because of community growth and because of customers switching from one energy use to another.

Canney said he has not developed a plan for Lincoln to use in case it does reach the point where demand for electricity exceeds the supply. However, he has looked at the possibilities, and the prospects may not be pleasant.

If outages are necessary, he said, it would seem obvious that key public facilities should continue receiving electricity. These would include hospitals, police, National Guard, State Patrol and the water and sewage systems.

Special Circumstances

There are also special circumstances, such as medical and disability needs throughout the city, that need to be taken care of.

However, Canney said, electric systems are built to provide electricity to customers, not to facilitate outages. In short, he said, it is impossible to isolate all critical needs to continue to receive electricity and shut off others.

For example, he said, there is no way to have rotating outages and still keep in service the traffic signals at Lincoln's 215 key intersections.

In a shortage situation, Canney said, immediate public reaction is to eliminate outdoor lighting and streetlights. But that doesn't address the problem. Streetlights account for about 1% of LES demand, and that demand occurs basically in off-peak periods.

When the problem is inability to provide adequate supplies of electricity, he said, demand needs to be reduced during the peak period, which falls between noon and 5 p.m. during the summer.

Mandatory Curtailment

Another obvious response to power shortages would be mandatory curtailment of industrial and other large users, Canney said.

In an emergency, that might be the best answer for a day or even a week, he said. But what about a season or a year?

"Is it better for the worker to be unemployed and home, warm but hungry?" he asked, "or to share part of the curtailment while retaining some productive role and some earnings?"

Canney said dozens of public and private reports on how to meet energy needs particularly how to reduce dependency on the more scarce fuels, such as oil and natural gas. But in each and every plan, he said, there is need for more electric power.

One of the most optimistic and conservation-oriented plans calls for reducing energy growth from 4% a year to 2% a year from now until 1990, he said. But that plan would require electricity to climb from the present 23% to 25% of total energy use to 40% of the total by 1990.

LES 'Favorite Whipping Boy'

The Lincoln Electric System (LES) appears to be a top contender for the distinction of being the government agency that is the favorite whipping boy of irate citizens.

Not too many weeks ago, a coalition of Ralph Nader instructed advocates and others challenged LES and convinced the City Council that Lincoln should not become part-owner of a nuclear power generating plant.

Last month a new group calling itself the Lincoln Alliance tried unsuccessfully to shoot down the latest LES rate hike.

Irritation

Now another group, calling itself the Lincoln Citizens Committee, is attempting to get off the ground on the platform of irritation over high utility rates. Again, the principal source of irritation is LES.

For all citizens, the good point about such challenges is that LES must carefully research and document any proposals it makes.

But the unfortunate aspect of the challenges is that it results in much distortion of the truth and plain misstatements of fact.

29 Warnings

For example, Nader disciples made claims for energy alternatives that simply don't exist on the scale they proposed.

The Lincoln Alliance accused LES of pushing through a rate hike. But a simple file check showed no less than 29 (yes, 29) stories and editorials printed in Lincoln newspapers warning of the coming rate hikes during the six months prior to the time the Council acted.

The budding Lincoln Citizens Committee accused LES and the Council of being "secretive" about rate hikes. And they hold electric rates to be "unconscionable."

Yet some of the same people involved in the Lincoln Citizens Committee have studied LES rates and found no significant faults.

In Brief

- John Kyl, a former Nebraskan who is now assistant secretary for congressional and legislative affairs for the U.S. Interior Dept., had Secret Service protection while in Lincoln last week to address water resources leaders. Two Secret Service agents rolled into town ahead of him and left afterwards. No explanations.

- The prospect of a lawsuit over plans to build a four-lane bypass along the west side of Lincoln and through a portion of Wilderness Park is apparently still alive. Two former officials of the local chapter of the Sierra Club plan to form an organization to raise the necessary funds to finance a lawsuit.
- The national Sierra Club is so far batting exactly zero in its court and administrative agency battles to stop construction of the Gerald Gentleman Station power plant near Sutherland. However, Sierra Club efforts have boosted Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) costs for the plant that ratepayers will pay by some $47 million — $38 million because of a one-year delay and another $9 million to move the plant 300 feet to avoid still further delay.

- The U.S. Supreme Court's decision to hear an appeal on the case involving coal development in neighboring western states has definite impact on Nebraska. In agreeing to hear the case, the court dissolved restraining orders on development of coal mines by four companies. Two of those companies have contracts to provide the coal for the Nebraska Public Power District's Gerald Gentleman Station and the Omaha Public Power District's Nebraska City power plant.

Darien Gap Helps Keep Cattle Ills Out of State

By Dominick Costello

Farm Editor

Nebraska's ranchers and farmers may not have heard of the Darien gap but its existence does protect them from some livestock diseases

The gap gets its name from a swamp which extends along the border between Panama and Colombia. A proposal to build a highway from the tip of South America to the tip of Alaska would bridge this swamp.

"The swamp has provided a natural barrier against the movement of livestock and disease north of the Panama border. This barrier will be lost if the Pan-American highway is completed. Engineers tell us that the swamp can be crossed," said Dr. Bill Moulton, an American veterinarian employed by the United Nations.

20 Die in Hour

"The U.S. Department of Agriculture has asked the Transportation Dept. to oppose any extension of the nearly completed highway until we have a better agreement with Colombia on livestock disease control," Moulton told Nebraska veterinarians this week.

"Most Americans have never seen rinderpest or foot and mouth disease. I have seen 260 Irish cattle in an Egyptian quarantine station die in a single hour in spite of fast treatment. We lost 800 of 1,200 Irish cattle in that one shipment because they were penned next to some cattle from Somalia that had the disease," he said.

30-35 Diseases

Moulton said there are between 30 and 35 really serious diseases of livestock that are not common to North America that farmers should be aware of.

"We have made good progress with Panama which has established a 25-mile area along its border with Colombia that is totally free of livestock. They won't allow their people in those areas to raise any kind of livestock," he said.

Colombia is setting farmers in its border area, has put some restrictions on livestock production in the area and has a disease control program but these are still problems.

"Their people have done a constitutional, and a subsequent pronouncement last February — after his August decision was overturned by Hall County District Judge Weaver — that those ordinances are not being equitably enforced between local people and out-of-towners.

Judge Dixon notes that "a lot of meters have been removed, and there is now free off-street parking in Grand Island. He said very few parking meter violations are brought before him. When they are, and the accused person pleads innocent, "they're dismissed as a matter of course."

- The judge's self-proclaimed "midnight subpoena" order in the late summer of 1974. He had subpoenas served on various Grand Island police and city officials to appear before him later in the morning.
- Judge Dixon said he discovered that police shift captains were signing and notarizing blank complaints which would later be filled in by night shift officers as they made arrests. The judge said he issued an order to members of the Grand Island City Council, the city attorney's office and police who appeared before him that all future complaints were to be signed by the city attorney or his assistant, and notarized by Dixon or an associate judge.
- "I just couldn't let that sort of thing happen, so I stopped it," Judge Dixon declared.
- A disagreement between Judge Dixon and Hall County Atty. Sam Grimmering about a September, 1975 gambling raid on the Grand Island Eagles Club — a raid which occurred after the judge told a state liquor agent that gambling was going on there after one of the judge's friends was "frozen out" of a card game.

Grimmering later filed a complaint against Dixon with the Commission on Judicial Qualification, but the judge says he hasn't heard about any findings.

Charging at the time that Grimmering "with the assistance of the news media," has caused suffering and general turmoil in the community, Judge Dixon now says that he believes Grimmering took the action he did "more to protect himself than anything else."

'There's No Basis'

"He campaigned for election on a platform of cleaning up gambling in Grand Island, and this makes it look like he's not keeping his promise."

In response to that, Grimmering would only say, "I cannot understand why he would say this. There's no basis for it."

Judge Dixon has announced that he will testify in behalf of the club manager who was charged in the raid "because it's not right for him to be punished for the actions of three or four players who've never been named." It was those people, the judge said, who "froze Eberly (the judge's friend, Herb Eberly) out."

Dixon noted that District Judges Weaver and Kelly have disqualified themselves in the case which is expected to eventually be heard by District Judge C. Thomas White of Columbus.

With the second highest District County Court workload in the state (over 13,000 cases last year in Hall County and 1,000 in Howard), Judge Dixon says he hasn't yet decided if he'll stand for retention on the bench this fall.

Set of Principles

"I'm getting kind of tired of it. I have my own set of principles, but nobody else seems to want to do anything. I have to look at myself in the mirror every morning," he said.

In addition, the judge noted, "my wife is in very poor health . . . and I have to be concerned about her."

The Denver University graduate says he doesn't believe that his past differences with the Hall County Attorney's office, the district judges and various city officials have interfered with proceedings in his court.

He said he feels that the only problem with Judges Weaver and Kelly occurs "when we meet head-on."

Judge Dixon said he doesn't think that judges are too powerful "because their decisions are subject to review." He says he has never regretted becoming embroiled in the numerous controversies that have arisen.

"Too many people are reluctant to speak their own mind; but that's just how I am," he said. "I couldn't do my job any other way."

less the service offered is almost as convenient as using a car.

An understanding of the problem is simple enough. The solution, however, appears more difficult because additional incentives for ridership, such as expansions or improvements in service, will cost more money.

Lincoln, like other cities, is in a financial squeeze, and although the solution for many municipal problems is more money, the money just isn't there.

Growing Deficit

The problem is compounded by the fact that the size of the deficit continues to grow.

The federal government pays for half the deficit and the city and state each pay one-fourth.

The city went into the public transportation business about four and one-half years ago when it bought out the Lincoln City Lines for $361,000.

In that purchase, 36 ugly, dilapidated, dirty, fume-belching buses were transferred to the city government. At the time, ridership was down and service was poor.

Dubbed the "uglies," the brand new LTS cranked them into operation until the following year when it purchased 33 new buses and gave them a champagne launching amid extensive press coverage.

Various Ideas

Since the LTS was formed, the municipal government has been toying with various ideas for improving bus service.

The latest idea is for City Hall to hire a management firm to oversee day-to-day bus operations. Steps have begun to award a contract to ATE Management and Service Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio. A proposed three-year contract would cost $83,000 annually.

The city also is seeking federal funds for the purchase of 13 new buses. They would be added to the existing fleet of 43 buses and 13 minibuses.

A study released last year says LTS operations are good but there is room for improvement.

The eight-month study by Alan Voorhees & Associates of Cleveland, Ohio says LTS should be able to maintain its current fare structure for the time being.

Bus rides are 30¢ but there are lower prices for students, the elderly and the use of the downtown minibuses.

The report also says some areas of Lincoln need higher levels of service.

Siktya says the city needs to get on the ball and start implementing the recommendations in the report.

Estate Tax Reform Dimmed

Washington — Many legislators have viewed 1976 as the long-awaited year for Congress to pass legislation changing the estate (death) tax laws to make it easier for families to hold onto farms and small businesses.

That view now may be dimmed, all because the issue has been introduced into presidential politics.

It's not because President Ford on January 5 became the first chief executive in nearly 25 years to recommend a plan for dealing with the problem of heirs being forced to sell farms or small businesses to pay federal taxes.

His support of the decades-old battle to ease the tax burden on heirs should help achieve congressional reform, a feeling shared by even those who are his natural philosophical and political enemies.

Campaign Issues Status

The reason is that the reform measure has been elevated to the status of a campaign issue by Democratic presidential aspirant Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana.

Several moderate and liberal Democrats are saying privately that Bayh's strident attack on the President's proposal makes it certain to become a political football in the coming months. As a result, some believe, Congress may well put off final action until next year.

"Bayh shouldn't have shot off his mouth," one moderate observed. Another remarked that "I had anticipated a low-profile battle here in the Congress; now everyone will want to get into the act, including those who are expert only at making noise."

Bayh was the only senator on the attack the day the President unveiled his proposal at the 57th national convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation in St. Louis.

Slow Death

The liberal Indiana legislator said the proposal "would mean slow death for family farms passed from one generation to another instead of the sudden death often brought about by onerous estate taxes."

Still reacting negatively, Bayh said "family farmers will easily see through this gambit by the Ford-Bayh team whose true allegiance has always been to agribusiness."

Fellow liberals Walter Mondale of Minnesota and Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin, both members of the powerful tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, responded in a positive vein. They uncommonly found themselves aligned with conservative Nebraskan Carl Curtis, the ranking minority member of the panel.

Mondale said he was "very pleased" with the President's endorsement of the need to ease estate tax burdens. He said "I am pleased that the President also recognizes the problems that face small businessmen and farmers who wish to pass their businesses and farms on to their heirs and I hope that we will be able to work with the President in effecting reform in this area. I am eager to do so."

Mondale is author of a bill which differs from the President's proposal in several ways: The senator's measure would increase the present $60,000 estate tax exemption to $150,000, the President's contains no tax exemption change. The President's proposal, unlike Mondale's, contains no provision that family farms, for estate tax purposes, be valued as farmland rather than land used for other commercial purposes as long as the land is kept in the family and continues to be used for farming.

Both favor "stretch-out" provisions for installment payments on estate taxes.

'Easier Now'

Nelson believes reform of federal estate and gift tax laws "should be easier to achieve now" in view of Ford's endorsement. "We are genuinely encouraged that the President has recognized the pressing need to change these obsolete and confiscatory laws, which are forcing the sale of numerous small businesses and farms, rather than allowing them to continue in family hands after the owner retires or dies."

Nelson, author of one of the most comprehensive estate and gift tax bills thus far introduced, said newspaper accounts of the President's proposal "suggest that it is a step in the right direction, although it does not appear to go far enough."

Curtis, also the author of a major bill in this area, declared "I am very glad that the President recognized the need for relief . . ." But he suggested Ford's proposal should be accompanied by a raise in the exemption to $200,000.

Many Compute Tax Erroneously

By United Press International

Many Nebraska taxpayers are computing their state income tax returns incorrectly, thereby delaying a refund if they have one coming, State Tax Commissioner William E. Peters said Saturday.

About 36% of the returns received by the State Revenue Dept. have been computed erroneously, he said. Computations on the faulty returns were based on federal tax liability after deduction of the $30 individual personal exemption. State liability correctly is based on the amount of federal tax due before the $30 credit is deducted.

Peters said the Revenue Dept. will adjust the incorrect returns to reflect the correct amount to be refunded or the amount due the state.

Fellowship Wins at UNL Told

Twenty-five faculty members at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln have been selected by the Research Council to receive Faculty Summer Research Fellowships for 1976.

Charter Amends Hearings Slated

The city Charter Revision Commission is holding two public hearings this week on proposed changes in the city charter, defining City Hall's powers, responsibilities and organization. The hearings are scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday in the City Council Chambers.

On Jan. 20 proposals will be heard concerning unpaved streets, a land subdivision acreage change and the limitation of mayor and city council terms.

The Jan. 21 hearing will focus on the taxing of Lincoln Electric System (LES).

Two proposed charter amendments would restrict the mayor and council members to two consecutive terms (eight years) in office.

Another amendment would remove all reference to subdivision lot sizes from the charter and allow the Council to create lot sizes through ordinance. The current definition makes a subdivision of five acres or less.

A third amendment would allow the city to create paving districts for unpaved streets without petitions bearing signatures of 51% of abutting property owners.

The Jan. 21 public hearing will deal with a provision to eliminate LES' in-lieu-of-tax payment scheme.

The City Charter currently provides that, instead of paying taxes, LES divide 5% of its gross revenue among the county, city and school districts. During fiscal year 1974-75 LES paid $972,328 in lieu of taxes. The city received 28.8% or $279,914.

City officials say the city should receive all of the 5% payment since LES is part of city government.

After the public hearing the Charter Revision Commission will make recommendations to the City Council about what revisions to submit to city voters.

Planning Commission To Hear Shopping Center Arguments

The City-County Planning Commission will hold a public hearing Wednesday on a proposed zoning change to allow construction of a neighborhood shopping center at 27th and Old Cheney Rd.

Developer John Hoppe for Briar West, Inc., is asking for the change of zone from A-1 Single Family to G-1 Commercial on about five acres of land. The land is located on the northeast corner — causing the problem as far as the planning department is concerned.

Director Doug Brogren notes that a neighborhood center was supposed to have been built on the northwest corner of the intersection. Instead, an insurance company built a home office there. That building doesn't leave any land left for a shopping area.

'Undesirable'

But, Brogren writes in his report, the preliminary preferred land use plan adopted by the planning commission calls for construction of a "very large" neighborhood center on the southeast corner, while another center is proposed down the road at 56th and Old Cheney.

Although Brogren is recommending deferral of the request pending completion of the Comprehensive Plan, he says an "undesirable land use situation would result" should the proposed center be built at 27th and Old Cheney Rd.

A much larger zoning request to allow construction of a major shopping center at 27th and Old Cheney Rd. was rejected by the City Council in 1974. Two other requests for regional shopping centers — at 84th and O and at 56th and Old Cheney Rd. — were turned down by the council.

Book Lot

In other business the commission will hold a hearing on the Nebraska Book Co.'s request to construct an off-street parking lot on the south side of Holdrege, near 35th. The 36-stall parking lot also would serve patrons of Valentino's Pizza. Brogren is recommending approval.

The commission also will conduct a hearing on the planning department's proposed "Criteria for a County Road Plan" and "Implementation Policies."

The "criteria" document says the road plan should conform to such things as the Goals and Policies report, the Comprehensive Plan and "relate" to the use of existing right-of-way widths. No recommendation is made on how wide the right-of-way should be — a point of contention between Brogren and County Engineer Marv Nuernberger.

Any recommendations on a county road plan will be made to the Lancaster County Board.

The commission also will hold hearings on:

Changes of Zone

- Application of Kramer Farmers Union Co-op, from A Residential to I Industrial, in Kramer, north of the Missouri Pacific railroad right-of-way and one block east of S. W. 114th.
- Application of John Baker, from A-2 Single Family to F Restricted Commercial, northeast corner of 48th and South.
- Application of Herbert Brothers, from AA Rural to A-1 Single Family, near 84th and A.
- Application of Briar West, Inc., from A-1 Single Family to G-1 Planned Commercial near 40th and Old Cheney Rd.

Special Permits

- Application of Erwin Schnieber to reconstruct portion of nonconforming building, near 48th and Madison Ave.
- Application of Mirwyn Jackson to amend special permit.
- Application of Pine Lake Corp., to amend special permit near 84th and Pine Lake Rd.

Plats

- Preliminary and final plat of Village Manor Estates, near S. W. 12th and South.
- Final plat of Jackson Add., near Leighton Ave. and N. 62nd.
- Final plat of Trendwood 7th Add., near Van Dorn and 74th.

Museum Wants New Craftsmen

Grand Island — Several craftsmen-in-residence are being sought to entertain next summer's visitors to the Stuhr Museum's Railroad Town of the Prairie Pioneer.

Program Director Hal Holoun is looking for craftsmen who work in the materials and techniques of the turn of the century to spend about 30 days in the town. Each resident craftsman will receive a "reasonable stipend" and a sheltered workspace, he said.

Council To Discuss New Liquor Plan

The City Council will again open up the question of Lincoln's liquor license policy when it meets Monday.

Council Chairman Max Denney has introduced an ordinance which ties the number of licenses allowed to population figures.

Denney says the intent of his legislative proposal is not to increase the number of licenses but to base the city's license ceiling on some kind of a rational formula.

The city's eight-year-old policy of placing the ceiling at 135 licenses is admittedly arbitrary.

Under Denney's proposal, about two new licenses would be created annually if the city's population growth continues its present rate, an increase of about 2% a year.

Items on the Council's agenda for its 1:30 p.m. Monday meeting are:

Second Reading Public Hearing

- Atley Vacation — Vacating east-west alley between Aylesworth and Holdrege Sts. from 50th to 51st.

Republicans Fog Sunshine Effort

By Don Pieper
Omaha — The Nebraska Republican Central Committee voted overwhelmingly Saturday to oppose the petition campaign known as the Sunshine Initiative.

The committee said strict enforcement of the state's existing corrupt practices statutes would provide adequate protection against abuses in political campaigning or lobbying and from conflicts of interest.

Petitions being circulated by the Coalition for Open Government seek to put a lengthy proposal on the general election ballot. It would require accountability and disclosure for public officials and establish a fair political practices commission to police their activities.

The GOP leaders listened to a workshop session on the 10½-page proposal Saturday morning, then expressed their opposition in a resounding voice vote during the afternoon business meeting at the New Tower Motel.

The only close vote in consideration of a series of legislative issues came on a proposal to support a boost —

GOP Advised: Keep Cows Out of Clover

Omaha — Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas chose an interesting comparison during the partisan pep talk he delivered to fellow Nebraska Republicans here Saturday.

After complaining that 42% of the persons registered failed to mark ballots in the 1974 general election, Douglas said: "A nonvoting eligible voter is to a political party what a knee-high field of clover is to a cow."

A cattleman was asked by a reporter how cows react to knee-high clover. "It makes them bloat," he said.

The Douglas speech to more than 100 persons attending workshops and Republican State Central Committee meeting dealt with the GOP's ability to accommodate diverse philosophies. He said a vigorous primary battle between President Ford and Ronald Reagan would strengthen the party because "conflicts would be resolved in an open manner."

1976 Unicameral Race Size of Purse Not Hurting Entries

By C. David Kotok
The often bemoaned $4,800 salary apparently has not convinced many state senators job isn't worth it.

Only two of the 25 lawmakers whose seats are up for election this year have ruled themselves out of the race. They are Omaha Sens. John Cavanaugh, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Second District, and William Skarda, an 18-year veteran of the Unicameral.

Three Lincoln area senators, Shirley Marsh, Steve Fowler and Jerome Warner of Waverly, indicated in a Journal-Star poll that they would be seeking reelection.

At the Starting Gate
Several of the Unicameral's most influential members plan to run the race in November, led by Speaker Jules Burbach of Hartington. Also seeking reelection will be veteran lawmaker Eugene Mahoney of Omaha, chairman of the Legislative Council Executive Board, and Agriculture Committee Chairman Loran Schmitt of Bellwood.

Other committee chairmen who have indicated they will fight for another term include Omaha Sen. George Syas, Constitutional Revision Scotia Sen. Dennis Rasmussen, Government, Military and Veteran Affairs, and Frank Lewis of Bellevue Education.

Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers will try to maintain his role as moral thorn in the side of the Legislature following the November election in his predominately black Omaha district.

Personal Reasons
Personal reasons have made some of the Unicameral's more active members uncertain about their future as lawmakers. Sens.

Statehouse Letter

By Don Pieper

Innovator Marvel Still Trying

Chairman Richard D. Marvel, an innovator, has his Budget Committee trying still another method for deciding how to allocate the state's dollars. Every session he tries another system.

He says it is still too early to gauge how well this year's plan is working. Probably he is right. But some observations may be in order.

The objective is to reduce the complicated appropriations business to its essentials, put the emphasis on issues rather than numbers and make administrators justify their money requests.

Noble goals, which Marvel has sought to achieve by having the legislative fiscal staff cut agency requests to the bone, converting these minimum figures into appropriations bills and holding public hearings at which the bureaucrats explain why the minimum isn't enough.

All this is being done before the governor's budget recommendations are delivered. That won't come till about the end of the month. Additional hearings will be held then.

It has been the custom to receive the governor's spending recommendations, match them against suggestions from the fiscal staff and then send to the floor bills expressing the committee's choice of its own, its staff's or the governor's amounts for each agency.

Thursday and Friday of last week, representatives of 14 agencies took turns in the committee's witness chair in a sort of cafeteria-style hearing. The spending heavyweights are on this week's schedule and they will get more time.

But last week's parade must have been frustrating — for senators who have to make dollar decisions on the basis of information gleaned from those brief interviews and for administrators who clearly wished for a better chance to explain the value of their programs.

In pursuit of his aim of relieving committee members of reams of figure-filled paper, Marvel has directed the staff to furnish nutshell reports and add details on request. The system seems to invite more questions than it forestalls.

Marvel and the fiscal staff say they are sensitive to the danger, but observer of the committee's operations over the years can see increasing influence on the part of the budget analysts. It is a necessary result when staff is asked to summarize.

The irony is that Marvel frequently emphasizes that only the Legislature can appropriate state funds. He complains of erosion of this constitutional assignment by state administrators and their federal cousins.

Carmen Esquenazi-Mayo Dies After Brief Illness

Carmen (Kuka) Esquenazi-Mayo of 8040 Northshore Dr., wife of the director of international studies at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, died Friday evening after a short illness.

Her husband, Roberto, had just begun a six-month leave of absence from UNL to serve as consultant in international educational development to the Venezuelan Education Ministry. He arrived in Lincoln late Saturday night.

Mrs. Esquenazi-Mayo, who was born in Havana, was a noted artist. She began her study of art in Cuba and continued it at the Art Students League in New York City.

She had a solo exhibition at Sheldon Memorial Gallery in 1974. Her work, critics noted, showed influences of cubism.

Mrs. Esquenazi-Mayo was hostess to many visiting foreign speakers and groups at UNL, including participants in the Venezuelan and Mexican festivals.

She taught Spanish at Nebraska Wesleyan University and John F. Kennedy College in Wahoo.

The easy way to reduce your taxable income by $1,500.

And save for your retirement at the same time.

Even after you promised yourself it wouldn't happen again, it probably is. You're starting to let another year slip by without setting aside tax deductible money in an Individual Retirement (IRA) account like you said you would.

So here's the easy way to keep that promise to yourself and feel a whole lot better next year and for years to come.

If you're not participating in an approved pension or profit sharing plan, you can make monthly deposits totaling $1,500 annually (or 15% of your earned income, whichever is less) into a First National Lincoln Individual Retirement Account. If both you and your spouse work, you can each start an IRA.

Your monthly deposits will earn the highest rate of bank interest allowed by law.

So your monthly deposits earn the same rate of interest you'd receive on a single deposit of $1,500. Plus, your monthly deposits start earning interest from date of deposit.

At First National there are no set up costs — no maintenance fees.

Do it today so that by the end of the year you'll have the money set aside for deduction on your 1976 income tax return.

Promise yourself you'll do it. It's a promise you'll be glad to keep year after year. Because it'll help you make the most of what you've got.

8 Cases of Measles

New Vaccinations May Be Needed

By Betty Stevens

Eight reported cases of red measles in Lincoln, the latest affecting an adult, mean some children who already have been vaccinated may need to be reimmunized.

Lincoln pediatrician Dr. Kenneth Fijan said the Lancaster County Medical Society distributed an information sheet to physicians last week which identified such children.

They include:

- Children who received measles vaccine when they were less than a year old. This was common practice when the vaccine was first available in 1963-64, Dr. Fijan said. Later the American Academy of Pediatrics recommended that a child not be vaccinated until after his first birthday.

- Children who received killed vaccine, which occurred sometime in 1962-63.

- Children who received live vaccine with gamma globulin, which occurred in some cases from 1962-68.

Measles is one of the most contagious diseases. If one child in a home gets the disease, there is a 90% chance that other children in the home will get measles, too, according to Dr. Paul Stoesz, director of disease control, State Health Dept.

In the classroom the attack rate is 25% for those not immunized.

All persons who have not been immunized either by the disease or by vaccination should be immunized, Fijan said.

If persons have been exposed to measles and have not been immunized, it's too late to be vaccinated. The best route after exposure is to receive an injection of gamma globulin to make the disease less severe.

It is important, health officials said, that 30 days later vaccine be administered because if the patient does not get the disease, he has a tendency to forget he is not immunized. Some people believe the gamma globulin has immunized them. This is not true, health officials emphasized.

Lincoln-Lancaster Community Health Nurse Anita Dover said persons immunized in mass clinics in the early 1970s all received live vaccines.

Those clinics were held in January 1970, and September 1970, in Lincoln high schools and at General Arnold Elementary School; in September 1970 at Waverly; March 1972, Havelock, Pershing, Park, Hartley and Sheridan elementary schools, and April 1972, Belmont Elementary School.

The great concern, according to Dr. Stoesz, is because of complications from the disease.

High fever, ear damage, pneumonia and encephalitis, can be measles complications, Stoesz said.

Measles encephalitis is one of the most dangerous forms of encephalitis and appears in about one in 1,000 cases of red measles, Stoesz said.

One in 500 or more measles patients have complications that require hospitalization, Stoesz said.

Two Will Solo With Symphony

Pianist Dianne (Mrs. Richard) Moore and bassoonist Mark Kelley were winners Saturday of the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra Assn.'s annual auditions. The two will be soloists with the orchestra at a March 16 concert.

Mrs. Moore, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln graduate student in the School of Music, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Ferguson, 3440 No. 65th St. Kelley, a junior in the UNL music school, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Kelley, 5942 Madison St. He is now first bassoonist with the orchestra.

Your Nurseryman Speaks

Multistem Trees Product Of Self-Defense Mechanism

Can plants think, reason, find solutions to problems?

If you study them closely, you could easily think so.

For example, consider a tiny birch tree as it emerges from the earth in, say, Minnesota or Wisconsin.

It's only four inches high and has but seven leaves when a deer finds it and, with one gulp, devours all of it that's above ground.

This, of course, is a profound shock to the little tree and it immediately decides that, if it's to survive, it must devise another approach for getting into the air, where that vital energy-giving sunlight is.

On the second try, it sends out two tiny trunks with a total of nine leaves, hoping that its chance of survival will increase 100% with the second trunk.

Chomp! One bite and both trunks, all nine leaves, are gone.

The tiny birch is now frantic. It has little energy left in its root system. It can make only one last try.

So it puts all of its energy into five trunks with 18 leaves.

Chomp! The deer eats out the two center trunks, but since the other three lie almost parallel to the ground, the deer can't get at them. It moves on to other, easier-to-get provender.

How Clumps Made

Whew! The little birch tree has survived. And this, my friend, is the way Mother Nature makes clump birch trees.

In the vernacular of the nursery business, a clump is a multi-stem. Twin stems, three stems and five stems are most popular, but all multistems have some value in the landscape.

Multistems are particularly effective right now in the dead of winter.

In each clump, every trunk is competing with every other trunk in striving to reach sunlight. It's literally a fight for life. If one trunk completely overshadows another, it literally kills its brother. Darwin's survival of the fittest theme is illustrated perfectly in the multistem.

And if you'll carefully study the next multistem you come across, you'll see how this stress eventually shows as character. This is most apparent in Kentucky coffee and redbud trees.

Right Spot Needed

With the shortness of the winter days and with the bleakness of the winter landscape, the multistem can become the cynosure of all eyes if it's merely placed in the right location. Multis are most attractive when planted in the vista of a kitchen breakfast nook, a dining bay or a living-room picture window.

Attractive multis include magnolia soulangeana, locust (particularly sunburst with its golden foliage), red oak, Amur cork, Weir's cut leaf maple, ginnala maple and, of course, ginkgo.

This last tree deserves special attention. Ginkgo is one of the oldest forms of life on earth — a hardy survivor from the ice age. It's slow growing. Its foliage is like velvet. Its bark has a rough texture that suggests its antiquity.

When planted in a clump, it becomes, without exaggeration, living sculpture.

Corner Group Puts It All Together

By Steve Ellingson

Special Writer

Here's a corner group that's as modern as today but with all the comforts of yesterday. We call it the Alltogether because it saves space by combining sleeping, studying and storage areas... a 3-in-1 project. It's ideal for those smaller-size bedrooms in today's tract homes and apartments (about 9' x 12').

All sections are built into the room to provide lasting stability while conserving space. They're compact and convenient, too. Nine drawers are located under the bed, with five various-size bins and a large shelf above.

At one end of the bed is an "end-table" bookcase/shelf. At the other end there's a desk.

It's virtually everything you need in a bedroom. The bed will accommodate a 39" x 75" mattress.

The desk is 30" high by 29" wide... by as long as you want. Plans allow for a 57" long desk at the front.

Some lumber, plywood and a few tools is all you need to complete the job.

To obtain the Alltogether Corner Unit Plan No. 565, send $2 (includes first class postage and immediate handling) by check, cash or money order to: Steve Ellingson, The Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2363, Van Nuys, California 91409. New! Our Patterns for Better Living book picturing over 500 woodworking & handicraft projects for your leisure time. $1.25 postpaid.

Garden Gossip

Gardening Brings Self Satisfaction

By Emery W. Nelson

County Extension Agent

I don't know a person who gardens year after year just to save money. I do know many who grow several hundred dollars worth of groceries, but the monetary saving isn't the primary reason they grow vegetables.

People who garden do it for self satisfaction. A few feel the physical exercise is reward enough. It provides them a place and time to exercise in the open air. But gardening is more than a task of exercising for the sake of physical effort. It provides rewarding emotional and monetary benefits through responding, living plants. The rewards from the growing of vegetables are better health and additional money, but most of all gardening provides self satisfaction.

Self satisfaction is the result of a successful garden. The beginning gardener isn't likely to continue growing vegetables unless the garden is a success. I think a poor garden is often the reason people garden for only one year.

Almost every first year garden can be good. However, the beginner needs to be very diligent. The location, soil and preparation must be satisfactory or the garden may never have a chance to succeed. Planting the right vegetable at the proper time and in the right manner will greatly assist in producing vegetables.

Too many gardeners try to grow exotic or sensational species not well suited to the climate or soils. The beginner will do much better if he uses only those easiest to grow and plants varieties that have proved themselves in his locality.

Information on vegetable gardening is readily available. The Lancaster County Extension Service has a free circular on nearly all garden plants. In addition, pertinent questions can be called in for quick answers. Also many of the garden stores have well qualified people to assist and advise with growing vegetables. Another really good source of information is the neighbor down the street who successfully has grown vegetables for several years. Garden experience is the best teacher.

COMPARATIVE TAXATION

Your house is for sale. The location is great, the price is right, and the neighborhood is desirable. But prospects keep turning it down because they claim the tax rate is too high. How do you meet this objection?

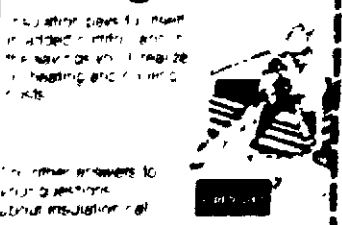

It just may be that the taxes in your town are actually lower per dollar value than neighboring, less desirable communities. Remember, taxes are not determined by tax rate (mill levy) alone. They're also determined by the valuation practices of the local assessors. In some areas, homes may be assessed at only 25% of true value. In other areas, it may run 60% or 40%. So you must take both the tax rate (mill levy) and the local valuation practice into consideration. Don't be misled by an apparently low tax rate.

This is one of the reasons why it pays to sell your house through a local REALTOR®. It's his business to be familiar with this vital information. He's an expert negotiator and has the facts to back up his claims.

A Different Angle Adds Interest and Charm to House

By Andy Lang, AP

An angled two-car garage serves to enlarge visually this sweeping Colonial style ranch house. The over-all impression is one of size as well as luxury and charm.

Creating the appearance of a large house was one of the prime goals of architect Jerold L. Axelrod. But since a modest size and economy also were considerations, the square footage was held to 1366 and the exterior was confined to readily available materials in stock sizes.

This blending of large impressions with economy is carried through inside the house. A foyer-like space adjacent, yet open to the living room, is located inside the front door. The vista is dramatic, including the depth of the 23-foot living room with its optional fireplace, as well as a sweeping rear vista through the dining room to the rear porch and rear yard.

Visual Dimension

The same design technique of opening adjoining rooms just enough to each other to gain added visual dimension is employed in the rear-facing trio of living-entertaining rooms. The family room features a brick fireplace, sliding glass doors to a large rear porch and a cathedral ceiling. It is partially open to the adjacent dining room, which also has sliding doors to the rear porch.

R-151 Statistics

Design R-151 has a living room, dining room, family room, kitchen, three bedrooms and two bathrooms, totaling 1366 square feet. There is a two-car garage, with a laundry room at the side, plus a porch at the front and one at the rear. The over-all dimensions of 81' 3" by 48' 8" include the garage and both porches.

The location of the dining room, bridging the family room, living room and kitchen, has the effect of making the room more a part of the house than is common in ranch homes. This bridge location also naturally permits the dining room to be used more often and more casually if the family so chooses. The adjacent U-shaped kitchen is also more open to the dining room than is customary.

A low wall, which serves to screen the cabinets and that doubles as a serving counter, has been designed to separate the two rooms rather than a full wall. There is plenty of cabinet space here, including a corner carousel, built-in area for the refrigerator and a cozy breakfast bar on the inside wall.

Pantry Closet

A laundry-mudroom adjoins the kitchen. It provides laundry space, a pantry closet, another large catch-all closet as well as garage and rear yard access. Entrance to the basement, which is optional with the home, would be her as well. The oversized side-entry two car garage includes a large storage area as well as furnace space, which would be relocated to the basement if that option is chosen. (The working drawings available from the architect give both options).

The bedroom wings feature three bedrooms. The master bedroom includes two walk-in closets as well as a private lavatory, which is on the same plumbing stack as the main hall bath.

The angled garage on this home has another advantage in the flexibility it imparts to locating the home on the lot. Since there is no one straight front wall, the front can be positioned at almost any angle and still look good.

Wood shingles make up the main exterior material of this sweeping Colonial style ranch house.

John Dean's Legacy: TMS and More

By Gene Kelly
You'll be bumping into John Dean's ideas along the road to electronic banking the rest of your life.
The irony of this legacy is that Dean, who died just a few days ago, was widely known in American financial circles, was regularly quoted in leading business publications, and was THE panelist to invite to a banking convention.
But John was low profile in Lincoln. In private he would tell you how the banking competition had been thrown into a panic by his money transfer concepts and the interest-bearing checking account which he pioneered at First Federal of Lincoln. "They call me the Nebraska bastard," he would say, then smile, somewhat proud of the title.

John Dean

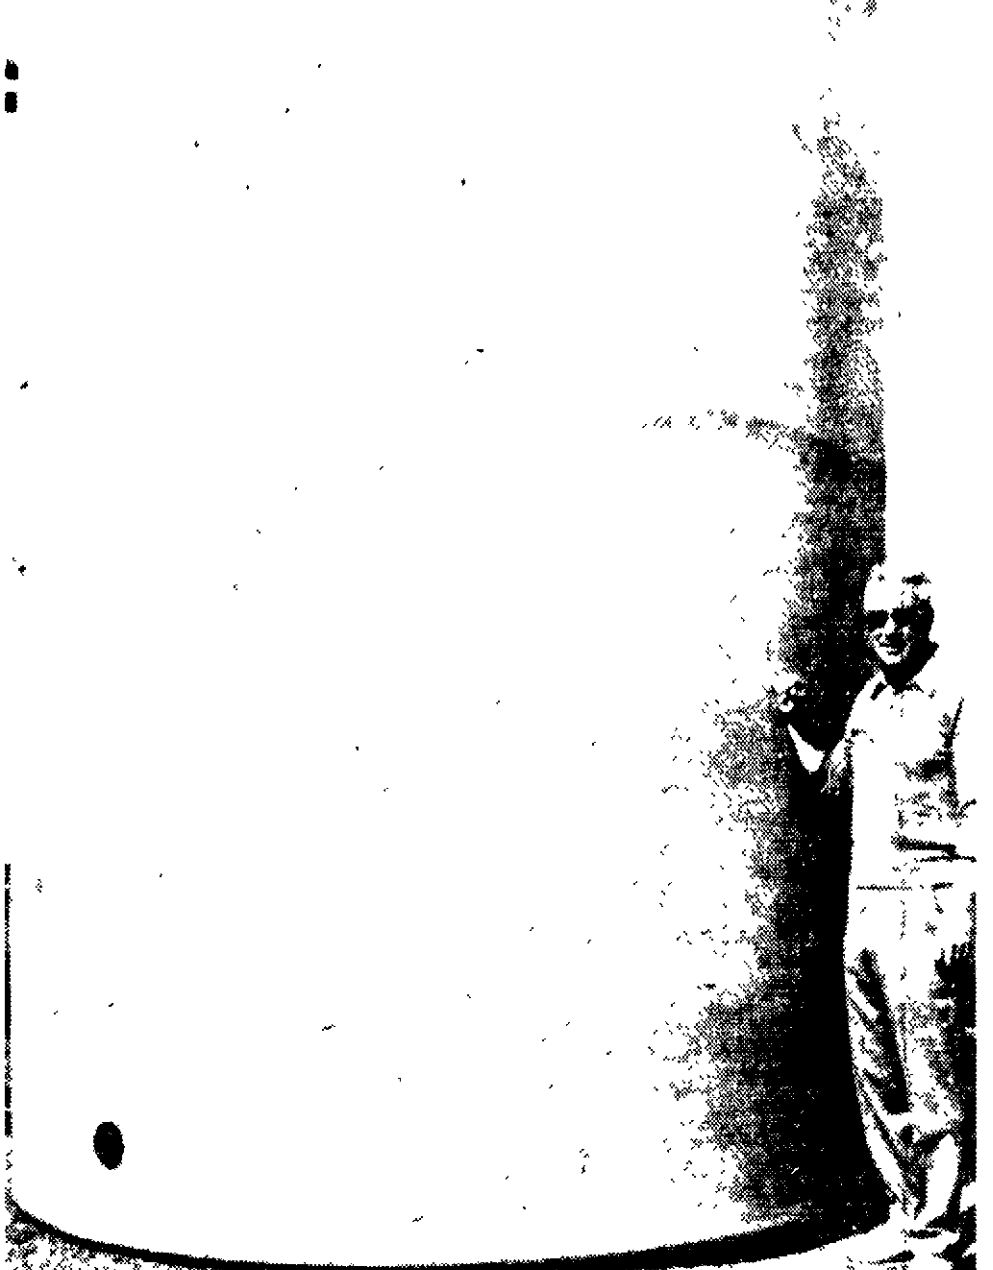

regulatory or court case.
"His humor can be dry. Asked about his private law practice, he complains about losing law partners — 'They keep making judges out of them.'
"It's clear Dean is no pushover."
That was a perceptive profile. But overlooked by many was John's real concern for the public — for their convenience — and his stance that almost everyone should benefit by the automating and streamlining of financial institutions.
"TMS: What hath John Dean wrought?" asked the Savings & Loan News magazine. It answered that "his Transmatic Money Service (an earlier version of The Money Service) could assure the business' (savings and loans) survival. It could also precipitate a financial Armageddon."
The Transmatic plan, basically a preauthorized payment system for home mortgages and savings account additions, has been licensed to more than 650 S&Ls in America and some foreign countries.

At First Glance
Banking Magazine agreed that "at first glance, one is inclined to take him at his word. Dean... is not a casting director's idea of a man who could single-handedly throw the financial regulatory structure of this country off-balance... he's lean, gangly, soft-spoken and twangy, and extremely casual about dress. He wears baggy suits and knots his necktie only under duress (for photographs, board meetings or dinner functions). Otherwise, he lets it flap wildly in the wind."
... he maintains a private law practice separate from First Federal. He's fought tax cases for personal clients up to the U.S. Supreme Court and won them. So no one, friend or foe, should regard Dean as anything less than formidable in a "tired of just talking about the problems the S&Ls face... shook up the Cornhusker banking community by placing terminals in stores of the regional Hinky Dinky grocery chain.

"Grocery shoppers with accounts at Dean's S&L could walk into the store and withdraw from or deposit to their savings account seven days a week, 12 hours a day."
Business Week, taking note of the legal battle which developed over this concept, said that the fight "touches on such gut issues as branching, competition between banks and S&Ls, the role of the retail outlet in electronic banking."
John felt his TMS system was "the way to family financial services, the way to get out (the savings and loan) half of the cake" in the rapidly changing funds transfer picture.
TMS, if nothing else, "offered to savers, other savings associations and even commercial banks by First Federal... is controversial," said Savings & Loan News.
"Extended to its logical conclusion, TMS would fundamentally alter long-standing relationships between consumers, bankers, retailers — and savings associations. And that is exactly what John Dean wants it to do," the News continued.
"Bankers know that."
"Retailers know it."
"And so should savings and loan officials."
TMS, when fully activated, has these implications:
Dean wanted the next step to be an electronic bill-paying system, tailored to the needs of each First Federal customer, using one of three payment ways.
Savings & Loan News lists these as "a regular preauthorized basis; by using money orders or accommodation checks, or by taking their bills to any TMS location, such as a grocery store."
"At the store, the saver will give his bills to a TMS clerk.

With the aid of the store terminal and First Federal's computer, the proper amount of money will be transferred from the customer's savings account to either the billing company's commercial bank checking account or a First Federal savings account.
"Either way, the bill will be paid, the clerk will stamp it and the saver will be on his way."
"At that point, the Transmatic savings account comes to resemble an interest-bearing, but paperless, checking account."
"That's right, says First Federal (board chairman) Gladys Forsyth. 'We figure that the customer will use his savings account more like a checking account.' (She was Dean's mother-in-law).
"We give daily interest, something the customer can't get in a checking account. So where will he put his money?" she asks.
"Where he gets interested," she answers.
"The saver, Dean says, will be able to 'go to the checkout, hand the girl his paycheck, make his mortgage payment, pay his utility bill, pay for his groceries, put some money in his savings account and get some change.'"
The next major step would broaden the plan with consumer credit, making it possible for savers to charge purchases to a First Federal credit account.
The final TMS step wraps the system together in a financial counseling package.
'Change Thinking'
"The first thing we must do," Dean told the News, "is change some thinking. That's why our terminals are in the stores now."
"Once customers become accustomed to seeing financial transactions made in a store, then they will be willing to use the terminals for additional purposes."
"For Dean and First Federal, TMS is merely a beginning. 'Look at TV,' Dean says. 'The first big job was to get people to buy one. Once they did, it was simple to sell them an improved model.'

"By the time the TMS steps arrive, First Federal Lincoln will have at least helped to force some fundamental changes in the nation's payments system."
"We're talking about a complete national change in the handling of money," Mrs. Forsyth says. "Convenience will be the big factor."
"And there is nothing more convenient than having a savings account as handy as a supermarket," says John Dean."
First Federal put $1 million into development costs and time to create TMS the past six years. To get some return on that investment, a TMS marketing package is being sold to other S&Ls and retailers.
John Dean's death is not likely to mean a quick demise of The Money Service. He didn't think that way.
The basic, but often missed, fact, says Savings & Loan News, is that "TMS is not the end point in First Federal Lincoln's Transmatic plan. Today, while savers are learning to handle their savings account transactions at a retail store, TMS may be akin to some type of branch; but tomorrow... TMS is intended to operate as an electronic funds transfer system."
"It is the realization of what TMS can become that upsets the banking business."
"Dean is fond of saying that TMS represents 'near parity with the bank checking account. It's a first,' he maintains. 'TMS competes with the convenience of a checking account.'
"If it does, and remember that both Dean and Mrs. Forsyth expect savers to use their TMS accounts like checking accounts, the inevitable battle about what types of financial institutions have which kinds of powers may already have been joined."

This 5,600-gallon polyethylene tank from Snyder Industries of Lincoln looms large in plans of this Louisiana customer.

$2 Million Business During 1975 Snyder Producer of Big Tanks

By Gene Kelly
Snyder Industries sold more than $2 million worth of polyethylene agricultural and industrial tanks last year. The Lincoln firm has become the leading North American producer of large size (more than 1,000 gallons) tanks so fast that even Larry Snyder sometimes shakes his head.
Snyder, the firm's president, said that since he began making the big tanks in 1972, production has grown more than 50% a year. "We built at least 12,000 tanks of all sizes during 1975," he noted. "We're already the largest user of Marlex CL-50 polyethylene resin in the U.S. — some three million pounds of the stuff."
He's projecting another 50% jump in production and sales this year (to $3 million). Half of his work force — 35 people — is involved in tank production.
The firm also makes fiberglass tubs and shower stalls.
Snyder's company, founded in 1971, was the first to make a plastic tank larger than 1,000 gallons; they've gotten bigger ever since.

Ecological Angle
Now, he says, a potentially hot line is the 10-to-50 gallon container which he's testing.
The market for agricultural tanks, Snyder noted, has been spurred by the growing use of liquid fertilizers and other chemicals on farms.
Although the main use is for transportation and storage of liquid fertilizer, these tanks are used for storage and transportation of liquid feeds, insecticides, herbicides, hydrochloric acid, nitrogen, concentrated sulfuric acid, and for water storage.
Snyder said that the development of corrosion-resistant tanks has been a slow and difficult process. Steel tanks used to store liquid fertilizer will rust out in one of two years, and even epoxy-lined steel tanks last no more than four years. "Stainless steel and fiberglass have good resistance, but are much more expensive than polyethylenes," he added.

There's an ecological and economical angle to Snyder's tanks: they are reusable, once flushed of chemicals; the color is molded in and, while the plastic scuffs during use, it resists cracking and is durable.
This isn't the kind of plastic that cracks when it gets cold. In Snyder's torture chamber, he rolls tanks filled with antifreeze solution from a four-foot high platform at zero degrees.
"Polyethylene isn't brittle, even under stress," he said. "It dents, especially on a corner; that's what we want."

"The Money Service is not a credit card."

—Burl Ives

Credit cards cost you money... in the interest you have to pay. The Money Service card makes you money... in the interest you receive. That's why The Money Service card is the card that pays you to carry it around.
With The Money Service, you can leave your money in a TMS savings account, where it will earn maximum interest. Then, when you want cash, it's available as near as your neighborhood merchant location. And it earns right up to the time you make your withdrawal.
You don't have to make a special trip to deposit in a TMS account, either. Make deposits at the same convenient merchant location when you shop.

What's Wrong? Giants Control

What's wrong with the American economy? What accounts for its "overall inept performance in recent years," as Dr. Wallace Peterson phrases it?
Peterson, George Holmes professor of economics at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, outlined his views of what's wrong with the American economy — as it relates to the role of small business — before the Senate Small Business Committee recently.
"We have been living since World War II in a world of simultaneous inflation and unemployment," he said. "The major cause of this unhappy state of affairs is that the basic economic and political landscape of this country is dominated by giant corporations and, to a lesser extent, giant trade unions."
"The giant corporations which dominate the economy's center are but a tiny fraction of the nation's more than 11 million business firms; yet they have latched firmly onto the levers of economic power in society. How and where we live, what we consume, and even, perhaps, how we vote, is strongly influenced — if not dominated — by decisions and actions taken in the economy's corporate center."
The concentration of power in the hands of a relatively few corporations, according to Peterson, makes it possible for these corporations to "administer prices," rather than allow them to respond to market forces. From this, "administrative inflation" occurs, which Peterson said accounts for "the unhappy combination of simultaneous inflation and unemployment."
In practical terms, big firms with substantial market power can largely insulate themselves from the ups and downs of the economy, holding prices firm (or raising them) and shifting the burden of adjustment to their labor force — through unemployment — when confronted with bad times. This is exactly what the automobile industry did during the 1974-75 slump, as unemployment in the industry reached the 25% level, but prices for new cars did not drop, in spite of a collapse in consumer demand."

Ought to Fall
Some economists remain troubled by this sort of price behavior, Peterson said, "even though it runs contrary to classical economic laws which tell us that in competitive markets prices ought to fall when demand declines."
Peterson believes that such behavior is harmful, and "contributes to the economy's cycle of accelerating inflation punctuated by chronic, excessive unemployment."
It is difficult, he said, to find justification for the concentration of power in the hands of giant businesses either because, as some economists believe, it results in some degree of price stability, or because big firms perform better in research, invention, and innovation.

In regard to a correlation between bigness and technological progress, Peterson said there is "a growing body of fact and expert judgment which casts serious doubt on the alleged superiority of giant business."
Peterson noted a British study which indicated that only about a fifth to a fourth of a number of inventions analyzed were attributed directly to organized research by large corporations. "The overwhelming majority originated with the individual inventor, small and medium sized companies, or universities," he said.
Citing still another study, Peterson said giant firms have been characterized by a "creative backwardness," attributable to a fear that new technology will destroy existing capital investments, and several other factors.

Peterson said evidence is also indicating that domination of the nation's economy by a relative handful of giant corporations is more than a question of the economic organization of society. "Many fear — and rightly so — that concentrated economic power is a threat to our system of political democracy as well."
He cited as examples the recent disclosures about the extent to which American corporations have been involved in payoffs to foreign officials or in making illegal contributions to political campaigns.

Insurance Execs Plan Omaha Meet

More than 100 insurance executives from nine states are expected to attend the annual meeting of the Missouri Valley Council of Independent Mutual Agents and Companies Thursday at the New Tower Hotel Courts in Omaha.
Rep John Y. McCollister will speak on government intervention in insurance at a luncheon. Harold W. Traub, Lakewood, N.J., president of the National Association of Mutual Insurance Agents, and Trevor A. White, Washington, D.C., the national association's executive vice president, will meet with the group at a reception and dinner Wednesday evening.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The investors who didn't take part in the initial spurt of the new year rally jumped on the bandwagon last week and drove prices higher in the heaviest trading in New York Stock Exchange history.

Generally, this was the week the rest of the market caught up with the Dow Jones industrial average. Because of blue-chip profit taking, the Dow average gained only 18.58 points to 929.63. (It is standing at the highest level since it closed at 932.65 on Nov. 8, 1973.)

That contrasted with its 52.42-point rise the week before, the second largest weekly gain on record. To date, it is 77.22 points higher than its 1975 close and most observers feel profit taking is in order.

The breadth of the new year rally's second week showed in the other averages. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index climbed 2.05 to 97.00 and the NYSE common stock index gained 1.12 to 51.41. Advances routed declines, 1,465 to 426, among the 2,066 issues crossing the tape.

Volume was the big story as a record 159,706,510 shares were traded. This surpassed the previous mark of 145,689,486 set the week ended Jan. 31, 1975, when the market began 1975's first half rally in earnest following a federal court's ruling in favor of IBM over Telex. Volume last week, the third heaviest on record, totaled 141,948,050 shares compared with 84,343,020 the same week a year ago.

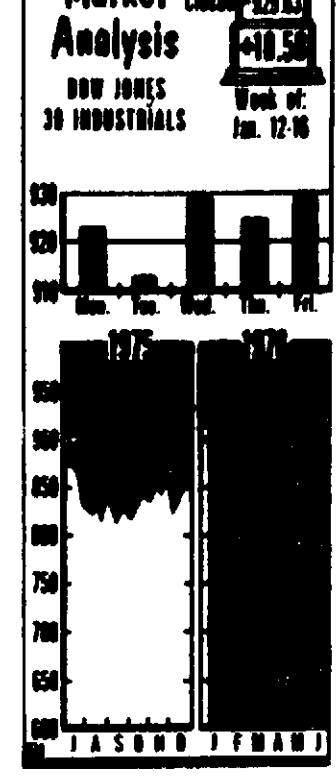

The turnover of 38,451,260 shares Thursday was the heaviest ever for a single day, surpassing the previous record of 35,158,320 traded Feb. 13, 1975. Also, the average daily turnover of 31.9 million shares was a record as the NYSE registered an unprecedented four consecutive 30-million-share days Monday through Thursday.

Just what is behind this unprecedented new year rally? "During the last weeks of 1975 we were seeing more and more evidence the recession was over and the outlook for the economy was brightening," said Harry Laubscher, vice president of Blyth Eastman Dillon & Co.

"Interest rates were headed downward. Auto sales were improving. The only thing that hadn't improve was the stock market. It had been going sideways since July.

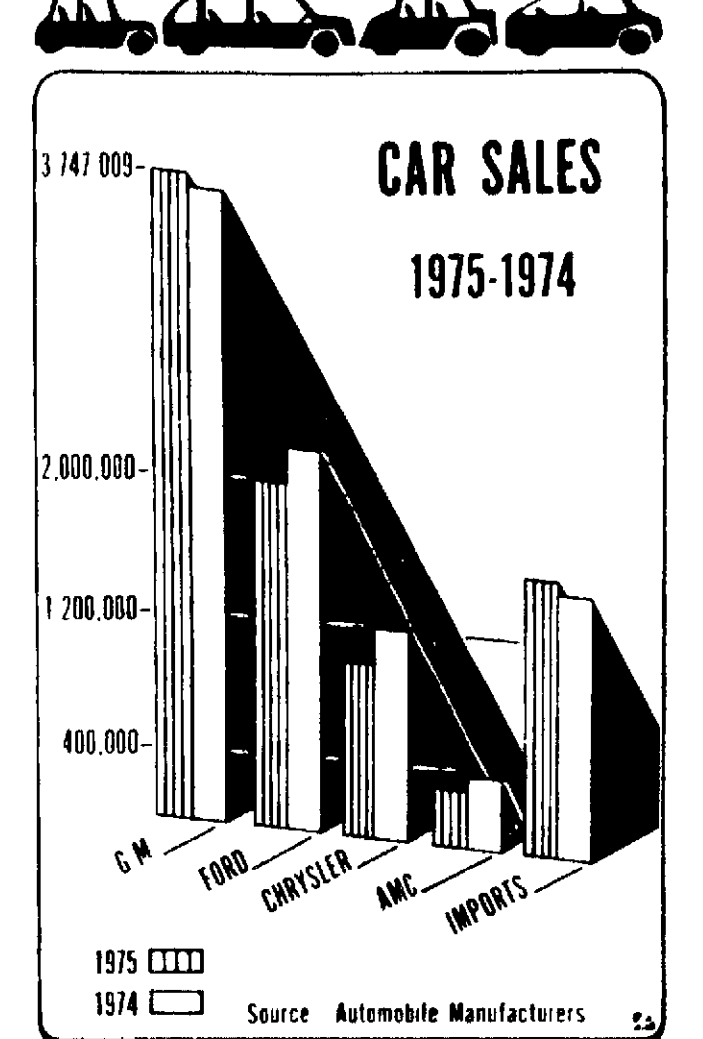

"I think a lot of people thought the market was underpriced considering the improvement in the economy and this led up to the explosion. For the professionals who follow charts — and a lot of them do this — that explosion began the day

Butcher Prices Rise

Cattle, Sheep Lower

Omaha (UPI) — Cattle and sheep were lower and butchers were higher at the Omaha livestock yards last week.

A combination of items depressed the fat cattle market. Most buying interests apparently carried some inventory over last weekend and were not too aggressive for numbers at the opening. The wholesale trade did not give much support to the market throughout the week.

Additional pressure was applied as some packing plants were observing a non-slaughter holiday Thursday.

Steers in Omaha finished mostly $2.50-3.00 lower; heifers closed $2.00-2.50 lower.

Steer top in Omaha for the week was $44.75, with close up at $44.50. These were early tickers on choice and prime at 1,224-1,228 lbs. at the low point, a load of the same grade at 1,277 lbs. closed at $43.

Heifer top $42.75 with other same grade heifers at $41.50.

42.50. These were earlier tickers on choice at $50-1,100 lbs. Toward close, same grade and weight heifers were $40.50-41.50.

It has been close to nine months since these price levels were last seen.

Cows closed $2.50 lower. Utility and commercial cows were $20.50-22.50 with a few to $23.

Hogs opened weak in trouble but fully recovered shortly. With the exception of a mild setback in midweek trading, butchers found a fairly good demand.

Barrows and gilts closed strong to 50¢ higher with some heavy hogs $1 up.

Butcher top $5.1. Bulk of 200-360 lb. hogs cashed from $41.25-50.75.

Sows finished 75¢ to $1.25 lower. Bulk of 300-600 lb. sows cashed from $39.50-41.50, with some to $42.

Slaughter lambs finished weak 50-75¢ lower. Shorn lambs sold from $49 to a top of $50.25.

Corn Up

Chicago (UPI) — Wheat, oats and soybeans were substantially higher and corn irregularly higher last week on the Chicago Board of Trade.

62 Dakota Place Units Planned at $2.5 Million

Construction of Dakota Place — 62 townhouses in seven buildings — may begin as early as March on a 10-acre site at 58th and Van Dorn.

Developer Bill Krein, president of Dakota Place Inc., said the two-story units will involve an investment of about $2.5 million. Other investors are Calvin Krueger and Marilyn Schwartz who are also contractors for the project.

Krein said some units could be done by July 1, right after the investor group finishes its Neerpark Addition condominiums two blocks north of 58th and Calvert. Both adjoin Holmes Park. Neerpark involves a similar investment.

The two- and three-bedroom units will range from $35,000 to $50,000. Two buildings will sit along Van Dorn, the others along 59th.

A Past Of Pride, Courage

Stories by Tom Cook

Democratic nations care but little for what has been . . . Thus not only does democracy make every man forget his ancestors, but it throws him back forever upon himself alone and threatens in the end to confine him entirely within the solitude of his own heart.

HOMESTEAD.

ARTICULATION
FILED OFFICE AT NEBRASKA CITY
January 8, 1863
Arthur R. Thompson of Otoe Co. N.T. do hereby apply to enter under the provisions of the act of Congress approved May 20, 1862, entitled "An act to secure homesteads to actual settlers on the public domain," the 1/2 of section 36 in township 7 north of range 10 east containing 160 acres. "Having filed my pre-emption declaration thereon on the day of _____"
Arthur R. Thompson
LAW OFFICE AT NEBRASKA CITY,
January 5, 1863
J. Royal Buck Register of the Land Office, do hereby certify that the above application is for surveyed lands of the class which the applicant is legally entitled to enter under the Homestead Act of May 20, 1862, and that there is no objection thereto.
Royal Buck Register.

Arthur and Margaret Thomson posed in front of their home (left) around the turn of the century. The application (above) for their homestead near Palmyra was filed in 1863. The deed was granted years later.

It has been more than 100 years since the French historian de Tocqueville made the above observation of the United States.

The American heart has pounded with joy and endured many agonies since those words were written, but it has continued to beat, generation to generation.

Perhaps the American notion of progress did offer little time for looking back. Maybe, as baseball great Satchel Page once reflected, Americans were afraid something might be gaining on them. Whatever the reasons — bicentennial spirit, national maturity or a need to believe in something — Americans are becoming more and more absorbed in their origins.

Nebraska, which was still the unchallenged domain of the Indians when the Minutemen faced the British at Concord, has a fresh history, ripe with the spirit of the New World.

Dean Thomson, 35, of Palmyra has recaptured that spirit. He explored his family history and found a wealth of information — literally at his own backdoor — that offers a sweeping portrait of the settling of a nation.

Homesteading

On Jan. 8, 1863, Arthur Reid Thomson filed Homestead Application 17 in the Nebraska City Land Office for the Otoe County land on which his great-grandson now lives.

A house was begun in 1865 on that land about three miles east of what was to become Palmyra. And by 1869 Arthur Thomson's family had moved in. Now, over a century later, Dean Thomson and family call that house home.

This direct link with his past was one reason Thomson began picking the minds of relatives, searching for records and checking census reports and death certificates to piece together the story of his family.

He found a history full of hardship and struggle, fortitude and accomplishment.

His great-grandfather, Arthur, was born in Bannock Burn, Scotland, Jan. 1, 1827. His parents died when he was young and he went to live with his grandfather, an innkeeper in Edinburgh.

From the writings Dean collected, his great-grandfather led a rough life there — including a narrow escape one dark night from a diabolical doctor bent on having a body to dissect.

New Life

The promise of a new (and safer) life caught the fancy of Arthur, like thousands of Europeans before and after him, and he sailed for Quebec in 1843.

He stayed there with friends instead of going on to New York as planned. Then in 1856 he left the harsh clime of Canada for the Nebraska wilderness, settling in Nebraska City.

Although Dean Thomson isn't sure, he theorizes his great-grandfather went east to Berlin, Wis., in 1859 in hopes of finding "a good Scottish woman to marry." He found Margaret Ronald, and she moved to Nebraska City with her new husband to help operate the Western House, a hotel and cafe.

Four years later, the adventurous couple sold out and moved westward, living in a dugout while waiting for their homestead application, one of the first in Nebraska, to be approved.

Red Tape

A note Arthur Thomson wrote to the General Land Office in Washington, D.C., in 1869, trying to acquire the deed to his land, shows pioneers not only had to fight the elements and the Indians, but bureaucratic red tape as well.

"Now seeing that I have now half starved myself and family (family) to put improvements on the place which I now have 70 acres of land under the plow and a pasture fenced fore my stock a good house and other out buildings and a grove of young timber planted out if I being a citizen of the United States (United States) has to lose it I presume I might have got my deed from the land office at the time if I had given them money that they asked from me which I thought did not belong to them."

He finally secured the deed, to the land near where Palmyra now stands.

Despite the stereotypes developed in the lore of the Old West, Arthur Thomson recognized the Indians as fellow human beings and had his life saved by the native Americans several times. His red friends often warned him when hostile Indian war parties were in the area, giving him time to hide his family.

In his grandson's writings there is an account of Arthur saving Nebraska City from destruction by angry Indians who were tricked out of treaty money by a corrupt Indian agent.

"In order to stop the Indians from attacking, Arthur took up a collection in order to get the necessary money to pay the Indians. Arthur saved Nebr. City."

In 1922, Arthur's daughter, Mary Thomson Orrison, then 60, recorded her memories of pioneer life:

"I do not know why but the true old pioneer does not like to lay bare to the public his most trying experiences. In the first place, the pioneer never acknowledged to any one, not even to himself that he was poor, so what looks to us as dire poverty, looked to him as riches."

She recalled vividly the first days on the homestead when the family lived in a log cabin chinked with dirt and clay:

"The roof was shakes laid over rafters covered with a layer of sod and any person who saw one of our torrential rains knows what happened when the rain washed the dirt thru the shakes and streamed into the room below."

There were always plenty of potatoes, pork, beans and flour, she recalled, but the diet relied on the abundance of wild plums, grapes and other fruits.

Coffee Substitutes

"Various substitutes were used for coffee, such as roasted peas, bran, molasses," she wrote.

Even in 1922 the land had been altered so much by the white man, that Mrs. Orrison felt a need to describe it:

"I wish I had the gift to make you see these prairies as I can," she lamented. "The grass was so high on the low land that a man could ride horseback through it and not be seen. Quail, prairie chicken, deer and wolves roamed at will thru it."

She, like her father, had respect for the Indians, whose land they had settled.

"I never was afraid of the Indians, but those old Indians' dogs used to send chills over me," she wrote.

Christmas and Easter were important times in the family, she recalled, and a cluster of raisins or an orange was a wonderful gift.

Paisley School No. 6 was built in 1869 near Palmyra, and Mrs. Orrison described it as the church, school and hub of social life in the area.

Picnics

The first Sunday school picnic held there was a "banquet of cakes and pies and all other good eats."

Diary Reflects Hardships, Hopes of Journey Westward

It took stout-hearted and courageous people to build Nebraska.

There was no need for a computer or a pioneer placement agency to weed the weak from the strong. The journey into the wilderness was the proving ground, and the diary of pioneer Jane Ronald, Margaret Ronald Thomson's sister, contains the trials Nebraska settlers faced.

Jane's mother, Mary, who had been a widow for four years, decided to brave the hardships of pioneer travel. In 1864 she set off for Nebraska with two of her children, Jane, 22, and Robert, 20, and a granddaughter whose mother was dead.

It was a 43-day journey from Berlin, Wis., to the Thomson homestead near Palmyra, but no matter how exhausted or sick, Jane recorded the events of the trip each day.

Dean Thomson has a copy of the diary which begins:

"Left Wisconsin for Nebraska August 24, 1864. Weather pleasant, traveled till dark, stopped 4 miles from Nebraska. Had to hire pasture, killed and cooked some chicken. Rode all night asleep."

Unfortunately the weather and the spirits of the family soon changed and by Sept. 1 the diary began to reflect the hardships of the land:

"... Country sandy, hilly and miserable. Oh, Dear, I wish I was at home again. We are all homesick. Camped on top hill tonight. No water. Will wait tonight."

Jane, probably reflecting the focus of the early settlers, made daily notes on the terrain, recording the price of land and comparing it to what they left behind. The family stopped at settler's homes during their journey, but often found that more trying than camping out:

"Wednesday — 7th. Started, drove 200 yards, came to a creek watered the cattle, turned them out to eat. It began to rain. Went into a house to bake biscuits. Of all the looking places you ever saw, with disorder and dirt. One young lady with wavy horselocks flowing and one eye out, all the rest accordingly."

Occasionally the family passed through settlements. Jane records that many people were dying, apparently from dysentery and flux.

They usually stayed just long enough to post letters and take on supplies.

"Sunday 11th. Got up, had some biscuit baked this morning at the Idaho Hotel. It is a two story stone house, but the things look rather rough about the house, also the landlady. Had an introduction to a very rich old man who wanted to marry very badly, but I thought I would not stay to get acquainted with him for fear I would fall in love with him. On hum um."

On Sept. 15 the Ronalds camped with a family returning from Des Moines to Wisconsin.

"... They say it is so sickly they were glad to leave. But it is a good market. They have all been sick and are coming back to Wisconsin. There are a great many dying with dysentery and flux. But she told so many yarns we could not believe it all."

The only contact the family had with Indians was a conversation Robert had with a friendly Potawatome Sept. 25:

"... he said that we had better not go to Nebraska as the Indians were all joined together from the Rocky Mountains to Minnesota and they would drive the whites clear back, back. Saw other four but did not speak with them. I was afraid and could not sleep. wanted to turn back."

Finally on Oct. 2, they broke through the bluffs on the east side of the Missouri River across from Nebraska City and took a ferry across the water.

I did not find it quite so wide as I expected to. It is not quite as wide as the Mississippi. Stopped in town nearly an hour. Could find no one who knew them. Thomsons. Traveled till dark.

On Wednesday, Oct. 4, the journey ended.

Started this morning through the rain. Traveled all day, wet and cold. Came to Thomsons about sundown. Was glad to get in and warm and get something warm to eat. Found the folks all well with another baby addition to the family. John was gone to the post office to see if there were letters. Thank God we got here all safe and well.

The Ronalds joined the pioneer ranks and to show how close Nebraska's pioneer history is to today, her daughter, Jessie Lanning, died Nov. 24, 1975 in Lincoln at age 102.

What Seniors Want Most

What's on the senior citizens wish list right after health, solvency and the pursuit of relaxation?

During a convention in Chicago, a large group of over-50 compiled a list of wants. You may be interested in seeing how many of your own are included. Here they are:

- More social security counseling at schools, churches, in neighborhoods, etc. Counsel that is easy to get.
- An end to the mandatory retirement age in employment contracts.
- A lifting of the ceiling on how much you can earn and still draw your full social security.
- Investigation, in metropolitan communities, of a way in which cab fares for seniors can be subsidized.
- A regular senior citizen column in the local newspaper (they said it, I didn't).
- Work toward some kind of a sales tax rebate for seniors.
- More bilingual services for seniors.

Transportation

- Door-to-door dial-a-bus service, perhaps running only at specified hours each day, but making it unnecessary to get to distant corners for regular bus scheduling.
- Bars on shower walls and next to toilets and baths in hotels and motels.
- A system of para-professionals to give home assistance to people who have just returned from a hospital stay.
- Physicians who are willing to make house calls — or a system through which qualified physicians share the load.
- More available and reasonably-priced legal counseling on wills, estate matters and real estate purchases and sales.

Representation

- A senior citizen representative at every village hall to serve as a focal point for requests.
- A program of federally funded payments to enable a senior citizen or family to live in a preferred neighborhood or style of housing.
- A freezing of rent increases for senior tenants so long as the inflation rate remains at a high level.
- Pre-retirement counseling to be held at schools in local communities so as to reach large numbers of people of 50 and over.
- A national health insurance plan.

Inflation Worries

Of course, there are the worries, too, about high prices as related to lower incomes and less purchasing power from pension payments and return on investments. Those worries belong to all generations, but are perhaps a little worse for those who may not have enough time left to recover economic equilibrium.

In the main, the wants of seniors are far from frivolous. They may appear to be self-serving, but they are also quite important to having much of a self to serve.

A political candidate looking for a platform could do worse than to borrow these planks.

L. Davies Turns 100

Lewis W. Davies, the oldest member of the College View Seventh-day Adventist Church, celebrates his 100th birthday Friday.

An open house will be held

Lewis Davies

from 1 to 5 p.m. Wednesday at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William (Mauveth) Kuehl, 4718 Cooper, where Davies now lives.

Born in Philadelphia, Pa., Davies was married to the late Lilly Hiner. Davies has one other daughter, Mrs. Don (Sylvester) Madison of Boulder, Colo., who will be present for the occasion. He also has four grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren.

He taught school in Kerney County, Kan., and at age 26 built the Davies Hotel in Lamar, Colo., and operated it for 18 years. He then farmed in Walla Walla, Wash., and moved to Lincoln in 1920 where he has resided since.

Davies' fondest hobby is studying the Bible.

Asymmetry in hair fashion recalls wave lines that enhance the facial structure. The form can be smoothed, curled or waved for a fresh, new look.

Short, Updated Wave for Spring

Omaha — An important coiffure fashion for spring-summer 1976 will be the updated wave.

This is the consensus of the 64,000 members of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Assn. (NHCA).

Members are here for the 26th semi-annual meeting of the Official Hair Fashion Committee of the association.

Hairstylists from throughout the country saw short and mid-length hairstyles created by Lyl McCaig of Omaha, style director, and four members of the Hair Fashion committee.

The other four participating in the creations were Hayden Hitchcock of Hutchinson, Kan., Jackie Holt of Decatur, Ala., Sue Lack of Myrtle Beach,

S.C., and Max Matteson of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Natural Freedom

"The updated wave is molded within the boundaries of precise haircutting to flow with natural, ethnic freedom," McCaig said when members attended the Gala 200 Premiere show at the Orpheum Theater Saturday night.

McCaig said the processes of perming, haircoloring and conditioning will reflect the softness, shininess and healthiness of beautiful hair.

"Lengths will vary with women's attitudes. The most fashionable spring-summer lengths will be from short to mid-length, above the shoulders.

Exotic flowers and sleek chignons will enhance the exotic and tropical influences this spring, McCaig said. He added that large hair combs also will be an important ornament.

Designer Fashions

Models wore fashions from the collections of designers Bill Blass, Oscar de la Renta, Diane Von Furstenberg, Halston, Mollie Parnis, Jean Muir and St. Laurent.

Face coloring is tuned to the American woman's natural features, feelings, colors and activities. Colors were described as honest and natural.

"This season's face coloring never hides everything, but it never shows everything either," the style director said.

Some makeup color combinations are:

- Tropic Brights: Lips, cheeks and nails in goldfish persimmon, orange peel and tomato. Eyes made up in iris, magenta, periwinkle and jade. Highlights are imperial yellow.

- Earth neutrals, described as "the mystique of subdued earth shades." Lips, cheeks and nails in tawny, subdued terra cotta. Eyes done with bamboo, straw, clay, sand, leaf green or violet.

- Seashell Delicates: Lips and cheeks in nursery pinks, powerpuff pastels, oyster white. Nails and eyes, lavender, rosey dawn.

- American Naturals: Lips, cheeks and nails, bandana red, barn red, blush red. Eyes, cornflower blue, bayberry.

Color Harmony

Eye color will softly blend to the brow and the matching liner is barely visible. Cheek color placement is determined by bone requirements. Lips sparkle in two-color harmony with a light overgloss.

The NHCA says hair will feature colorlighting for a monochromatic shine and glow.

"A shine and glow are necessary to give extra sparkle," McCaig said.

An ocean of curls characterizes hair freedom (above, below).

Fresh geometrics continue fashion's enchantment with the Orient.

Peppernuts Yummy for Tummy—or the Teeth

By Susan Krefel

If it's good tasty recipes and a lot of them that you're looking for, Mrs. Howard (Florence) Miller, 3100 Vine, is the person to see.

Ask her for some of her favorite recipes, and you'll get a couple of dozen, give or take a dozen.

She likes to cook and her family — sons James, 27, and John, 18, and husband Howard — like to eat. And when daughter Donna, 24, a client at Martin Luther Home in Beatrice, is home, she never wants for goodies.

Even Tuffy, the family dog, can't resist her Yeast Peppernuts.

Mrs. Miller simply says "I just like to cook, especially when I'm not rushed or people are standing around. And I like to try new things."

Types of cooking at the Miller house change with the seasons. With the oven the primary appliance in colder months and the electric skillet preferred in the warmer periods.

Watches Calories

The pleasant Mrs. Miller says her family is "big on desserts." But she tries to keep a watchful eye on their caloric intake, even though you're sure to find chocolate cookies available at the lift of a cookie jar lid.

And she never worries a minute over leftovers, because they don't last that long. "I've got teen-aged boys running through here all the time. If it's leftover all I have to do is just let it sit around and pretty soon it's gone."

Yeast Peppernuts are crispy snacks that are great by the handful. They keep well and can be frozen. Mrs. Miller said they also work well as teething rings for babies.

Yeast Peppernuts

Heat together:
1 Pint molasses (2 cups)
1 Pound lard (2 cups)
1 Pound brown sugar (2½ cups)
Cool to lukewarm.
Dissolve 1 cake yeast in ¼ cup warm water. Add to molasses mixture.
Dissolve 1 teaspoon soda in ¼ cup strong coffee. Mix all together.
Sift together:
2 or 3 Cups flour
1 Teaspoon cloves
½ Teaspoon black pepper
½ Teaspoons salt

Mrs. Florence Miller

1 Teaspoon baking powder
1 Heaping teaspoon cinnamon
Add to mixture. Then mix in 3 Drops anise oil.
Add enough flour to make a stiff dough.
Chill. Bake at 350 degrees until golden brown — about 10 to 15 minutes.

Mrs. Miller often uses 1 cup molasses and 1 cup white syrup in place of the 2 cups molasses, for a lighter dough. She cautioned that when using the 2-cup molasses recipe, be sure to watch cooking time closely, because a molasses-rich recipe will taste bitter if over-cooked.

Quick Butter Milk Rolls

1 Cup lukewarm buttermilk
1 Teaspoon sugar
¼ Teaspoon soda
3 Tablespoons melted shortening
1 Package yeast
Combine ingredients until yeast and sugar are dissolved.

A Dash of Flavor

Add:

2½ Cups sifted flour
1 Teaspoon baking powder
1 Teaspoon salt

Knead until smooth. Cover and let stand for 10 minutes. Make into rolls (buns, cinnamon rolls, etc.). Cover and let rise about 30 minutes and bake in 350-degree oven.

Scalloped Cabbage

4 Cups shredded raw cabbage
1½ Cups water
3 Tablespoons butter
3 Tablespoons flour
1½ Teaspoons salt
1 Cup milk
½ Cup liquid from cooked cabbage
1 Cup cooked ground beef

Put cabbage in rapidly boiling water, cover and cook three minutes. Drain thoroughly, saving ½ cup liquid. Make a white sauce of butter, flour, salt, milk and liquid from cabbage.

In 1½-quart greased baking dish, arrange alternate layers of cabbage, white sauce and beef, topping the dish with buttered crumbs. Bake in 400-degree oven for 15 minutes. Do not over bake.

Salmon Shortcake

1 16-Ounce can salmon or tuna
2 Tablespoons mayonnaise
1 Teaspoon lemon juice

Drain and flake salmon and mix well with other ingredients. Reserve. Sift together:

2 Cups flour
2 Teaspoons baking powder
¾ Teaspoons salt

Cut in:

6 Tablespoons shortening

Beat together:

1 Egg
½ Cup milk

Stir into flour mixture.

Turn dough on floured board; knead 12 strokes. Divide in half. Pat half into a greased 8-inch cake pan; spread with salmon mixture. Pat out remaining dough to fit on top. Brush with milk. Bake in 425-degree oven 20 to 25 minutes.

Shortcake Sauce

Combine one 16-ounce can peas and 1 can cream of mushroom soup. Heat and serve over wedges of shortcake. Creamed mixed vegetables also make delicious sauce.

For those who still have pheasants in the freezer, here's a favorite of Mrs. Miller's.

Smothered Pheasant

Cut up pheasant and bone. Flour pieces in following:

1 Cup flour
2 Teaspoons salt
¼ Teaspoon pepper
½ Teaspoon celery salt
1 Teaspoon paprika

Fry pieces in hot fat. Brown both sides. Sprinkle remaining seasoned flour over pheasant and brown slightly. Pour over the browned pheasant: 2 Cups hot sweet or sour cream. Sour cream is best. May use half the cream and a can of cream of mushroom soup. Add more liquid to halt cover. Bake in 325-degree oven until tender, about 45 to 60 minutes. Can be made in electric skillet.

Bicentennial Salad

Bottom layer: 1 box red raspberry gelatin dissolved in 2 cups hot water. Pour into 2-quart mold. Chill until set.

Middle layer: Dissolve one envelope plain gelatin in ¼ cup cold water. Heat 2 cup coffee cream or rich milk and 1 cup sugar (do not boil). Stir gelatin mixture into hot syrup. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla and 8-ounce package cream cheese and ½ cup nuts. Chill until thick and pour over first layer.

Top layer: 1 package raspberry gelatin dissolved in 1 cup hot water. Add 1 no. 303 can blueberries, juice and all. Chill and pour over second layer.

Cheer Up Ugly Phone Book

By Phyllis Fiarotta

We all have a telephone book. It is the one book that has become part of the American way of life. Although the phone companies are making efforts to design more attractive covers, they still leave something to be desired. Give your book one of these attractive covers and it can make its public debut.

1. Measure the height of the book and the width from one cover around to the other. Cut a piece of felt with 8 inches added to the width and ¼ inch to the height.
2. Fold over 4 inches at both widths and sew along the top and bottom to form a sleeve at each end. When sewing the sleeves in place, sew ¼ inch in from the edge. Continue to sew across going from one sleeve to the other for stitch continuity.
3. The appliques are felt and glued in place with white glue. Squeeze glue about ¼ inch in from the edges. Wipe off any excess with a damp sponge.

4. The design of the cover can cover a wide range of subjects. Here are some examples:

Hospitality: Cut a simple bowl and top it with apples, pears, peaches, oranges, plums, berries and a banana.

Name and Number: Cut out your family name and telephone number in block letters.

No Place Like Home: Cut out a simple house and front yard that resembles your own home.

Hello: Cut a large phone shape with a dial and curlicue wire. Cut the word "Hello" in block letters.

Friends and Gossip: Cut simple shapes with facial features and various hairdos. Add a phone receiver to each face connected with a wire of circles.

5. Slip the covers of the book into the sleeves of the cover.

No Thank You? Maybe You Goofed

Dear Ann Landers: The word is, "If you want millions of people to read it, write to Ann Landers." Please print this letter because what I have to say is important.

I work in a large hospital. Every day we receive hundreds of pieces of mail. Frequently "get-well" cards with cash arrive, addressed to the hospital. This means we must open the envelope. More often than not the information inside is inadequate. The card says, "Dear Mary" — or "Dear Joe."

Tell your readers to address their cards and letters as follows: patient's full name, room number or department (if possible), and a return address would be a big help.

People often wonder why they don't receive a "thank you." Maybe the card with the money was never received.

Frustrated
Dear Frus: May I tag along? Readers often send stamped envelopes addressed to me instead of to themselves. And they wonder why they don't get an answer. Thanks a heap.

World of Women Piano Can Be Forte

By Linda Ulrich

As a piano teacher, Joan Reist considers it her responsibility to show her students that "if they go about it right, they can have a happy experience."

Mrs. Reist is a part-time instructor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln where she works with music majors who are not keyboard majors helping them develop piano proficiency. She also teaches 28 students ages 6-16 in her group studio in her home.

As a National Piano Foundation consultant she trains teachers in group piano instruction.

And as adjudicator at music festivals across the country, she helps students share musical knowledge and helps "recycle" pieces by learning "new ways to do old things," things they already know.

As second vice president of the Nebraska Music Teachers Assn., she is in charge of student auditions.

"If I stop and think about what percent of my life is spent dealing with music in some way, it's almost 100%," she said. "Music is universal. It is something we will always have. Because of the nature of it, it can mean a lot of different things to a lot of different people. I would like to share with kids what I know about music."

Admitting that students vary greatly in ability, she noted that "some kids are born with super coordination, a feeling for music, an ability to hear music." However, "music instruction doesn't have to be limited to those kids."

Her emphasis, both personally and professionally, is one the positive: "Students should have a really positive experience about everything they play."

Piano Fantastic

She thinks the piano is not only a "fantastic performing instrument" but also "the best and most efficient teaching instrument."

Any basic music fundamental is much more obvious when played on the piano, she said.

Thus Mrs. Reist teaches keyboard "primarily because I feel I can teach all the fundamentals, the basic grammar of music and how to use that grammar."

In addition, "teaching music helps me to help a student develop some other skills," she said. "He learns coordination, self-discipline and he learns quite a lot about himself and how he learns."

The rationale behind teaching students in pairs and large groups is that "they learn as well from each other as from me," Mrs. Reist said. "Music is a social art and should be shared."

Better Chance

In groups, students also have a better chance to learn to listen to music critically and how to evaluate it, she said.

While individual goals may vary, one overall goal Mrs. Reist has for her students is that at their own level, "I want them to know as much about music as they can know and to feel a real sense of achievement."

Regardless of whether a student continues to play an instrument after he or she stops taking lessons, "knowing about music makes them better listeners and more curious about it," she said, and they can better appreciate what it takes technically and intellectually to produce good music.

Mrs. Reist's husband, Wesley, is a professional musician and professor of woodwind instruments at UNL. They have a daughter, Margaret, 15.

Dear Mr. Corn:
What is the main advantage of the Gerber convention over Blackwood?

Acres Few
San Francisco
Answer: There are two. Most important, one can play at a four level contract after finding too few aces. With Blackwood, the response forces to the five level. Another advantage is over no trump openings. Jumps to four no trump are invitational, therefore, four clubs is a convenient way to ask for aces.

The ACBL Bulletin tells this story: "Are you THE Mr. Gerber?" asked the sweet young thing, and John Gerber said, "No, I'm not the baby food king." Whereupon the young lady said, "No, not that one, I mean the four no trump one."

Dear Mr. Corn:
Are doubles of opening three bids for takeout or for penalties? I passed my partner's double of three diamonds and they made an overtrick. Should I have bid with?

♠ J 7 2 1 18-A
♥ K 9 8 6 3
♣ 10 8 7 2

Laid Out
Fort Worth, Tex.
Answer: Lacking any specific agreement to the contrary, these doubles are for takeout. Responder passes only when he has enough opposing trumps to make a penalty a better bet than one's own contract. Some play the Fishbein convention which specifies that doubles of three bids are for penalties. However, this convention has limited usage and must be agreed to beforehand. I would have definitely bid three hearts with your hand.

Dark Contract
Elizabethtown, N.C.
Answer: A Blackwood inquiry for kings must be preceded by a four no trump bid "asking for aces." After the zero response, five no trump asks for kings and partner should know where all the aces are.

Grand Jury
San Francisco
Answer: It is unusual for a preemptor to bid again without cooperation from partner. However, there is nothing unethical about it at all. It might not be good bridge but that has nothing to do with ethics.

By the way, what were two passed hands doing at four and five hearts?

By the way, what were two passed hands doing at four and five hearts?

DRAWING BY DANIEL THOMSON

History Rang 'Oer the Plains

Some Nebraskans brought their chunk of American history with them to the flat plains of the Midwest.

On his grandmother's side of the family, Dean Thomson traces his ancestry to William Hurry, who is believed to have rung the Liberty Bell when the Declaration of Independence was signed in 1776.

There is some question to the authenticity of the claim, Thomson said, but he believes an old clipping from the Philadelphia Record and family tradition passed from generation to generation substantiate the story.

The undated newspaper clipping appears to be about 50 years old and was written by Samuel Barbee, who believed the bell ringer should be honored in history.

"There are a number of traditions, but no facts. But William Hurry lies in the graveyard, where a very old monument is inscribed: In Memory of William Hurry, who departed this life Oct. 22, 1781 (the day Cornwallis surrendered to Gen. George Washington)."

More Information

Barbee coupled the date of Hurry's death to an additional bit of information from the records of Philadelphia's Pine St. Church near where Hurry is buried:

"The history of Pine St. Church contains the name of William Hurry as 'bellman and janitor of the old statehouse (where the bell was rung) and who is the reputed bell ringer.' According to the inscription, (he) died on the day the news of 'the surrender of Cornwallis' first reached Philadelphia."

Barbee then asked that a monument be erected in Independence Hall honoring Hurry with the words, "The Old Bell Ringer Died for Joy."

According to the traditions handed down in Thomson's family, Hurry's son stood at the bottom of the stairs and yelled "Ring father, ring" when the Declaration of Independence was signed.

Tape in Drawer

"I have a tape in my drawer with the voice of my 100-year-old grandfather telling the family story with the words 'ring, father ring,'" Thomson said.

Blanche Klinefelter, Thomson's grandmother, brought the tradition of the bell ringer to Nebraska in 1905 when she married Herbert James Thomson and moved from Pittsburgh, Pa., to Palmyra.

The couple had eight children, and their grandson Dean recalled the adult descendants still living in Nebraska:

George and Keith Thomson, Palmyra; Alfred Thomson, Palmyra, and sons Dean, Palmyra, and Cloyd, Lincoln; May Lamb and daughter Janet Twohig, both Unadilla; Alma Caddy and her son, Greg, both Omaha, and daughter Paula Sitzman, Lincoln; Arthur Thomson, Palmyra, and his daughter Lorraine and son Barry, both Lincoln; Virginia Leith, Palmyra; Sandra Sykes, Lincoln; Rachael Johnson, Eagle; Vera Haupt, Lincoln; Linda Rosenthal, Lincoln; Wanda Hagstrom, Scottsbluff; and Carolyn Golden, Dunning.

Women Esteemed in Pioneer Life

"I wore a white dotted Swiss dress made from one of mother's, but it was my new dress; and a white sunbonnet. That was a red letter day to me, in memory."

When Arthur's wife Margaret died in 1927, her obituary reflected the importance women held in a pioneer home:

"She came to Nebraska when it was a bare prairie. There was no Palmyra or even Lincoln. She worked cheerfully in the fields or in the home striving to instill into her children's minds the things worth while."

During her 91-year-life she endured much — The death of three children in infancy, drouth and hunger. But she never lost her rock-hard faith in God and her love of the new land as her obituary recorded:

"She often said she was living in a new world as she saw the many wonderful inventions that had come to pass in her day, the telephone, the automobile, the radio and the airplane."

Dean Thomson learned much by tracing the history of his family. His three children, Paul, 10, Daniel, 9, and Sharon, 2, are well aware of their past and eagerly listen to stories of their ancestors.

Perhaps the Frenchman de Toqueville could coldly dissect the innards of the new world through the cultural window of 17th Century Europe, but he didn't understand the thumping of the warm, new heart that became America.

Horoscope By Jeane Dixon

Monday, Jan. 19

Your birthday today: Specialization goes hand in hand with fast-changing conditions. New technology displaces old, precipitates paradoxical or critical decisions. Material success depends upon how well you attend to details during conversions from one way of doing things to another. Relationships are at a disadvantage, as people expect more from you than circumstances permit you to give. Today's natives are natural leaders.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: You attract public attention now; try to look your best. Certain encounters mean more this week; decide which ones to go after. Personal touches work.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Figure out early what is essential to productive effort. Optimism is the mood and cooperation is plentiful. Tend to your health and try to relieve tension.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Talk goes in circles. Avoid arguments in career matters even if it means doing extra work for low pay. Approach money conservatively; no shortcut is worth it.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: You're intellectually stimulated today. Just remember that you aren't the target for current criticism; unless you're alert, you won't see the complexities of family situations.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Investment is favored today. Spend money to prove conditions on the homefront or your earning capacity. Expect dissent from associates; don't make a big issue of it.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Old problems yield to bold, novel methods. What seemed important turns out to be unnecessary. The community needs your contribution of time and advice. Explore new territory.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Be skeptical of good and bad news, and find your own common-sense interpretation. Make a census of possessions, and put everything in its proper place.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Everyone else seems free to make outrageous remarks, but just a mild comment from you provokes a reaction. You needn't go along with the crowd or advertise what you're up to.

Hazel and Carl Almquist pick out food for an emergency food box from the shelves of the East Lincoln Christian Church Pantry.

Almquists Give Time to Food Program

Carl and Hazel Almquist come to the East Lincoln Christian Church food pantry everyday. For the past four years, the retired couple has spent 25 hours a week managing the pantry.

The Almquists are volunteers, as are most of the directors and countless other church members working for the nine food pantries coordinated by the Lincoln Fellowship of Churches.

East Lincoln's food pantry looked like a small grocery store the day the photographer visited it, but the Almquists apologized for what they considered its skimpy stock.

Busier Times

"The reason we're low," said Mrs. Almquist, "is that we've been especially busy since the middle of September and the man who usually brings in the food is gone on vacation."

Last year, East Lincoln served an average of 20 families, or 76 people, a month. "One week we'll pack 10 orders, another week two," said Almquist. He said emergencies usually bunch up near the end of a month and during summer, when people are more apt to move. "When it's really cold, they stay inside and make do."

What goes into emergency food boxes?

"Some pantries plan menus," said Mrs. Almquist, "but we just put in a variety of food — and plenty." She said each order usually includes cereal, milk, bread and margarine, canned fruits and vegetables and main dishes, flour, sugar, coffee and fruit juice. Peanut butter is a must, she added.

Emergencies Differ

And what kinds of emergencies send agencies (such as the Lincoln Police, Lincoln Action Program, Indian Center, County Welfare Office and City Mission) to the pantries for food?

The Almquists said emergencies range from end-of-the-month shortages, when welfare or pay checks run out, to new-family-in-town crises, such as waiting for that first pay check or using up available cash on utility deposits.

Among the saddest of emergencies is desertion of children.

The Almquists don't seem impressed with the amount of time they volunteer in managing the pantry. "Some people spend more time than we do" making the program work, they point out.

But sometimes, admits Hazel Almquist, "you have a real good feeling if you fix a box and know you are feeding children."

Uniting Church Is Bureaucratic

(c) Chicago Daily News

"Maybe Jesus doesn't want only one church," says the Rev. Dr. Martin E. Marty, Lutheran church historian, author and editor, in U.S. Catholic Magazine.

"I'm utterly bored by (the question of) a single jurisdiction," he said in answer to the question of whether "the ul-imate goal" is to get all Christian churches under one umbrella.

"To me that's a secular question: it's a bureaucratic question," said Dr. Marty.

He called it "a denial of what the biblical and theological pictures of Christianity are all about" to require the integrating and "meshing" of everything Christian.

Food Pantries Receive Setback

By Anita Fussell

Lincoln's Food Pantry Program, an emergency food service coordinated by the Lincoln Fellowship of Churches, received a karate chop to the backbone of one of its food supply sources.

Local Hinky Dinky stores are no longer accepting manufacturers' coupons from churches or pantries in exchange for damaged goods.

The pantry program, which Lincoln police called one of the best things ever to happen in Lincoln, also depends heavily on direct donations of food and money from city churches.

Equal Rights

Washington (UPI) — Nancy McConnell, coordinator of the United Methodist Church's "ERA Support Project" has predicted that the Equal Rights Constitutional Amendment will be passed this year, in part because of support for the amendment by President and Mrs. Ford.

But no church, according to one pastor, has the budget to contribute the thousands of dollars needed to replace the worth of the coupons to those pantries using them.

Gradual Halt

Allen Noddle at Hinky Dinky's Omaha headquarters said the food chain became aware of the coupon arrangement in Lincoln six to eight weeks ago.

Since then, according to local sources, coupon redemption for damaged foods has gradually come to a halt.

Noddle, while saying it was unfortunate that a good program was hurt, explained it is against the law for the coupons to be redeemed unless the customer purchases the products promoted by the coupons.

Not all pantries used the coupon system to obtain food. Since most of the pantries were in operation before the coordinated program began in 1973, each pantry set its own policy on how to stock its shelves.

Lincoln Fellowship of Churches personnel were reluctant to comment on the situation since that office operates only as a clearinghouse for the nine pantries.

Principles

In capsule form, the food pantry program operates on four principles:

1. Approved referral agencies request food from the pantries for emergency cases.
2. Local pantries usually have no contact with persons receiving food. Agencies tell the pantries only the size of a family, except for mention of babies and dietary problems.
3. For each request, a pantry boxes a week's supply of food, which the agency picks up and delivers.
4. Requisitions for food are filled out in triplicate one for the referral agency, one for the pantry, and one for the LFC office, which keeps a master file.

100% Increase

This system, everyone involved agreed, cuts down on abuses. It keeps people from making the rounds of agencies or pantries.

In 1975, the pantries served 4,303 people, a 100% increase over the 2,189 persons served in 1974.

East Lincoln Christian Church serviced the largest number of people in 1975, averaging 20 families (76 people) a month. The Metro Pantry located at Tabitha Home averaged 17 families (69 people) and Southeast Presbyterian Church Pantry averaged 15 families (60 people).

Mrs. Freda Shupbach and Mrs. Verneille Shamburg cochair the pantry program, now in its third year.

Famine Relief

Los Angeles (UPI) — Organizers of last summer's anniversary celebration marking Billy Graham's 25th year as an active evangelist have announced they will donate $25,000 of the celebration income for famine relief.

Religion Notes

Beckmann to Bangladesh

Pastor David Beckmann and his wife, Janet, leave today for Bangladesh, where Pastor Beckmann will serve through the Lutheran World Federation.

Beckmann, 27, a native of Lincoln, was in the first graduating class of Concordia Seminary in Exile, formed after the president of Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, Mo., was suspended in the doctrinal controversy of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

He is a graduate of Yale and the London School of Economics, where last year he earned a master's degree.

Author of "Eden Revival" (Concordia Publishing House), a book about native Pentecostal churches in Africa, Beckmann has traveled five continents. His work in Bangladesh will draw on his training as both pastor and economist.

Jackson in Omaha

Omaha — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, president of Operation PUSH, Chicago, will preach here today for the 25th anniversary celebration of the Salem Baptist Church Inspirational Choir. Services will be held at 10:45 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

On Saturday evening, the choir and guests presented a special musical service led by Ms. Doretha Wade, minister of music.

Missionary to Talk

The Rev. Theodore Hard, missionary to Korea since 1954, will speak at Faith Orthodox Presbyterian Church, 1740 W. Burnham, next Sunday at 9:30 and 10:30 a.m.

Hard, associate professor of theology at Korea Theological Seminary, Pusan, Korea, will give an illustrated talk of his personal experiences in Korea.

Vatican's Sex View Is 'Positive'

New York (AP) — While condemning the modern erosion of sex standards, the new Roman Catholic declaration on sexual ethics emphasizes the importance of sexuality and the "moral goodness" of sexual union in marriage.

Human beings are "so profoundly affected by sexuality" that it is a key factor in giving "to each individual's life the principal traits that distinguish it," says the document issued Thursday by the Vatican.

It adds that sex gives a person the biological, psychological and spiritual characteristics that "largely condition his or her progress toward maturity" and involvement in society.

This positive evaluation of sex, differing from older negative Church teachings about it, says that only respect for the definitive quality of sex "insures the moral goodness" of sexual intercourse in marriage.

The Church statement hits at the contemporary confusion, downgrading of sex standards and "widespread aberrant modes of behavior" that violate the "true moral exigencies of the human person."

The decline in sex morals is linked with "the loss of a sense of God," the statement says, and has been "engendered by the commercialization of vice, with the unrestrained licentiousness of so many public entertainments and publications, as well as with the neglect of modesty."

Nesmith: 'Stewards' Activity Is Needed

Good citizens should be willing to involve themselves in the "peck of trouble" abroad in the world, the Rev. Dr. Richard Nesmith told 250 people attending the Presidents' Breakfast at the Nebraska Water Conference this week.

For many with a faith commitment, said the senior minister of Trinity United Methodist Church, life is a gift of God and we are stewards for God.

But "either before God or our children," he said, "every person is a trustee of the earth." And people need to learn some skills, the requirements that go into being a trustee.

3 Skills

Nesmith said the three primary skills we need to learn are:

- To sharpen values, reducing them from vague generalities to concrete issues. "We must sharpen the issues between such values as freedom and order, nationalism and global consciousness, consuming and conserving."
- To deal with increasing complexity, "whether we talk of mass transportation, food distribution or how long to let people keep on drilling wells. We can't always assume the expert has the answer any more."
- To become honest politically. If people take governing the earth seriously, they will be ready to tackle hot issues, he said. "Better a hot democracy," he concluded, "than a cold tyranny."

Inspiring Words
by Bob and Ross Metcalf

"The great law of culture is," writes Thomas Carlyle in 1827, "Let each become all that he was created capable of being." When a baby is born he harbors in his own small self enormous capabilities, but by the time he is grown, many of these have been cut off or channelled away. It is difficult to attain adulthood without destroying those parts of ourself that are not essential to maintaining our livelihood. But there is a poet buried inside each man, poets tell us — we can all create, on our very own something that is typically ours — and most valuable because of what it says about our unburied nature.

Dr. Sheldon H. Cherry

Doctor Speaks Out Against Overuse Of Menopause Pill

By Patricia McCormack, UPI

Millions of menopausal and post-menopausal women regularly pop "fountain of youth" pills containing estrogen.

But Dr. Sheldon H. Cherry, an obstetrician and gynecologist with Mount Sinai Medical School in New York, says only about 20% of such females need estrogen-replacement therapy — and not nearly in the high dosage in current use.

The critic of misuse of estrogen-replacement therapy said in an interview that more than 25 million prescriptions are written each year for the "fountain of youth" pills.

Menopausal and post-menopausal women spend around $80 million a year on the pills, according to Dr. Cherry, author of a new book, "The Menopause Myth."

Estrogen in the youth pill is intended to help make up for the lessened production of the hormone once a woman starts through menopause.

Hold the Hands of Time

Dr. Cherry said it became the "in" thing in the 1960s to prescribe the pills which many women believe will help hold back hands of time that wrinkle skin and diminish the zest for life.

"Estrogen does not prevent the aging process, which is determined by race, genes and physiology," he said.

"Further, not all postmenopausal women are estrogen-deficient."

"The only symptoms which disappear with regularity after estrogen-replacement therapy are those of vasomotor origin, namely hot flashes and sweats. The only sign of estrogen deficiency which is improved is that of dryness and thinning of the vagina."

There is some suggestion of a link between cancer of the lining of the uterus and estrogen-replacement therapy. Studies demonstrating such a link were published a while back in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Dr. Cherry says one out every 1,000 post-menopausal women per year develop cancer of the lining of the uterus. Among women who have taken estrogen-replacement medicine during the menopause, he said, the proportion is four or five per 1,000.

Only for Severe Symptoms

Dr. Cherry said the vast majority of women will need only education, reassurance, health mental outlook, exercise and good dietary habits as they pass through the menopausal phase of life.

"For the smaller percentage of women with severe symptoms requiring treatment, a low dose of an oral tablet on a three out of four weeks schedule will diminish symptoms and not cause bleeding," he said.

"There is good evidence that estrogen use may also cause an increase in blood clots in the legs and brain. This is especially true with oral contraceptives (containing estrogen)."

He believes American women who suffer from menopause expect to become cranky, frustrated, sexless old ladies.

His theory: worry over such things very often will make the post-menopausal woman just that.

Among the points made in his book are these:

Menopause is a symptom, not the cause of aging.

Sexual desire is not lessened by menopause; it often is increased.

Dr. Cherry said physical fitness comes closest to being a fountain of youth for the woman — and man — going through or past the change of life.

Male Menopause

Dr. Cherry said he's frequently asked if males experience menopause.

"However, there is no change of physiologic state in men to compare to that of the female (the ovaries shutting down)."

"In men the aging process is more gradual; there is not definite hormonal change of the type associated with the climacteric in women."

"Despite this we are now aware of emotional changes in men at middle age that some call 'the male menopause.'"

Dr. Cherry said men get upset about wrinkles, depressed over the condition of their life or job.

"Unresolved neurotic conflicts come to the surface," he said.

"Many men experience a sudden lack of interest in their families and a need for extramarital sexual outlets at this stage of life."

Another common symptom of male "change" may be a sudden increased interest in athletics and physical conditioning.

To wives of such husbands, Dr. Cherry recommended: "Understanding the process at work is important."

"Patience, toleration and love are best. Avoid hostility, belittling, and a surly or retaliatory attitude."

College Powers' Victories Few in NCAA Meetings

By Virgil Parker

St. Louis — The most interesting meeting — and possibly the most important — at the 70th annual NCAA convention occurred right after adjournment here late Saturday afternoon.

While the rest of the 1,000 delegates scattered for the exits, leaving behind an array of empty coffee cups, cigar butts and their frustrations, eight men moved around a table at the back of the huge, empty hall.

The convention had ended without meaningful action on reorganization of the NCAA — a proposal for a separate division encompassing the 'super' college football powers of the nation had been on the agenda — or considering a widely publicized plan for national championship football playoffs.

Seated around the table in earnest conversation were Chuck Neinas, commissioner of the Big Eight Conference; Big Ten commissioner Wayne Duke; Father Edmund Joyce, vice president and chairman of the athletic board at Notre Dame; Boyd McWhorter, commissioner of the Southeastern Conference; Southwest Conference commissioner Cliff Speegle; Penn State athletic director Ed Czekaj; Atlantic Coast Conference commissioner Bob James; and Stan Bates, commissioner of the Western Athletic Conference.

The group was close-mouthed after the meeting. "We just sat down to talk about what had happened and assess the situation," the Big Ten's Duke said with a sly smile. "I suppose you're right," he then answered when asked whether the group would be meeting again.

No Revolt

Although no one among the large school representatives is openly talking about a "revolt" or "walkout" from the NCAA, one piece of legislation was particularly damaging to the big schools and the lack of action on others was disappointing.

"I suppose you'd have to say they threw us enough crumbs to try to pacify us," Nebraska faculty representative Keith Broman observed. "But this convention highlights the need for a more vigorous approach to reorganization."

The damaging legislation regarded the size of coaching staffs. The convention refused to relent on the restriction imposed during last summer's special session in Chicago — a head coach and eight assistants.

One of the 'crumbs' was to authorize two graduate assistants for each team fielded — thus four will be okay since Nebraska has both a freshman and varsity program — but the Huskers employ considerably more than the allowed eight fulltime assistants under head coach Tom Osborne.

Mike Corgan, John Melton,

Jan. 18, 1976

Lincoln, Neb. 1D

Clete Fischer, Monte Kiffin, Warren Powers, Bill Myles, George Darlington, Jerry Moore and now freshman coach Guy Ingles total nine. In addition, Dick Beechner, Wilt Tenopir and Steve McKelvey moved from graduate assistant to full assistant status a year ago.

Then there is recruiting coordinator Rick Duval, who moved from the coaching ranks to the job as recruiting coordinator a year ago, and weight training coach Boyd Epley.

Interpretation To Follow
NCAA legal counsel Warren Brown said an interpretation would be forthcoming on who all will have to be counted against the eight.

The reduction must be made by this August — just seven months hence.

"We thought one of the amendments, which would have delayed the action at least one year, would have been approved in order to give the disposed coaches time to find other jobs," Broman observed sadly.

The 'crumbs' thrown the big schools included the lifting of squad restrictions for home and away football games; an increase from 75 to 95 the number of football prospects who can be brought to Lincoln for a campus visit; allowed basketball visits up from 12 to 18; and the establishment of a reclassification committee (which could lead to the 'super' division) which will report to next year's convention.

"If the convention proved anything," Broman said, "it dramatically pointed up the need for reorganization. I'm sure we'll be trying to figure out a way to work within the system."

Two Choices

"I think we have two choices," Walker said. "We can either die a slow death or come out swinging. I'm for coming out swinging."

The idea which seems to be gaining support is the "Father Joyce" plan. It's rumored in lobby conversations to form an association or federation of the 80 top football powers and then ask for a return under the overall NCAA umbrella as an allied or associate member.

Most representatives of the larger schools feel the NCAA — as it is presently structured — is not only too large and unwieldy, but includes members with widely varying problems.

"The convention graphically illustrated the need for reorganization," Broman reiterated. "The NCAA continues to drive the Division I schools into a corner and is forcing a fight for a realignment."

The convention turned out to be an exercise in frustration and futility. Two of the main issues — reorganization and national championship playoffs — were almost, if not totally, ignored.

The way football squad limits — which were 48 on the road and 60 at home during the past year — were lifted was an example of the time-consuming frustration.

First on the agenda under that subject was a motion to lift all restrictions. After much debate and haggling — it failed.

Two Others Pass

But when a motion to lift home limits passed, a vote followed to let the individual conferences set travel limits — without any should they so choose. Three votes later the assembly was right back where an affirmative vote on the first issue would have put them.

Scholarships based on 'need' was turned down by a 5-1 margin three years ago. This week, such a plan was refused after the first vote came out in a dead heat, 119-119, then finally failed on a roll call vote, 112-120.

"All that means is we had better be prepared to see it pass next year," Oklahoma's Walker observed, "or being a group of our own by that time."

This convention was billed as one which would chart the destiny and direction of college athletics for years to come.

It looks like some of the members are going to have to chart their own.

NU Still Standing After Big Eight Opening Shoot-Out

Huskers, Fort Gun Down KSU, 65-59

By Dave Sittler

Manhattan, Kan. — When the smoke had cleared away Saturday afternoon, folks down here weren't sure if they had been in Ahearn Fieldhouse or the O.K. Corral.

Listening to Jerry Fort tell it, it sounded more like the corral. "Once during the second half I told Chuckie Williams that it looked like we were in a real shootout," Fort said.

In the Big Eight Conference basketball opener and showdown for both schools, Nebraska's Fort and Kansas State's Williams put on their own rendition of Doc Holliday and Wyatt Earp's shootout.

Luckily for the Cornhuskers, Fort was a shade quicker to the draw, and he was hotter than a pistol.

TV Audience

In one of his finest performances for Nebraska — and there have been many the past four years — Fort shot the eyes out of the basket and led the Huskers to a rousing, 65-59 win over the Wildcats before 8,500 fans and a regional television audience.

A senior from Chicago, Fort was absolutely uncanny, as he drilled 15 out of 20 field goal attempts and four of four free throws to finish with 34 points.

The effort by the 6-3, 170-pound Fort snapped an 18-game Kansas State winning streak on their home court and overshadowed a strong performance by Williams.

Williams, who along with Fort was an all-conference selection a year ago, tossed in 24 points to become the third leading scorer in K-State history.

"Chuckie just nodded and smiled when I mentioned the shootout to him," Fort recalled. "He's (Williams) one of the best pure shooters in the nation."

Fort came out with both guns blazing from the opening gun. Showing no effects of a 10-day Nebraska layoff, he hit his first six shots and eight out of 10 in the opening half as Nebraska trailed at intermission, 29-26.

Loves Ahearn

"I love playing in this place," Fort said of the huge Ahearn Fieldhouse barn. "The fans really get me psyched up."

For Fort, the game marked his second straight high-percentage shooting effort. Against South Carolina, Nebraska's last opponent before the conference-opener, he was 10 of 14 from the field.

The all-time Nebraska scoring leader, Fort gives complete credit for his recent shooting spree to Husker coach, Joe Cipriano.

"I was sort of down on myself during the Big Eight tournament in Kansas City," Fort recalled. "But Coach Cipriano had a talk with me and just told me not to press so much and just go out and have fun."

An obviously pleased Cipriano, who joked with the press that he "was disappointed Jerry missed those five shots," reflected on his advice to Fort.

"I think Jerry was worrying too much about the responsibility of carrying the load for the team," Cipriano said. "I told him he had given us three good years and should just go out this season and relax and get that load off his shoulders."

Losing coach Jack Hartman said, "Fort's performance didn't surprise me. He's proven he's good before today."

Disappointment

Considering the loss, Hartman was disappointed his club could not hold a nine-point (27-18) lead it had built in the first half or a couple of three-point margins down the stretch.

"We had opportunities to gain control and couldn't quite do it," Hartman said.

K-State's last three-point lead came when Guard Mike Evans hit a 15-foot jumper to put the 'Cats up, 53-50 with 4:01 left in the game.

But two quick buckets by forward Allen Holder and freshman guard Brian Banks put Nebraska ahead by one.

"Chuckie (Williams) was playing five feet off of me because they didn't think I could shoot," Banks said of the clutch basket. "I wasn't sure it would go in because I haven't hit a shot all week in practice."

Evans and Fort traded baskets before the Cornhuskers iced the wild contest with some solid, pressure free throw shooting.

Bob Siegel hit one while Banks, Larry Cox, Steve Willis and Fort all hit a pair as Nebraska improved its record to 10-4 while K-State slipped to 9-5.

Banks drew a crucial charging foul against Evans in the final moments to preserve the win.

"He (Evans) thought the foul should have been on me," Banks said. "But he ran over me and I got a foulbourn on my back to prove it."

In addition to Fort, Cipriano praised the team's defensive effort and lack of turnovers. The Huskers had only 10 miscues.

"You put all those things together," Cipriano explained, "and you're bound to win and also keep the alumni happy."

Nebraska returns home Wednesday to host Oklahoma at the Coliseum in a 7:35 p.m. contest.

Missouri Bombs Kansas, 99-69

COLUMBIA (AP) — Willie Smith, Stan Ray and Jim Kennedy combined for 70 points Saturday night as Missouri ran away from Kansas' 99-69, in the Big Eight Conference opener for both squads.

The 30-point margin was Missouri's largest ever in a Tiger-Jayhawk game played in Columbia, and extended Missouri's homecourt winning streak to 21.

Missouri scored eight straight points late in the first half for a 43-27 edge, the Tigers' best lead in the opening half. The foul-plagued Jayhawks played Missouri even in field goals for the half, but Missouri hit 17 of 2 free throws to account for its lead.

Kansas won the battle of the boards in the opening half, but quickly lost its height advantage when 7-foot Paul Mokeski and 6-10 Ken Koenigs fouled out in the first five minutes of the second half.

Missouri steadily increased its lead in the second half and held several 39-point bulges before Kansas came back. The Jayhawks ended up hitting only 32.5 per cent of their shots from the field as they dropped to 7-6.

Smith led all scorers with 25 points. Ray added 24 and 13 rebounds. Kennedy had 21 for the Tigers.

Norm Cook had 23 points and 13 rebounds to pace Kansas. Missouri jumped its record to 13-2.

'Cool' Weather In Orange Bowl

Miami (UPI)—The National Weather Service Saturday predicted unseasonably cool temperatures for Sunday's Super Bowl X game between Pittsburgh and Dallas, with temperatures expected to range from 60 to 65 degrees.

A cold front from the northwest sent the temperatures dropping to the 40's Saturday night and high winds are expected to continue for the National Football League's title game.

The service did not forecast any precipitation for the game.

State 'A' League Planned?

By Randy York

Prep Sports Editor

When Class A school administrators and athletic directors meet Monday in Grand Island to survey the future, Lincoln will submit a proposal to establish a statewide Class A athletic league, minus Omaha's Metro Conference.

Lincoln East principal Jim Hoge will present the Capital City's suggestion for an all-inclusive, expandable Class A league, which could solve major scheduling conflicts among the state's largest schools.

Lincoln administrators realize though that few will jump at the idea. They are merely curious to see how many schools will warm up to it.

"What will probably happen is we'll keep the present Trans-Nebraska, add Fremont to it, keep the Big 10 intact and Lincoln will fill in its schedules with Metro teams," predicts Eastern High principal Bill Bogar, president of the disengaging Eastern 1-80 Conference.

Nevertheless, Bogar envisions an expanded Trans-Nebraska, promoting statewide unity and solving a lot of headaches at the same time.

Here's what such a league with two divisions could look like:

East — Lincoln High, Lincoln East, Fremont, Beatrice, South Sioux City, Norfolk, Columbus and Grand Island.

West — Lincoln Southeast, Lincoln Northeast, Kearney, North Platte, Scottsbluff, Alliance, McCook and Hastings.

Lincoln Would Split Up

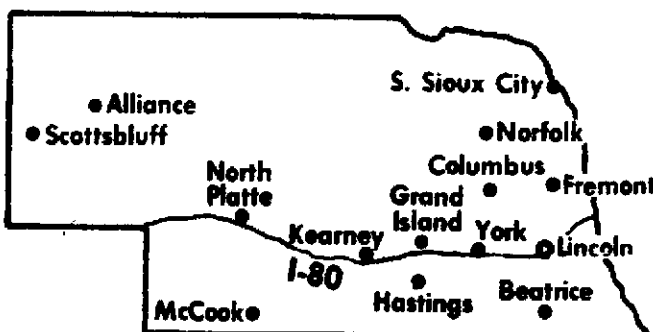

The most conspicuous part of such a setup is splitting Lincoln's four schools into two divisions. Bogar believes Lincoln could alternate divisions every two years. Grand Island and Hastings could do likewise, he adds.

Extensive travel is the most obvious drawback to such a proposal. That's why Lincoln is eager to offer its novel approach at Monday's meeting.

According to Bogar, Lincoln has the school board's blessing to innovate whatever travel is necessary to continue Lincoln's athletic policy of "statewide visibility."

Lincoln officials are curious to know how many other schools are willing to offer the same kind of moral encouragement and financial support.

In Bogar's opinion, "a Class A multi-league would encourage very strong feelings of morale throughout the state. We know most schools don't want a steady diet of Lincoln teams. Lincoln's posture has been to build the strongest conference possible. With an expanded league across the state, we can have it and cross division lines on small-scale, alternate occasions."

Is there a way these widely separated Class A schools can be merged into a multi-expandable athletic conference? Lincoln school officials will promote the idea Monday in a meeting at Grand Island.

Bogar recalls "when Lincoln High played Scottsbluff and Alliance every year. It was a healthy high school athletic situation. We're trying to take a lead, step in and suggest a viable alternative. Why should there be a big vacuum? We're not hung up on playing in this end of the state."

Travel Positive Experience

Bogar likes the experience of travel for high school athletes. "Omaha has built a wall around itself and lives in a self-contained world," he notes.

"Look at how the Trans-Nebraska has bolstered North Platte," says Bogar. "I know Scottsbluff wants to keep its Wyoming and South Dakota ties. They can do both and still be in a new league. What about South Sioux City? With the fold of the Apollo, is anybody going to their rescue?"

Bogar believes declining enrollment in a couple of Omaha schools and prosperity at York will elevate the latter to Class A status again.

"With a multi-expandable league, York can be taken care of, too," he says. "The NSAA won't take the lead in classification and it's hurting people."

"I think a classification should be established and frozen for four years," Bogar offers. "During that time, changes won't be so abrupt to work a hardship on anyone. After awhile, you can reanalyze and rearrange proposals accordingly."

The Lincoln High principal admits there are no easy answers to solve the dilemma for non-Omaha Class A schools. But he'd like to see the questions tackled, as elusive as they are.

And some stands taken, as tough as that can be.

Steeler Defense Presents Super Roadblock to Dallas Title

By Murray Chass

(c) New York Times

Miami — Everyone knows about the Pittsburgh Steelers' defensive front four, that gargantuan group that is as menacing and intimidating as a street gang in a dark alley.

Then there is the Steelers' secondary, which Green Bay coach Bart Starr says does as fine a job with its double coverage of wide receivers as any unit in the National Football League.

And, finally, there are the Pittsburgh linebackers. "I like the front four," Kansas City coach Paul Wiggin says, "and I like the secondary. But when it comes right down to it, I love those linebackers. They're sensational."

Put the front four, the secondary and the linebackers together and they form the roadblock that will confront the Dallas Cowboys in the Super Bowl Sunday. With such an impregnable unit facing them, how do the Cowboys expect to have a chance to knock off the defending champions?

Most people don't think they have a chance, but Tom Landry hasn't spent the last two weeks doodling designs instead of devising a game plan. If there's any mind mumble and devious enough to plot a strategy for the overthrow of the Steelers, it's Landry's.

Just what he has devised remains to be seen, but Starr and Wiggin, two coaches whose teams played both the Steelers and the Cowboys this season, don't expect to see either team do anything drastically different from the style of play they have used all season.

"You get there," Starr said the other day by telephone from cold, snowy Green Bay, "by being sound and running very successful programs. In a game like that, you go with what got you there. You might make a slight change to take advantage of an individual's idiosyncrasies, but that's all."

"They won't do anything new or bizarre," Wiggin said. "Dallas will have a wrinkle or two that you might never have seen before, but Pittsburgh is a team that adapts to all sorts of things. They're a team that says, 'If you come in any area, I'm going to kill you.'"

Short of committing mayhem, the Steelers figure to be well suited to stopping the Cowboy's primary offensive thrust.

The Steelers' front four is rugged against the run, which means the Dallas offensive line — people like Rayfield Wright, Blaine Nye and Ralph Neely — will have to blow open some holes if the runners are to get anywhere. They don't figure to get too far running outside because the linebackers are fast enough to sprint out and stop these efforts.

The Steelers also rely on Jack Ham, Jack Lambert and Andy Russell to use their speed and mobility in pass coverage. Because that trio of all-pro linebackers can cover on passes so adeptly, the cornerbacks and safeties can double-cover the wide receivers and leave the backs and tight end to the linebackers.

That should make for an interesting clash because Roger Staubach, the Dallas quarterback, has shown an increasing appetite for throwing to Preston Pearson, the running back who used to handle the ball for Pittsburgh. In the two NFC playoff games, Pearson caught 12 passes for 300 yards and three touchdowns. If the linebackers keep Staubach from getting the ball to Pearson and if the wide receivers are covered tightly, the quarterback might wind up rugging more than he had planned.

The Steeler offense is predicated not nearly as much on the passing of Terry Bradshaw as it is on the running of Franco Harris. Therefore, the Dallas defense will be aimed at stopping Harris.

Sam Rutigliano, who as an assistant coach with the New York Jets had to work on defensive plans for both Super Bowl teams this season, said Harris was perhaps the key to the whole game.

"When you play guys like Franco or O.J. (Simpson)," Rutigliano said, "you have to gear everything to stopping them. Franco gets a lot of critical yardage running inside."

The Cowboys in the last two games have proved they can stop a team's No. 1 runner. They limited Chuck Foreman of Minnesota to 56 yards in 18 carries (16 in 10 the first half) and Lawrence McCutcheon of Los Angeles to 10 yards in 11 carries after he ran for 202 the week before.

The Cowboys credit their success to what they call their "flex" defense. If it works as successfully against Harris, the Steelers may be forced to pass more than they would like. That, in turn, may lead to interceptions, which would give Staubach more opportunities to try out Dallas' variety of offenses, including the shotgun.

Husker Women Third

Lawrence — The Nebraska women's basketball team overcame a five-point halftime deficit to claim third place in the first annual Lady Jawhawk Classic here Saturday by downing host Kansas, 50-45.

NU coach George Nicodemus praised "exceptional second half defense" as the key to the Husker win. The Huskers kept Kansas outside in the second half, and limited them to only 47 shots the entire game while Huskers put the ball up 75 times.

Sherry Brink led the Cornhusker scoring attack with 22 points, aided by Kathy Hawkins with 10.

Nebraska's record is now 8-4 on the season.

Phoenix Lead to Maltbie

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Johnny Miller's phenomenal string of successes in the Arizona desert—record-setting exploits which propelled him to the front rank of golf's greats—finally, almost certainly, came to an end Saturday.

Miller the winner of the last five tour events in this state and the top-heavy favorite here, found himself so far back that even his Pollyanna philosophy had to admit another victory was very unlikely.

I'm almost relieved it's over, Miller said following his uninspired one-over-par 72 which left him a distant eight shots back of scrambling leader Roger Maltbie after three rounds of the $200,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

Even a round in the very low 60s tomorrow doesn't look like it would make it, Miller said. "There are too many guys up there in front of me who figure to shoot 65 in the last round."

Maltbie a two-tournament winner as the 1975 Hooke of the Year, managed a hard-won 70, one under par on the 6,726 yard Phoenix Country Club course. He had a 54-hole total of 200, 13 under par.

Maltbie had to score a two-putt birdie on the final hole to hold off the surprising threat of Bob Gilder a rookie from nearby Arizona State.

Gilder fashioned a solid, five-under-par 66 in the bright, warm sunshine and was just one shot back at 201 going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $40,000 first prize.

Lee Trevino was another stroke back at 202 after a 68. Miller winner of five consecutive Arizona events, appeared out of it after a 72 left him eight shots back at 208.

I really don't care," Miller shrugged. "It had to happen sometime. I'm almost relieved it's over."

I just wasn't very motivated out there. I wasn't gritting my teeth and going at it. I wanted to at least stay close, but now I'm not even in contention. Even a round in the very low 60s tomorrow wouldn't do it."

The par three holes were his

downfall. He played them four over par, including a double bogey five on the eighth. Miller missed the green to the left, chipped on and three-putted from eight feet.

Jim Colbert shot a 70 and was in fourth place at 203. Jim Simons had a 66 and was next at 204.

Lanny Wadkins, a three-time runner-up in this event, Ben Crenshaw and Hale Irwin were at 205. Wadkins had a 66 despite a double bogey seven on the final hole. Irwin matched par 71, and Crenshaw had a 68.

Maltbie, a chipper, jaunty 24-year-old who has a habit of sticking his tongue out at putts that refuse to fall, had an erratic round that included five birdies and four bogeys.

Maltbie, who led through the first two rounds, held the top spot throughout the day despite almost constant challenges from Trevino, Irwin and the surprising Gilder, a look-alike for former basketball star Jerry West who was serving as a television commentator for this event.

Gilder had never before made the cut in a tour event but responded to the pressure with solid putting following crisp shot making following booming drives.

Colorado Defeats Sooners

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Freshman guard Emmett Lewis hit a pair of free throws with 47 seconds left in a second overtime to lift Colorado to a 71-69 triumph over Oklahoma in their Big Eight basketball opener Saturday night.

Buffalo forward Dave Logan had sent the contest into the second extra period with a 25-foot jump shot with four seconds remaining in the initial overtime.

Colorado, which trailed 38-37 at the halt, broke on top 57-48 with 9:31 remaining in regulation time, then went into an illated state. The Sooners tied the score at 60 with 2:19 left on two free throws by Kevin Jones, and neither team scored during the rest of the period.

NFL Pro Bowl May Be Halted

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, said Saturday the Pro Bowl might be cancelled.

The Pro Bowl, the National Football League's All-Star game, is scheduled to take place a week from Monday in New Orleans.

"We're flying out Monday and we're going to talk to the players in New Orleans next week," Garvey said. "There is a possibility they might decide not to play since the proceeds of the game aren't being put into our pension fund as they are supposed to."

Garvey charged the league with publicizing the game as a charity affair for the players' pension fund and then not contributing because of current contract disputes.

Garvey, whose union was sued this week by the new Tampa Bay and Seattle expansion franchises, insisted his union was not opposed to expansion and called the NFL threats to cancel the new clubs' entry next season, "suicidal."

"We're in favor of expansion and always have been," Garvey said. "We're not opposed to expansion—we're opposed to veteran players being told they have to go. We're opposed to their rights being taken away. We feel it's illegal and a violation of the Sherman Act to tell people where to go. I think reasonable people can set up a system of expansion."

Garvey also said he was not impressed by the league's threats to completely cancel the college player draft. That draft was postponed earlier this week after the expansion teams' suit.

Fur Trading Goes Long-Haired

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Writer
It's a sign of the times. The nostalgia craze has even hit the fur industry in America. "The short-haired fur is down in demand now," said Lincoln area fur buyer Del Pettigrew. "It's not very popular. The long-haired furs, raccoon, coyote, fox, like back in the 1920s, are the in thing."
For Pettigrew, the fur buying business is in full swing. He handles several thousand raccoon pelts, hundreds of coyotes, mink, muskrat, opossum, beaver, fox, and even an occasional skunk or two.
"Interest is at an all time high," he said of the fur trapping and hunting business. "Of course, that may or may not be a coincidence that the price of fur is at an all time high."

Pettigrew, who deals with several buyers in other parts of the state, says top dollar prices for furs vary greatly from region to region.
"The coyote we have in this area has a darker, coarser pelt," he said. "There's really quite a difference from the western coyote. It has a much finer fur and is quite a bit lighter in color. That's the most desirable coyote pelt."
Due to the desirability of the regional species, the costs can vary from $30 for a perfect coyote pelt in the west to $16 in the east.
Checking Color
Raccoon are much the same way with the top dollar price on a big and properly colored 'coon at around $20, Pettigrew said. "The most desirable 'coon pelt is the black and white coloring and the least desirable is the red-dish brown," he said.

"Coon make up the largest portion of fur trade for Pettigrew, who is one of two fur buyers in Lincoln. Muskrat follows and then the coyote.
"Last year the coyote clubs brought the most in," he said of the coyote harvest. "Most of them this year have been the individual hunters and a lot of the coyotes have been trapped. The clubs aren't doing as well because they need snow to help them out."
Pettigrew said most of the state's trappers trap as a hobby to supplement the family income. There are a few professional trappers or semiprofessional trappers in the state, but not many, he said.
"Actually hunters and trappers are not much of a factor on our animal populations," he said in response to interests which feel hunters and trappers are killing off all the world's wildlife. "It's habitat and the loss of it which has cut down our animal numbers. I look at this as a resource, a replenishable resource."

European Market
Europe remains the biggest market for fur trade and fashion, Pettigrew said. His furs from Lincoln are skinned, removed of flesh and fat, then shipped to Montreal for a tanning process before they are made into coats or whatever.
"I prefer the skins coming in to be completed (skinned, fleshed and dried)," he said, "but we buy them both ways — finished and unskinned."
Pettigrew's business continues to push through the pelts, even with a decline in the number being harvested this year.
"Overall, our coon processing is about the same, although some areas are down 10%," he said. "The coyote harvest is way down. We're only getting one-third the coyotes we had a year ago. I suspect that is mostly to do with the weather, though. In some areas there isn't any snow to help the hunters and in other areas there's too much snow to allow them to get around."
Still, it's been a reasonably good year for fur trading. The raccoon and muskrat fashions of the '20s are making certain of that.

Raccoon fur business is still booming. Here Susan Magor, right, and Tony Sramcik look over supply of 'coon skins at Pettigrew Fur's buying facility in Lincoln.

Lincoln's Del Pettigrew shows the difference in quality of coyote pelts with the western coyote, in hand, a lighter, finer fur worth more money for the trapper and hunter. On the floor are eastern variety coyotes with darker, coarser fur.

Eagle Refuge Bought

(c) 1976 Chicago Sun-Times
The National Wildlife Federation has acquired a southern Wisconsin refuge for bald eagles as part of its Bicentennial campaign to save the national bird from extinction.
The 150-acre refuge is hidden behind a high bluff in the Wisconsin River valley near Sauk City, Wis., 20 miles northwest of Madison.
It is a wooden hollow where eagles have been going to roost every winter for as long as natives can remember. Its tall trees have been known to harbor as many as 80 eagles, including regulars and migrants, at one time.
Nevertheless, the bald eagle population has been dwindling in the contiguous 48 states.
"Eagles are in serious trouble," said Thomas L. Kimball, executive vice president of NWF, the nation's largest conservation group. "Man has so destroyed their original habitat that they are like strangers in this land where they were made the national symbol."

Ikes Shoot Switched

The Lincoln Izak Walton League's winter steak and roast trapshoot has been cancelled for today and switched to Jan. 25, according to president Larry Schenkel.
Schenkel also noted the club's Jan. 27 dinner meeting in an invitation for all club members to turn out to air their views on the direction of the local Ikes chapter.

Rifle Range Open to Public

The University of Nebraska Rifle Club begins its open door policy Friday with the first of weekly public shooting hours offered.
The indoor range will be open to public, supervised shooting with small caliber rifles and pistols on an alternating week basis. Rifle shooters will be permitted this week.
Hours are 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Military and Naval Science Bldg., 14th and Vine. Enter through the east door.

Game Calling Is Test

There is probably no greater challenge for today's sportsman than hunting one of the predators in his state with a bow. Literally thousands of bowhunters have bagged deer and bear, maybe even an elk or an antelope, with a bow.
There is a very small percentage of that number of good bowhunters who can say they have bagged such animals as a coyote, fox, or even a bobcat with a bow and arrow.
The only successful way of getting a coyote, fox, or bobcat rug on your den wall with a bow is by using a varmint call to lure the animal within bow range and here in lies the stickler. These animals are hunters by nature and live or die by their cunning and ability to stalk prey, and as such they are much harder to fool than even an old buck whitetail.

To successfully call a predator within bow range takes a lot more skill and knowledge than the average bowhunter is willing to put out; but for those of you who are willing, the rewards are well worth the time.
First, a successful caller has to camouflage himself to blend with his surroundings and, in fact, become part of them. This includes clothing, headnet, and gloves which will blend with the background, be it a prickly pear patch or a snow-covered, oakbrush hillside.

Most of the calls on the market today are good and will bring in predators if given a chance. A bowhunter must become adept at using both the long-range rabbit squeal and the close-range squeaker-type call. The long-range call should be blown in a short, sharp series of squeals to imitate a rabbit in distress. Try to put some feeling into your calling. Picture the scene in your mind — a rabbit in distress. You'll be surprised how much you can improve the sound of a call by letting your imagination play a part in your calling patterns.

Sunday Journal and Star
Highlights From Nebraska Lincoln
An explosion and fire at Fremont's Pathfinder Hotel left 18 dead, more than 50 injured and a section of the downtown area in shambles. The death toll increased as bodies were found throughout the week following the Jan. 10 disaster apparently caused by a natural gas leak. Most of the dead were elderly residents of the apartment hotel. Omaha's Big Green lottery, the only municipally operated lottery in the country, has been declared a public nuisance and closed by a court order. The Sierra Club's attempt to block construction of the Gerald R. Ford power plant near Sutherland has been defeated in court. The Unicomm has voted to accept the controversial 1-800 toll-free telephone numbers. The Legislature also passed bills limiting the use of escrow accounts on loans and moving the state's primary election from May to September, except for the presidential primary.

Fat Henry Knox Brought Guns To Save Boston and the Army

One of America's great traditions is the self-made man, and Henry Knox was one. Self-taught, self-confident and determined, he performed one of the most amazing feats of the Revolution.

America might have lost its fight for nationhood in its infancy if Knox, a fat bookseller turned soldier, had not delivered the guns which allowed George Washington to strengthen his fledgling army and liberate Boston.

Col. Knox of the artillery, came to camp," Gen. William Heath entered in his journal 200 years ago today (Jan. 18, 1776). "He brought from Ticonderoga a fine train of artillery."

A modest recognition for a monumental deed. Knox had prevent the arrival of British supplies from the seas. Without them, it was a matter of time before the English massed enough men and equipment to defeat him.

"The want of them is so great," said Washington, "that no trouble or expense must be spared to obtain them."

So Knox, a military amateur who had been helping engineer the fortifications, came to Washington with a plan. Why not go after the guns captured from British forts on Lake Champlain?

It was impossible, but Knox, with a new colonel's commission in his pocket and only 25 years old, set out for New York on Nov. 17, 1775. Racing as best they could on horseback over frozen roads, Knox and his brother William reached Fort Ticonderoga on Dec. 5.

5,000 Pounds Each

Most of the guns captured the previous spring by Ethan Allen and Benedict Arnold were beyond use, but Knox selected 59, ranging from little 4-pounders to mighty 24-pound guns.

Some of the bigger guns weighed 5,000 pounds each. The total load, with ammunition, was about 120,000 pounds. Knox had the guns and carriages broken down and loaded onto three boats, then hurried south to prepare the land route.

William, meanwhile, began the 33-mile voyage down Lake George through a channel in the ice, which stretched a mile from each shore of the narrow lake. The first day out a boat struck a sunken rock and was freed only after exhausting labor.

Then, halfway down the lake, the big scow struck again and sank in shallow water. The guns the lake. There the real work began.

42 Sledges, 80 Teams

Everything was transferred to 42 sledges pulled by 80 teams of oxen. By Christmas eve the advance guard reached Saratoga in a heavy snowstorm. The artillery train struggled all Christmas day through three feet of fresh, powdery snow.

Following crude roads, Indian trails, or none at all, they made no better than two miles a day—all at great strain. Oxen and horses gave out and had to be abandoned. Men often pushed the sleds.

While crossing the Mohawk River above Albany one of the sledges crashed through the ice and sank. But it was too precious to abandon. Frozen men fished it out.

When things seemed unendurable, the people of the countryside found their courage and came to help. With fresh horses and men they struggled into Albany by year's end, only to be stalled by thin ice on the Hudson.

Knox spent the first days of 1776 cutting holes in the ice to force up water which froze in layers, thickening the ice until it could bear the weight of heavy guns. Where there was only open water, sleds, guns and draft animals had to be loaded on boats and rowed across.

But despite all precautions there were disasters. Knox recorded on Jan. 7 that a cannon being eased across the ice "fell into the river" and in its fall broke all the ice for 14 feet around it.

The next day they "proceeded so cautiously that before night we got over three sleds and were so lucky as to get the cannon out of the river, owing to the assistance of the good people of the city of Albany, in return for which we christened her—the Albany."

South of Albany a sleigh shattered under its load and detained the column. But then Knox plunged east into the Berkshires and reached Monterey, Mass., on Jan. 10 "after having climbed mountains from which we might almost have seen all the kingdoms of the earth."

12 Miles of Hills

Then they ran into a 12-mile stretch of dense evergreen forest and steep hills.

"It appeared to me almost a miracle that people with heavy loads should be able to get up and down such hills as are here, were lifted from icy water by freezing hands and repairs to the scow were made in the middle of the lake. But eventually each priceless piece of artillery arrived at the southern end of with anything of heavy loads," Knox marveled.

Now they had to descend from the mountains at Westfield. The teamsters took one look and refused to go. The steep incline, with overloaded sleds threatening to slide out of control on the snow and ice and crush them, was madness, they said.

"But after about three hours' persuasion they agreed to go," Knox reported.

It was as hard as they had feared. They made it by using drag chains, shoving poles under runners, anchoring check ropes from tree to tree and inching their way down.

In Springfield the weather betrayed them again. The ice held until they were over the Connecticut River, but on the other side they stuck fast in the mud of a sudden thaw.

Here the New Yorkers, exhausted and far from home, asked to be relieved. But the men of Massachusetts took up the burden and carried it home.

The way ahead was still hard, the snow deep, the winds icy, the hills steep, the forest thick. But towns along the way welcomed, fed, refreshed and cheered the weary troops.

Knox arrived at Washington's camp with an advance contingent on Jan. 18 and "the no-

... the most spectacular example of agit-prop moviemaking so far ... on an emotional assault ... highly sophisticated (and) conceived on an epic scale ... A movie like this is a gun in a struggle, and a far more effective gun than Gaudin's revolutionary movies, because though it may aim at both the heart and the mind, it strikes the heart."

Director Role for Hackman?

Hollywood (UPI) — Gene Hackman starred in four movies in 1975 and will celebrate the bicentennial year by taking a breather.

"I'm tired," said the big man. "I'll rest for a few months and think about my career. I'm pulling back from acting. I'd like to direct."

Hackman, who won the best actor Oscar in 1971 for his performance in The French Connection, may win an Academy Award nomination for reprising the role of Popeye Doyle in French Connection, Part II.

His other films were Bite the Bullet, Night Moves, and the comedy, Lucky Lady.

Most major stars are content to make a single picture a year. But Hackman starred in three 1974 pictures. In 1973 he made two. All but a couple of his films have been physically demanding.

"Acting has been a physical experience for me since Bonnie and Clyde, Hackman said, grinning. "The demands of Bite the Bullet, The Poseidon Adventure and both French Connections were terrific.

"I would cheerfully have bought my way out of Lucky Lady half way through production. I was that physically exhausted."

Hackman is a big, strong, restless guy who dislikes the slow pace of movie-making. "I choose physical roles because they're more satisfying," he said. "It's not enough for me to sit around all day waiting for a dialogue scene."

Hackman is curiously independent man, indifferent to Hollywood, although he lives in Beverly Hills with his wife and three children. He is easily a millionaire, commanding one of the highest salaries in pictures.

"I have no idea if I have the credentials to be a director," he says. "But I want to try because the director is involved in everything on a movie. Hackman is well aware no producer or studio will offer him a directing job without a catch. The catch is that he will have to star in such a film as well. His name on the marquee as an actor far outweighs his attraction as a director.

"It's the only way I'll ever get a chance to direct," he said.

3-Part Film At Sheldon

The Hour of the Furnaces, a four-hour 20 minute documentary film in three parts, will be shown at the Sheldon Art Gallery Auditorium at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The film, made in Argentina in 1968, is a classic documentary, according to Dan Ladely, Sheldon film director.

These showings are open to the public as is the film Othello at 3, 7 and 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

London Tickets Sold in NYC

London (UPI) — Tickets for London theaters are now on sale in New York and can be ordered by toll-free telephone from anywhere in the United States. Keith Prowse, the London ticket agency, has opened a New York City office with toll-free telephones. The British Tourist Authority said the office, without advertising, was selling 2,000 tickets a month eight months after it opened, and business was rising at 20% a week.

4F KBHL Concert Series

A "Caravan of Concerts" sponsored by radio station KBHL opens Monday night with an 8 p.m. public performance by recording artist Chuck Girard and Nancy Honeytree at Nebraska Wesleyan University's O'Donnell Auditorium, 51st and Baldwin.

Gerard organized a band called Love Song but now performs on his own, said KBHL manager Larry King. Miss Honeytree also is a single performer. Both musicians write many of the songs they sing.

King said the concerts, for which there is an admission charge, will feature what he described as Christian music.

Overdrive in Omaha

Omaha — One of the hottest groups on the rock music scene, Bachman Turner Overdrive will be in concert at 8 p.m. next Sunday in the Omaha Civic Auditorium.

This Canadian group, which emerged on the U.S. scene in 1973 has a staggering list of honors from their short existence. These include platinum and gold albums and singles; the album Four Wheel Drive was gold within three days of its release. Let It Ride, Takin' Care of Business, You Ain't Seen Nothing Yet and American Woman are a few of their thundering rock 'n' roll hits.

'Fantasticks' at Playhouse (In 17th Year in New York)

The Fantasticks, a popular musical comedy about love, opens Friday and continues through Sunday at the Lincoln Community Playhouse, 2500 So. 56th. Further performances will be Jan. 30, 31 and Feb. 1 and Feb. 6, 7 and 8. Evening shows begin at 8 p.m. There will be matinee performances at 2 p.m. Feb. 1 and 8.

Not often does an off-Broadway show make New York City sit up and take such notice as has The Fantasticks, which recently celebrated its 16th birthday in that city.

The musical has been lauded for the tremendously fresh quality of its material.

The work, described as a fantasy in the tradition of Voltaire, is a story of young love, parents, the world and human nature — but mostly about love.

The musical comedy, written by Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, is based on a play by Edmond Rostand. The score includes Try to Remember, Seen It's Gonna Rain and Much More.

John R. Wilson directs. Beverly Lightner is music director. Lee Ridge did the costumes. Scenery is by Don Yanik; lighting by Sibyl Shaw and choreography by Paula Sweetman. Marie Muffley is in charge of makeup.

Classes Begin For Children

The Children's Theatre Academy class offered by the Community Playhouse begins a second expanded program Monday. Classes meet once a week for one-hour sessions for 14 weeks. A production will be presented late in the spring.

The class offers instruction in all elements of onstage and backstage theater, including mime and improvisation, basic acting techniques and technical elements of production including set design, lighting, costumes and makeup.

Classes are open for both the 7-9 and 10-12 age groups.

The class has support from the Nebraska Arts Council. Information about fees and registration may be obtained from the Playhouse, 2500 So. 56th.

Audition Time

There will be auditions at the Playhouse at 7:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday for roles in The World of Carl Sandburg. Parts are available for five or six men and women, aged 18 to 100. The production dates are Feb. 19, 20, 21 and 22.

One cast member must sing and/or play the guitar.

Additional volunteer help will be needed for set design and construction, lighting, properties and assistant to the director, according to Carol McVey, administrative assistant.

Dolls Shown At Logan, Kan.

Logan, Kan. — An exhibit of some 100 American dolls opens today and continues to Feb. 12 at the Dane G. Hansen Memorial Museum here.

American Dolls, organized and circulated by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service, was made possible by a grant from the Charles E. Merrill Trust Foundation. The display includes early carved wood and homemade rag dolls, a rubber doll, a Springfield jointed wood doll, Kewpies and others.

Also showing are prints by the High Plains Printmakers. Artists are Frank Nichols, Mark Hagerman, Mike Gross, Bob Lortscher, Dale Silkman and Susan Humfeld of Hays, Kan., and Rolland Goreham of Logan.

Kelly Hull of Woodston, Kan., is exhibiting oil and acrylic paintings.

Watanabe's Prints Displayed

Twenty-one prints by Japanese artist Sadao Watanabe, will hang in the Great Hall of Trinity United Methodist Church, 16th and A, through February. The prints are on loan from the collection of the Rev. Donald Purkey, Franklin Lakes, N.J.

The work by Watanabe, who was reared in a Buddhist home but converted to Christianity when he was 18, is Japanese folk art, Mingei. The prints depict scenes from the life of Christ in Japanese style. Often figures are clad in kimonos and are in Japanese postures.

Richard West rejuvenates inner works of an NU piano.

Technician Cares for 126 Pianos In New School of Music Position

By Helen Haggie

Know the difference between a piano tuner and a piano technician?

Richard West, a member of the staff at Westbrook Music Bldg. on the University of Nebraska campus, explains it: "The piano technician term means the person does all phases of piano work. It goes far beyond tuning — to repairing, restringing and rebuilding the instruments. It's much more inclusive."

From Iowa City

West talked about his new position at the University, saying there are 126 pianos in the building. Between 40 and 50 are grand pianos and the others are professional uprights.

"Those on third floor (where practice rooms are located) are in pretty bad condition," West said. "Those in the studios are in fairly good repair."

The technician was in the midst of refelting a piano key bed, readjusting the height and depth of the keys and replacing worn down hammers when he talked.

West was born in State Center, Iowa, but lived in Iowa City for 10 years before coming to Lincoln. "I spent five and a half years there as a student at the University of Iowa and four and a half working for a private music firm."

Did he major in technician work at the University in Iowa? "No, I was a German major. I had to go to a school — Western Iowa Tech in Sioux City — for a year of training" for the piano work. "I originally tried to learn the work on my own, but it was pretty hard to do by correspondence."

Was in Peace Corps

West became interested in the piano work after he discovered he didn't like teaching languages. "I liked the piano as an instrument, but I am not good enough on it for the concert stage and this is a good alternative," he said.

The technician taught German in Waukegan, Ill., for two years before he was in the Peace Corps. "I taught English in Ethiopia when I was with the corps," he continued. "It was then that I decided I didn't want to continue teaching."

Will Teach Course

The new NU staff member wants to take more piano lessons and get back to practicing. But at the moment he is working on a course in piano technician work that he will teach for music majors in the fall.

"I am researching the area now. There are many things to decide — how much to teach and what not to teach, for instance."

"My goal will not be to make each student a technician. Rather I want them to know what to look for in a piano and for that matter in a piano technician."

"I certainly don't want to create a lot of parttime people working as technicians who don't know exactly what they are doing."

Make 88 Alike

West explains that rebuilding a piano may look easy, but "when you take it down to the bare bones it is a tricky thing to rebuild. Essentially there is the same process for each key. But to give 88 keys the same continuity and touch is not easy. That's but one of the reasons it is difficult to become a proficient technician."

West has high praise for the NU School of Music faculty. "I have the impression that all are working together here," he said. "The reason I took the job is that I liked that spirit."

Nebraska City School on ETV

Look Where We're Going, an hour-long documentary about the State School for the Visually Handicapped at Nebraska City, will be telecast at 7 p.m. Tuesday on KUON and the Nebraska ETV Network. The program emphasizes teaching methods and coordination with public and private schools. The Nebraska City school serves persons aged 5 to 21.

Musical Lampoon Part of Heritage

Shenanigans of Past Include Some Tuneful Political Abuse

By Harold C. Schonberg
(c) 1976 New York Times

New York — The Bicentennial is going to inundate us with all kinds of material, and if all of it is as pleasant as two books that recently hit this desk, it will be a happy drowning. They are two books that complement one another. Vera Brodsky Lawrence's Music for Patriots, Politicians, and Presidents (Macmillan) is subtitled Harmonies and Discords of the First Hundred Years. It cuts off at 1876. Lester S. Levy's Give Me Yesterday: American History in Song, 1880-1920 (University of Oklahoma Press, $17.50) is equally charming, though humbler in aim and more concentrated in scope.

It is surprising how little is known of the American popular heritage. Folk songs, of course, have been explored, and recent years have seen the beginnings of anthologies, in print and on recordings, of other segments of Americana. There is so much yet to be revealed. Conservatives who yell about the press today should take a look at some of the shenanigans of the past. The act of lampooning, insulting and libeling American presidents and presidential candidates is as old as the Republic. It has never been pleasant, but it is a part of the great American tradition — except today, when newspapers are prevailingly polite, and libel laws have teeth in them.

Attack on Van Buren

Mrs. Lawrence has looked at some of these political songs. She makes special mention of one of the Whig songbooks of 1840. It was named A Miniature of Martin Van Buren and, Mrs. Lawrence thinks, "may well represent the nadir of sung political abuse." Even at a century's remove it does not make pleasant reading: "Who was faithless from his youth, — who hates the light and scorns the truth, — And worst of Sophists is forsooth? — Van Buren . . . Who like the wily serpent clings, — who like the pois'nous adder stings, — Who is more base than basest king? — Van Buren." The Lawrence book is history, real American history, of a different kind than is usually taught. This is history through the songs of a people. It contains, in addition to the fast-running text, facsimiles, cartoons, engravings, broadsides, sheet music covers (some of them as much works of art as Currier and Ives prints) and the music itself. Mrs. Lawrence ends with 1876, when the American Centennial was being celebrated.

Show-Biz Orientation

The Levy book has a more popular slant, being show-biz oriented. The history it deals with is the history of, say, the automobile, or the oil industry, or comic papers as Tin Pan Alley saw them. Give Me Yesterday is full of delightful odds and ends. Levy has a mind that is attracted to things that in retrospect are more ridiculous than important, no matter how large they may have bulked in their day.

Levy has quite a bit on sports songs, songs inspired by comic strips, architecture, labor unions, Wall Street, Tammany Hall and the telephone, among other subjects. The one about the telephone, then a relatively new invention, wrenches and heartstrings. Written in 1901 by Charles K. Harris, the song swept the country. Harris was the author of After the Ball and Break the News to Mother. His chef d'oeuvre might well have been Hello Central, Give Me Heaven. Here's this little girl calling the operator for heaven, "for my mama's there, — You can find her with the angels — On the golden stair." The only real equivalent to this kind of tearjerker may have been the George A. Little — Jack Stanley song about the death of Enrico Caruso in 1921. Its title, and also its last two lines: "They needed a song-bird in Heaven, — So God took Caruso away." Waah. Not a dry eye in the house.

Gallery Concert Will Trace Art Derivation

"Old Wine in New Bottles" is the theme of a gallery concert in Nebraska Wesleyan University's Elder Gallery at 3 p.m. next Sunday. The musical event is designed to complement an exhibit of brass rubbings by Mr. and Mrs. Corwin Moore of Lincoln.

Dr. Cary Lewis, Wesleyan

pianist, said the idea behind the concert is to demonstrate how a new, separate form of art can be derived from an earlier work without changing the original.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore will be present to talk about their collection and the process of adaptation of original art as related to the rubbing process.

Musical examples will be played to demonstrate how the Baroque music of Bach was made classical by Mozart and romantic by Mendelssohn, Schumann and Gounod and modern by Webern. Vivaldi will be treated by the contemporary composer Dallapiccola to a new basic sound, said Dr. Lewis. A well-known Mozart Fantasy for solo piano becomes a heavily romantic piece with the addition of a second piano part by Grieg, Lewis said.

Performers will include Ruth Stephenson, soprano; members of the Lincoln String Quartet — Morris and Aleta Collier, Ruth Johnson and Carl Work; Dorothy Lewis, cello, and Ann Cramer and Dr. Lewis, piano.

Organist Levick Plays 'Festival of Americana'

John Levick, minister of music and fine arts at First-Plymouth Congregational Church, 20th and D, will present the bicentennial year's first concert in Lincoln tonight.

Entitled "Festival of Americana," Levick's 7:30 p.m. public program at the church is a historical survey of organ literature from colonial times to the present. A similar recital was presented recently in Norfolk, Va., by Levick.

He said that this program will include some light compositions as well as several Nebraska premieres. Among these is Dream, by Albright, for organ and vibraphone. Assisting artist for Dream will be Al Rometo, percussion instructor at the University of Nebraska School of Music.

The remainder of what Levick describes as an "unusual and varied program" includes The President's March by Phile, Yankee Doodle with Variations by Hweitt, A Voluntary, by Selby, Fugue, No. 3, Opus 36 by Parker, Fast and Sinister (Symphony in G) by Sowerby, When the Morning Stars Sang Together, with organ and electronic tape, by Pinkham and Variations on "America" by Ives.

Levick will also include two compositions by Myron Roberts, former University of Nebraska music professor and First-Plymouth organist. These pieces are Nova and Pastorale and Aviary.

A free will offering will be received, a church spokesman said.

Studio Offers Recording Service Here

Nashville, Nebraska? Not exactly. But former disc jockey (at KECK) Bill Egr is trying to bring a little of the country music capital's recording industry to Lincoln in the form of the Little Nashville Sound Studio.

At 2633 O, the recording studio opened last week.

Egr said that up to now aspiring musicians had to travel to either coast or to Nashville to cut a record, and then at a cost of $1,000 to $2,000 for each record. Egr said it ought not to be necessary to "spend an arm and a leg" to make a recording.

Besides opening the studio, Egr has also formed what is tentatively called the Midwest Music Assn. Any musician who joins is entitled to use the studio at least five times a year, and to receive promotional and booking help. The membership fee of $750 annually covers use of the studio, a sound engineer and master tape.

The studio will have its own label, Play Hour Records. Egr said. A publishing company, Lisa Jo Publishing, is also connected with the studio, he said.

Musicians don't have to belong to the association to use the studio facilities, Egr said, nor do they have to play country music.

Creativity Workshop for High Schoolers

Haymarket Art Gallery is holding a creativity workshop, designed for high school students, to give a feeling for combining writing and illustrating in producing a total visual message.

Don Byorth, art teacher at Southeast High School, will direct the project, which begins Feb. 5 and continues on a one a week basis for eight weeks. A sampling of commercial art techniques will be studied and used. Byorth says it is not a commercial art course per se, but a way to help persons think and express themselves creatively and visually.

There will be no tuition fees. The Lincoln Foundation has provided a grant to cover such costs for students who are accepted in the course. Applications, which must be returned by Thursday, are available at the gallery at 119 So 9th

Omaha Concert

Omaha — The University of Nebraska-Omaha trio-in-residence will perform at 4 p.m. today in the UNO Performing Arts Hall. Trio members are Harold Payne, piano; Paul Todd, violin, and David Low, cello. The free, public program is part of a fine arts artist-faculty Series.

Geinzer's Art

Omaha — An exhibition of prints and drawings by the Rev. Eugene Geinzer, S.J., will open Monday at the Fine Arts Gallery on the Creighton University campus, 2602 California. Gallery hours are noon to 4 p.m. Sunday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday-Saturday.

Unsolderly Looking Knox Had Big Role in Revolution

ble train of artillery," as he called it, was delivered on Jan. 24, 1776, 47 days after leaving Ticonderoga.

Shelling Ousts British

On March 2, Knox's guns began shelling Boston, and on March 17 the British evacuated the city, a date still celebrated annually by Bostonians.

"The Tories were thunderstruck," said an observer. The rebels were relieved and overjoyed. The hated Redcoats were gone. The cradle of liberty was free. And with proper arms the American army stood a chance when the major fighting started.

The man who performed this miracle and perhaps saved his country was the least likely person in Washington's command to receive such a trust. At a weight ranging up to 300 pounds, Knox looked like anything but a soldier, and by normal standards he wasn't.

He was born in Boston on July 25, 1750, one of 10 sons of Scotch-Irish emigrants. His father was a shipmaster and wharf owner, who went broke in 1756, left his wife and two surviving sons for the West Indies, and soon died there.

Though only nine years old, Henry was forced to leave school and support his mother and three-year-old brother. He took a job in a bookstore where he continued his education by reading all he could of the shop's wares.

Affected by Massacre

Knox may have begun to develop his revolutionary politics in 1770 when at the age of 20 he witnessed the Boston Massacre after personally pleading with the British officer in charge to withdraw his troops before blood was shed.

The next year Knox became of age and opened his own shop, which was known as "a store of great display and attraction for young and old." It was a favorite haunt of young officers of the British garrison, and Knox stocked the best military books for them.

But, ironically, this humble peddler read those books and learned more from them than did the English gentlemen. He joined a militia company of artillery and drilled in the arts he was learning.

When war began, Knox slipped out of the city to help the rebel army at Cambridge, after leaving in the safety of Worcester, Mass., his wife, Lucy, daughter of the royal secretary of the colony.

Although a total amateur, with nothing but book learning to guide him, Knox aided in designing and building siege fortifications about Boston.

There he met George Washington and Gen. Charles Lee, a former British professional. Knox wrote Lucy that when they had viewed his work "they expressed the greatest pleasure and surprise."

Eventually Knox became chief of artillery for the Continental Army and one of Washington's closest friends and trusted lieutenants. He was active in most of the major battles of the revolution.

Delaware Crossing

Knox showed a facility at artillery warfare which continually amazed his learned British opponents and French allies alike. He designed a new gun carriage which enabled him to engage guns in greater number and mobility than Europeans had done.

It was Knox who personally directed the transport of Washington's troops across the Delaware on Christmas night 1776 with "stentorian lungs and extraordinary exertions." He was rewarded the rank of brigadier general.

Knox was with Washington at Valley Forge. He organized a military academy for the new army. He was at Yorktown, and he was the first to embrace Washington in farewell at war's end.

Commander, Secretary

This self-taught bookseller-soldier from Boston became a major general in time and succeeded Washington as commander of the army after the war.

Knox became the country's first secretary of war in Washington's cabinet. He later enjoyed success as a businessman and country squire on his estate in Maine.

Henry Knox did not look like a hero. He was too fat. He was entirely too jovial to be taken for a thoughtful genius. He even died a tragi-comic, premature death at the age of 56 from swallowing a chicken bone.

But he represented young America, this self-made general, too unsophisticated to be cowed by the impossible. He had that exquisite American capacity to do what couldn't be done, simply because it was there, and he was there, and it needed doing, and he knew he could do it when few others would dare try.

French Wine Industry Shows Recovery Signs

Paris (UPI) — Recovering from wine scandals and a falling market, the ailing French wine industry, by emphasizing quality over quantity, shows signs of staggering back to health this year.

A spotty 1975 harvest, plummeting champagne sales during the recession, and a trend among the French themselves to drink more beer and whiskey and less wine brought gloom to wine circles last autumn.

Another wine scandal in the Bordeaux area — this time involving wine that blew up aboard a ship after illegal chemicals were added — did not help the image of French wines already battered by a 1974 conviction of wine distributors for labeling cheap wines as prestigious Bordeaux.

But fresh statistics indicate the industry might have picked itself up off the floor and started to recover some of its glory.

A spokesman at the Institute National des Vins des Appellations des Origines — the Institute of Big Name Wines — reports that for the first 10 months of 1975 France's exports of wine of controlled origin went up an average 13%. The boost in October exports alone was 26%, indicating the figures for November and December might be just as rosy and push up the yearly average.

The big question mark remaining regards sales of wine from the Champagne region, which have been just short of disaster since the recession worsened.

Champagne sales soared 32% in October, which could be only a seasonal burst for the holidays. For the first 10 months of 1975, champagne sales dropped 20%. Officials blame the fact that Britain is their biggest importer, and in Britain's economic crisis its people are not swigging much champagne.

AUTO ALBUM

An Assembled Man o' War

By Tad Burness

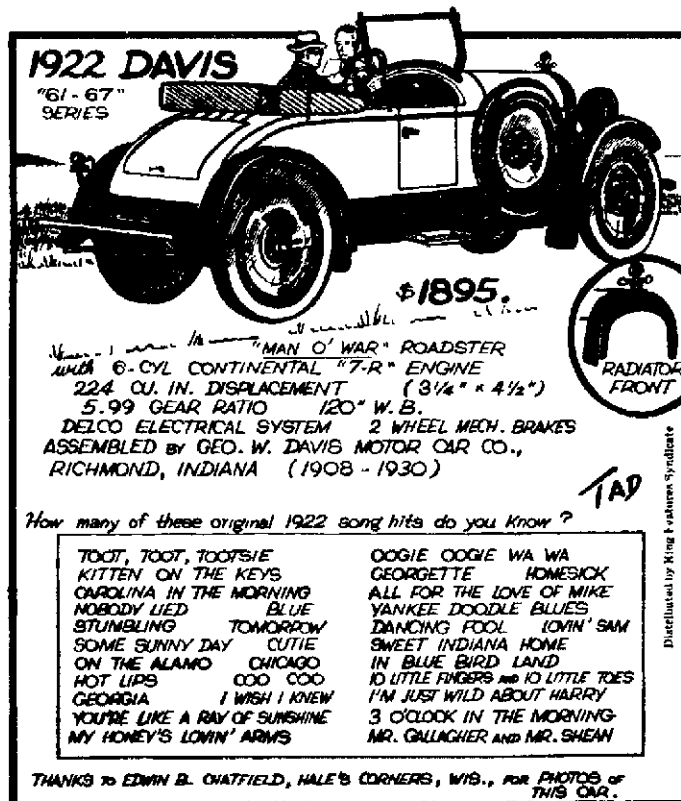

Special Writer

"Built of the Best" was the sales slogan for this 1922 Davis car, built in Richmond, Ind. It was an "assembled" car, meaning that many parts for the Davis did not come from its own factory but were supplied by specialized manufacturers. Thus, the Davis used a Continental engine, Timken axles, Borg and Beck clutch, Delco electrical system, etc. (The opposite extreme from an "assembled" car would be one such as the Model T Ford, which used, mostly, its own Ford-built parts.)

One advantage of the so-called "assembled" car was that replacement parts were usually easy to come by as they were made by major suppliers and frequently found on other makes of cars as well.

The 1921-1922 period was one of recession in the auto industry. Several manufacturers failed. But, according to a January, 1922, Davis advertisement, "The Davis Company owes no man an over-due dollar. It has large cash reserves in the bank. It has borrowing capacity that has never been used — and its entire financing is conducted with its own surplus and reserves. Its overhead is remarkably low. It did not over-expand during the days of temptation" ... (the "boom" period immediately following World War I).

President of the company was George W. Davis, and there were 250 employees — plus 110 Davis distributors and authorized service stations. About 3,000 Davis cars were built in 1922, the most striking being the illustrated Man o' War roadster. The disc-wheeled sport touring car was the Fleetaway. There was also a standard, wooden-wheeled touring car, plus a sedan and a 4-passenger coupe; but 72% of the cars Davis' produced in 1922 were open models.

The Davis was an early user of a simple, one-piece windshield on open cars. Many competing makes did not offer this until 1926, or later.

In 1922, Davis cut prices and also introduced a new companion-series "71" touring car with 114-inch wheelbase and smaller cylinders. The "71" touring model was priced at only $1,195.

Disney-like Park Idea Contagious

Theme parks, the family entertainment concept developed by the late Walt Disney with the creation of Disneyland in California and Disney World in Florida, continue to grow.

The newest entry in the field is the Washington, D.C., based Marriott Corporation which in 1976 will open two $40-to-$50-million Great America complexes, complete with Bugs Bunnies, double-decker carousels, circuses and wild animal acts, one in Santa Clara, Calif., on March 20 and an identical facility in Gurnee, Ill., on May 29. (A third Great America is scheduled for Manassas, Va., in 1978.)

Marriott expects a combined attendance of more than four million at the parks in the first year, with the same admission prices at both facilities — $7.95 for adults, $6.95 for children 4 through 11, and youngsters under 3 admitted free.

One ticket covers admission to all rides, attractions and stage productions. The Gurnee park is midway between Chicago and Milwaukee on the Illinois tri-state tollway-interstate 94, near the Chain of Lakes resort area. The park in Santa Clara is approximately 45 miles south of San Francisco and Oakland,

Bicentennial Ideas Sought

The Cornhusker Chapter of the National Railway Historical Society will meet at Gere Library, 56th and Normal, at 7 p.m. Monday to determine how it can participate in the American Bicentennial observance. They Wrote Home a Lot Ancient Romans Were Tourists

By John Justin Smith
(c) 1975 Chicago Daily News
Cologne, Germany — There's the great new Romano-Germanic Museum in town, and a visit to it raises a question: Isn't it time somebody paused to pay tribute to the ancient Romans as tourists?

After all, they colonized the Mediterranean and north to the Rhine and to northern Britain.

True, they weren't just out sightseeing, but they did often conduct themselves like tourists.

Let's see. They built their own hotels as they went (also bridges, roads, aqueducts, palaces and theaters). And, like tourists, they dined well and maybe did a little drinking, too.

They also did one more touristy thing: they wrote home a lot.

It is not recorded that any of them said, "Wish you were here," but Julius Caesar did write about the sights, including a description of Geneva, Switzerland, and the hotheaded folk he found on an island in the Seine where Paris now stands.

Historian Tacitus did a good job of covering things to see and do in this part of the world.

The Romano-Germanic Museum in Cologne stands within a few yards of the city's great Gothic cathedral, and thereby hangs a story.

In 1941, the Germans decided to build an air-raid shelter within a few yards of Cologne's great Gothic cathedral, apparently because they knew some effort would be made by the Allies to spare the edifice. Anyhow, at a depth of about 20 feet, the shelter makers came across a marvelously complete mosaic floor.

It turned out that the floor was from the home of a Roman patrician. After the war, plans were made for a museum to cover it. The museum was completed last year and now offers a view of artifacts dating back to 1st, 2nd and early 3rd centuries.

You can see a wide variety of household items, tools, articles of war, tombs and tombstones and even fragments of Roman clothing.

But for an even more intimate look at the life of the Romans as tourists, it's suggested you have a look at Saalburg, about 20 miles north of Frankfurt. Here a Roman fort and its accompanying settlement have been completely restored.

The restoration was done at the behest of Kaiser Wilhelm II, who sent experts to Rome and Africa to study other Roman fortresses and building methods.

Here you'll find that it's no fib that the Romans built their own hotels. Outside the walls of the fort is the foundation of a building described as a hostel for travelers.

Artifacts from the area are on display and these include some stunners:

- Oyster shells. Oyster shells about 200 miles from the sea? Yes, the modern Germans have deduced that the oysters were kept in brine and brought all the way to Saalburg.

- Safety pins. Apparently there were children or at least women here with the Romans because the pins are too small for use on heavy men's garments.

- Shoes and fragments of other leather goods. The shoes are shocking because they are similar to the Italian shoes you can buy today on Rome's Via Veneto.

- Surgical tools. There are scalpels, tweezers and the like, and they vary little from what one might find in a modern operating room.

You will, of course, find traces of the Romans throughout Germany ... in the center of Frankfurt, near the cathedral and at places such as Bingen on the Rhine, where, in the cellar of the local castle, you'll find the burial place of a Roman doctor, buried with his tools beside him. Both Roman and Frankish pottery also is on display.

But the big thing is that you can visit and admire the work performed by the Romans as they created their empire in many, many places. A sampling:

- Verona, Italy, has a coliseum that's in better condition than the famed one in Rome.

- Arles, France, has a coliseum, too — and building fragments and an obelisk.

- Caesarea, Israel, has many Roman fragments, including a piece of an aqueduct.

- Split, Yugoslavia, is the site of the retirement place of Emperor Diocletian.

- Alcantara, Spain, is the site of a 170-foot-high Roman bridge across the Tagus River.

- Athens, Greece, has a Roman theater.

Youth's Business So Good That He Had to Close It

Gordon — David Thorp has had two monopolies in this Sandhills town of 2,000 people just below the South Dakota border.

David, 17, is the only National Merit Scholarship semifinalist from Gordon High School in recent years. That makes him pretty special, since it puts him in the top half of 1% academically of all high school seniors across the country.

Still, there are about 15,000 Merit semifinalists this year. David's other monopoly is far more exclusive title, at least in his hometown. For it, he was hailed last summer in a front-page story in the Gordon Journal as the city's youngest merchant.

At that time — between his junior and senior years in high school when most of his friends had the usual teen-age vacation jobs or just took it easy, David Thorp owned and operated Gordon's only pizza restaurant.

The pizza and sandwich eatery was a real monopoly in another way. Its name was Park Place Pizza, taken from the name of a desirable property in the real estate board game Monopoly. The restaurant's menu was modeled on the Title Deed card for Boardwalk's next-door neighbor.

David's father, Russell Thorp, came up with the idea of reopening the restaurant that had been operated by another Gordon man.

"I was working part-time at a truck stop," David said. "I came home one day and dad asked me if I wanted to go into business. I was to run it and I was to use my own money to get it started."

The rest of the story is becoming a part of local folklore. Park Place Pizza was a big commercial success and was soon open 12 hours a day, seven days a week. David worked most of these long hours throughout the summer, helped by his father (a banker), his mother (a registered nurse), and his sister, Christie, 20, now a nursing student in Omaha.

Once school started for David last fall, the business proved to be too successful. The decision to close Gordon's pizza palace was announced in a newspaper ad Nov. 5: "You can't go to school all day, make pizza all night and do justice to either job. Due to the fact that we cannot find anyone to either run or buy the business we are closing. We regret having to close our doors and we thank everyone for the great patronage we received."

David would have had a busy schedule even without the business. He was taking a full course load, including classes in speech, German, physics (his favorite), English and trigonometry. He wanted to keep up his good grade average in the hope that he can enter MIT or Harvard University next fall to study law or engineering.

He is on the Gordon High School student council, is president of a school club, enjoys photography as a hobby and has been active in football, wrestling and track.

"He and his sister did it all," David's father said. "It was really his money and his labor that made it work. But he'd always been a good student and we didn't want that to change. It just got to be too much for him. Of course, he was more worried about the work his mother and I were putting into it."

The brief sojourn into the business world was a good learning experience, said David as he looked back over the summer.

"I learned how to distribute my time and resources," he added, "and some business things like how to pay bills. I also learned how to cope with the public, which isn't easy sometimes."

Park Place Pizza apparently was something special to the people of Gordon, too.

"People were really sorry to see it go," David said. "They still come up to me on the street and ask me why we closed."

Nebraskans Write About 'Trails of Iron Horse'

Let's talk about books.

One, Trails of the Iron Horse, published by Doubleday, should appeal to Nebraskans, railroad and history buffs.

Thirteen members of Western Writers of America contributed chapters to "The rough and tumble story of the Western railroads," as the blurb on the jacket says.

Two of those 13 are Nebraskans.

Edith Thompson Hall, who lives in Lincoln, is described thusly: Has had over one hundred historical Western articles published in magazines, newspapers and books. She won the National Press Woman Award in 1974. A former news reporter, she is a member of Sigma Delta Chi.

Her contribution to this fine volume, which is illustrated with more than 100 rare photographs, is Everywhere West: The Burlington.

Among the illustrations used in this episode of the saga that saw the building of the railroads in the West are two supplied by the Nebraska State Historical Society.

The second Nebraskan is Nellie Snyder Yost of North Platte, identified on the jacket as "Author of eight historical and biographical books. Spur Award winner for 1969 and Golden Saddleman for 1975. Secretary-treasurer of Western Writers of America since 1972. Current president of Nebraska State Historical Society." She also is a member of the State Poet Laureate Commission.

She has written two episodes in the book. One is The Union Pacific, the other The Wedding of the Rails.

Not only are the stories of the railroad interesting and at times exciting, the whole book is very readable. It is not a book one can't put down, but it is one which will keep the imagination alive.

1,481 Page Almanac

Another book published by Doubleday and which does take some reading — but certainly not all at one time — is The People's Almanac by David Wallechinsky and Irving Wallace. The 1,481-page tome is chocked full of interesting things.

An excerpt from the foreword, written by the authors, describes the book well:

"This is a reference book to be read for pleasure. This is an informative book that is meant to provide entertainment. This is a book in which to look up facts and also have fun . . .

"This is a volume that attempts to go beyond often repeated unchallenged data and offer the behind-the-scenes, frequently omitted truths . . ."

For instance, there is more information about Lorenzo da Ponte, librettist for Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's three operas, Cozi Fan Tutte, Marriage of Figaro and Don Giovanni than there is about the composer.

Like most almanacs, the volume has a chapter on predictions. But unlike the pattern of other such reference books, this almanac has predictions by living psychics, psychics of the past and others.

In the first two categories, some of the past predictions and discussion of whether they were right or wrong preface predictions of the future. Jeane Dixon is one of the psychics contributing.

The authors do suggest that if readers miss anything in the book and would like to read about in the next edition of The People's Almanac, they should write to the authors.

One suggestion is that more information concerning fine artists be included.

15 Years in Paris

For delightful reading about the life of an American attache to the United States Embassy in Paris, To Marietta From Paris, 1945-1960, by Susan Mary Alsop is another great book by Doubleday.

The book is full of delicious gossip about well known persons and the manner of entertaining diplomats enjoy.

There is also sadness as the book deals with the illness and death of the first husband, Bill Patton.

It is highly readable and it does prove one point: The art of letter writing hasn't gone completely out of style.

Art Out of Doors

Art in the Environment (in the United

The Arts of Living

By Helen Haggie

States) is a book of 600 photographs of art in architectural, natural, historic and modern settings across the nation.

Work by two of the sculptors chosen to create pieces for the I-80 Bicentennial Sculpture project are included.

Several pieces of art from the Sheldon Art Galleries collections including those of the Nebraska Art Assn. are reproduced in the book. These include Max Weber's The Forest, Aaron Douglas' Window Cleaning, Reginald Marsh's The Park Bench.

Also there is a picture of Jose de Rivera's Construction #119, which is a part of the First National Bank's collection.

The book is a fine reference work for any art student's library — as it is a fine book for anyone interested in the visual arts.

Coping with change is hard on everyone, but it is especially challenging to children. Puberty, a new baby, a moving van — all require adjustment, and books can be of benefit.

Bibliotherapy means, among other things, selecting a book that helps heal psychological wounds or increases understanding. Here, then, are some bibliotherapeutic suggestions to get children over rough spots.

Sibling rivalry is an early source of conflict from the moment a new baby arrives. Gunilla Wolde has sweetened the shock by writing and illustrating Betsy's Baby Brother (Random House), in which Betsy wishes Mother would give the baby away "to another lady." Naturalness marks the realistic portrayal of a nursing mother and dirty diapers, and Betsy is won over by helping take care of the baby.

Younger brothers and sisters have problems too, as shown by Henrietta, the Wild Woman of Borneo (Four Winds Press). Henrietta's nest of tangled hair makes her feel like a creep, whereas older sister Evelyn has shining locks and looks like an angel. The humorous text by Winifred Rosen and sprightly pictures by Kay Choro help Henrietta achieve self-respect after she fantasizes escape.

Monnie doesn't hate big sister Lydia for her looks, but for her selfishness. Susan Pearson's humor and Diane Paterson's fine illustrations make Monnie Hates Lydia (Dial Press) almost a twin of Henrietta and equally as successful. The two girls reconcile following the ultimate catastrophe: a smashed birthday cake.

Children's Press offers an excellent series of problem books for very young children, such as Big Sister, Little Brother by Terry Berger, in which a boy openly describes feelings of love and rebelliousness toward his older sister. Minimal text and good color photographs enhance readability.

Saturday, the Twelfth of October (Delacorte) treats sibling conflicts with greater sophistication for the junior-high set. Norma Fox Mazer deftly interweaves fantasy with adolescent woes in her story of a girl who leaps backward in time after her brother reveals her diary's contents.

In The Terrible Thing That Happened at Our House (Parents' Magazine Press), the rival for mother's affections isn't a sibling but mother's new job. Transition periods can be difficult, and Marge Blaine faces the problem squarely.

Father's cooking just doesn't measure up. There's no one to talk to. But when a congenial babysitter arrives and the children start doing chores, family harmony reemerges triumphant.

Moving is an adventure, rather than a traumatic experience, in a charming picture book by Martha Hickman, I'm Moving (Abingdon). Any family contemplating a change of address would do well to introduce young children to this title.

Explaining adoption to a small girl will also be easier with Susan Lapsley's I Am Adopted (Bradbury).

Bad habits are hard to break, but mother and daughter make a pact: if Jenny will stop sucking her thumb, Mother will quit smoking. Trina Schart Hyman's ultracontemporary illustrations help get the message across in The Quitting Deal (Viking) by Tobin Tobias.

Giving children healthy self-concepts is the best insurance against neurosis. That's why Hooray for Me! (Parents' Magazine Press) by Remy Charlip and Lilian Moore, with sunny paintings by Vera Williams, is such a fine piece of bibliotherapy for children. It's also a work of art and a celebration of living.

Dame Agatha and Hercule Live On

Curtain. By Agatha Christie; Dodd, Mead.

Among the internationally known personalities who died in 1975 was a fussy little Belgian with a black moustache whose triumphs were entirely those of the intellect — and imagination.

Mais oui, none other than Hercule Poirot.

In the original scheme of things, Poirot's last great case and his simultaneous demise were to have occurred after the death of the shrewd detective's creator, Dame Agatha Christie.

But publication was permitted earlier, the actual manuscript being 30 years old.

Presumably, Dame Agatha found a unique satisfaction terminating Poirot this way — just as Poirot was attracting a legion of new mystery fans because of filmed version of the classic Murder on the Orient Express.

All that a reviewer of Curtain and its faintly anachronistic style is permitted to do is sketch the barest of outlines.

In this situation, Poirot is up against a psychokiller. His intent is not so much to effect justice but to prevent additional homicides. He succeeds, in part, and he fails, in part.

Pols, Note: The South Is Rising

Power Shift: The Rise of the Southern Rim and Its Challenge to the Eastern Establishment. By Kirkpatrick Sale; Random House

This insightful and exciting book coincides with another presidential election year.

Exciting if one agrees with the central premise — not easily overturned — that what Kirkpatrick Sale describes as the Southern Rim is becoming the nation's political power center.

No question about the demography. The evidence of that shift was reaffirmed again just the other day, by the census people. States in the southern half of the country, from North Carolina in a curving line to Southern California, are "growing" much more rapidly than those in the old industrial Snow Belt.

With that population has come a right-of-center political orientation resting on sharp cultural and social differences. Supplying the required economic nourishment are these six industrial components: defense, oil, real estate, technology, agribusiness and, yes, the leisure industry.

In fact and perspective, the "cowboys" and all their value system stands for are depicted gaining supremacy over the "Yankees." Or a new kind of Andrew Jacksonism. But this time the fresh crowd is sporting walnut-size diamonds instead of ragged trousers.

—DH

The Land Where the Sun Dies. By Henry Carlisle; Putnam.

The year is 1818. James Monroe is president of the United States. Andrew Jackson is the man of the hour.

Using the name of their kinsman, Andrew Jackson, as influence, Eliza Hutchins goes to Washington with her father. He is seeking an appointment as government agent to the Seminole Indians.

Neither Eliza nor her father shares Jackson's views on Indian removal to lands west of the Mississippi or on the expansion of slavery.

Eliza's feelings are inborn and natural. She never compromises her unfashionable beliefs, even though they cause her and her loved ones much unhappiness.

John Hutchins is a dreamer reared with his head in the clouds. As a young man, he went to live with the Cherokees while he worked as an assistant to a government agent. He was oblivious to the dangers the Indians posed for his ancestors.

Hutchins' primary duties as agent to the Seminoles are to convince the Indians to sell their lands and move west and to return black runaway slaves living with the Seminoles to their white owners. His efforts at peaceful negotiations are undermined by land opportunists, bounty hunters and treaties broken by both sides.

The conflict between his sense of duty to the government and his compassion for the Seminoles is more than his compassionate heart can tolerate. He loses his sanity.

Eliza is an outspoken defender of the Indians. She rejects her heritage as a southern gentlewoman. Her marriage to Lt. Laird Caffrey, who comes to Florida to fight the Seminoles in 1835, causes her more anguish than happiness.

Caffrey's life as a professional soldier has been devoted to "Duty, Honor, Country," but there are none of those in this war. He fights without passion or reflection. However, as the war drags on, he comes to respect Osceola and the other chiefs. He wishes as passionately as Eliza that the Seminoles be allowed to remain in Florida.

Osceola plays a profound role in their lives. His capture is an act of treachery under a flag of truce. Long after the infamous day in 1837 is forgotten, the shame will be remembered by the white man.

Osceola dies in captivity on Sullivan's Island in 1838, rising from his death bed to smile and shake Caffrey's hand. Caffrey's destiny is irrevocably altered.

The remaining Indian chiefs agree to be moved only if Laird accompanies them. He sees them die slowly, one by one. Most die not of illness, but of heartbreak and homesickness. He gives his own life in the same way.

The Second Seminole War, which began in 1835, lasted seven years and was fought under seven generals. It was a costly and bloody campaign — 1,500 lost at a cost of more than $20 million — and the final peace treaty was not signed until 1834. It was but one of many battles in the conflict between public policy and private conscience.

The Land Where the Sun Dies is fine reading.

Wisdom Among Small Fry

Those Funny Kids! By Dick Van Dyke; Doubleday.

A fifth-grader quoted Patrick Henry as saying: "Give me puberty or give me death."

A teacher in Hollywood tells of being on yard duty during recess when a little girl ran up, all out of breath, and said: "Two boys are fighting near the lunch benches and I think the one on the bottom would like to see you."

A New York boy coming home from his first day in a fifth-grade sex education class reported to his father: "The first thing I learned was that if you laugh you get thrown out."

As in his earlier book on kids' sayings regarding religion, Faith, Hope and Hilarity, Dick Van Dyke has garnered the gems that tumble out of the mouths of near-babes in their relations with schools and teachers.

Kids say the darndest things, as another kid-quote collector proved, and they go on and on. It's hard to miss when you pull them together in a book

Public TV Gains Funding Stability, New Leadership

Analysis by Les Brown

(c) 1976 New York Times

New York — A new era has opened in public television. President Ford has signed the five-year funding bill for public broadcasting that had long been sought by the industry, and on Jan. 8 the board of governors of the Public Broadcasting Service confirmed the appointment of Lawrence K. Grossman, a New York advertising executive, as president of the system's national organization.

Public television thus begins 1976 with new leadership and with greater economic security than it was known since the passage of the Public Broadcasting Act of 1969.

'The Network' Spoken Of

Symbolic of the changes these developments imply is the fact that some station operators have begun to speak again of PBS as "the network," ending a moratorium on the term that began when members of the Nixon administration warned the industry that the White House would not approve long-range funding for a system dominated by a central programming source.

The implications of the funding authorization are fairly evident. Government support of the industry at levels that could double or triple the appropriation of $39 million for the current fiscal year make possible an increase in domestically-produced programming. It will also give the industry the ability for the first time to engage in long-range program planning.

Much harder to predict is what Grossman's influence is likely to be upon a system that has never known unity and whose member stations have differed harshly over the mission and priorities of public television.

Clashes have occurred between stations strongly oriented to education and those committed to culture and public affairs. There is also constant friction between the stations in the major cities and those in smaller communities over whose needs are being served best by the system. And finally there are political differences, manifested as a distrust by some stations of programs produced in the eastern cities.

Cannot Create Programs

These conflicts, along with the mandate of the Nixon administration for a system built upon "grassroots localism," has caused PBS to function as a distribution apparatus rather than as a network in the conventional sense.

PBS has no authority to create programs and has no production capability of its own. The national programs it distributes go only to the stations that desire them or that have purchased them through the Station Program Cooperative, the program market which PBS administers.

PBS is governed not by a central bureaucracy but by committees representing the 252 member stations. Under the present structure, Hartford Gunn, the vice chairman, is to be concerned with fund-raising and technological planning for the system, while the president is charged with day-to-day administration of the operations.

May Accumulate Power

Grossman thus assumes the post with virtually no governing power over the system, but many public broadcasters believe he will be able to accumulate such power if he is able to reconcile the differences the member stations.

They point out that the desire for new leadership — which prompted a selection committee to screen 60 candidates for the position over the last six months — is an indication that the stations might be amenable now to establishing a more effective national organization, even one that might perform some true network functions.

"This is potentially the most exciting job in broadcasting. I

State of Union by Ford, Muskie

President Gerald Ford reports to Congress on the state of the union at 8 p.m. Monday. His address will be carried on all commercial networks. It is estimated to be 45 minutes long and probably will be followed by 15-minutes of commentary and analysis, thus preempting regular programming for a full hour.

A similar schedule will be in effect Wednesday, with the networks giving 45 minutes of equal time to Democratic spokesman Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine, selected by party leaders to give their view of the state of the union, and following with a quarter hour of commentary and analysis.

KUON, the Nebraska ETV Network and NPACT (National Public Affairs Center for Television), said coverage will begin at 7:30 p.m. Monday. The 90-minute program will include live coverage of the President's address. On Wednesday at 8 p.m. KUON and the ETV Network will carry Democratic response.

Superbowl At 1 p.m. Today

The CBS-TV Network, including KOLN-KGIN and WOWT, carries the professional football Superbowl game between the Pittsburgh Steelers and Dallas Cowboys at 1 p.m. today.

'Adams Chronicles' Dramatize History

The Adams Chronicles is a new series of 13 hour-long dramas on KUON and the Nebraska ETV Network stations beginning at 9:30 p.m. Friday (and repeating on following Tuesdays at 7 p.m.).

The series, spanning 150 years from 1750 to 1900, details how one family, beginning with John and Abigail Adams, helped determine America's directions and legacy for the future.

The offices John Adams and his descendants held parallel the history of the United States: delegate to the First and Second Continental Congresses, commissioner to France during the Revolutionary War, first American minister to Great Britain, first Vice President, second President, minister to Prussia and Russia, secretary of state, sixth President, member of the House of Representatives, minister to Great Britain during the Civil War, officers in the Union Army, financier and historian.

Woven among events that shaped the history of the emerging nation are events that formulated a family's personal legacy: John and Abigail's lifetime partnership, one of history's great love stories; the deaths of John Adams and Thomas Jefferson within hours of each other on the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence; John Quincy's fatal heart attack on the floor of the House; broken friendships and reconciliations; untimely deaths of children and wives; the challenge to succeeding generations of their ancestors' record of achievement.

'Popi' on CBS

Popi, a new half-hour comedy series starring Hector Elizondo, makes its debut on CBS, KOLN-KGIN and WOWT at 7:30 Tuesday. Lee Currilin, CBS vice president-programs, said Popi replaces Joe and Sons, which had its final broadcast Jan. 13. Elizondo plays a Puerto Rican father, Abraham Rodriguez, who holds three part-time jobs to sustain him and his young sons.

George Grizzard and Kathryn Walker portray John and Abigail Adams.

Animation Series at 5 p.m. Saturdays

Woody Woodpecker and Andy Panda, Roberta Flack, Carl Reiner, the art of Toulouse Lautrec, the jazz of the Oscar Peterson Trio, stories by E.B. White and Balzac and animation by Terry Gilliam of Monty Python's Flying Circus add up to fun and family comedy during the second season of International Animation Festival on KUON and the ETV Network. The 13-part series, hosted by Jean Marsh of Upstairs, Downstairs, will be seen Saturdays at 5 p.m. The series will specialize in humorous cartoons, but there will also be some serious works and a special horror show, including a take-off on Robert Louis Stevenson's Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

Monaco (UPI) — The Grimaldis, the royal house of Monaco, came from Genoa, where their first ancestor, Otto Canella, was born in 1070. The children of Otto dropped the name Canella and used Grimaldi, the Christian name of Otto's youngest son, as their family name. The first Grimaldi was ambassador to the courts of Frederick Red Beard and the emperor of Byzantium.

SPEED READING COURSE TO BE TAUGHT IN LINCOLN & OMAHA AREA

The Iowa Reading Lab, of Des Moines, will offer a 4 week course in speed reading to a limited number of qualified people in the Lincoln & Omaha area. A person is required to attend only one 2 1/2 hour class per week, on the evening of their choice for 4 weeks only. The course guarantees to triple the person's reading speed with a marked improvement in comprehension and concentration. The guarantee, however, is a bare minimum as the average graduate will read 7 to 10 times faster. They can read almost any average book in less than one hour.

For those who would like additional information, a series of free, one hour orientation lectures have been scheduled. At these free lectures the course will be explained in complete detail, including classroom procedures, instruction methods, class schedule and a special 1 time only introductory tuition that is less than one-third the cost of similar courses. You must attend only one of the free meetings for complete details. You may attend any of the meetings for information about the Lincoln or Omaha classes.

These orientations are open to the public, above age 14, (persons under 18 should be accompanied by a parent if possible.)

If you have always wanted to be a speed reader but found the cost prohibitive or the course too time consuming . . . now you can! Just by attending 1 evening per week for 4 short weeks you can read 7 to 10 times faster, concentrate better; comprehend more.

If you are a student who would like to make A's instead of B's or C's or if you are a business person who wants to stay abreast of today's everchanging accelerating world, then this course is an absolute necessity. These Free one hour meetings will be held at the following times and places:

LINCOLN

Tues. Jan. 20 at 6:30 and again at 8:30 p.m.
 Wed. Jan. 21 at 6:30 and again at 8:30 p.m.
 Thurs. Jan. 22 at 6:30 and again at 8:30 p.m.
 Fri. Jan. 23 at 6:30 and again at 8:30 p.m.
 Sat. Jan. 24 at 10:30 a.m. and again at 1:30 p.m.
 Mon. Jan. 26 at 6:30 and again at 8:30 p.m.

These meetings will be held in the conference room of the Radisson Cornhusker Hotel, 13th and "M" St. Lincoln

OMAHA

Tues. Jan. 27 at 6:30 and again at 8:30 p.m.
 Wed. Jan. 28 at 6:30 and again at 8:30 p.m.
 Thurs. Jan. 29 at 6:30 and again at 8:30 p.m.
 Fri. Jan. 30 at 6:30 and again at 8:30 p.m.
 Sat. Jan. 31 at 10:30 a.m. and again at 1:30 p.m.
 Mon. Feb. 2 at 6:30 and again at 8:30 p.m.

These meetings will be held in the conference room of the Y.M.C.A. downtown, 430 South 20th St. Omaha.

If you are a businessman, student, housewife or executive, this course which took 5 years of intensive research to develop, is a must. You can read 7-10 times faster, comprehend more, concentrate better, and remember longer. Students are offered an additional discount. This course can be taught to industry or civic groups at "Group rates" upon request. Be sure to attend whichever free orientation that fits in your schedule.

What Cooks? Budget Dinners

KUON and the Nebraska ETV Network are carrying a series called What's Cooking? at 5:30 p.m. Saturdays, featuring a flamboyant hostess whose name is LaDeva Davis and whose goal is to help viewers eat well while saving money. On Jan. 24 her show will include instructions for a complete multi-course international dinner that she says is "perfect for entertaining without using up the week's food budget."

Dance Series

Scheduled at 8 p.m. Wednesday on KUON and the ETV Network is the first in a series called Dance in America, described as a creative partnership between television and dance. The first 60-minute program features the City Center Joffrey Ballet, performing some of the same works the company presented in a Lincoln appearance a couple of years ago. The TV program includes the complete Trinity by Gerald Arpino, as well as excerpts from Robert Joffrey's Remembrances, Arpino's Olympics, Leonide Massine's Parade and Kurt Jooss' The Green Table.

WOWT Tells New Schedule

WOWT of Omaha is moving some of its public affairs programming. Starting Jan. 24, the station will rotate MidAmerica Scene Magazine, Munson on the Go and the call-in program Your Question Please in the 6:30 p.m. Saturday slot. The night-time version of New Match Game goes to 6:30 p.m. Fridays on WOWT while Treasure Hunt moves to Wednesdays at 6:30 p.m., effective Jan. 21. Space: 1999 moves to 5 p.m. Sundays Jan. 25. In its former slot of 7-8 p.m. Tuesdays will be CBS's Good Times and the new Pop!

Public TV's Situation Made More Stable

wouldn't have accepted anything comparable at the commercial networks because their frontier has been crossed long ago," Grossman said in an interview.

Local Stations Have Control

He pointed out that the commercial networks pay their affiliates for carrying programs and in that way are able to exercise some power over the stations. I public television, on the other hand, the power rests with the member stations because they supply the funds for PBS.

Nevertheless, he said, the stations recognize that it is in their interest to have an effective PBS because they receive 47% of their programming through the national distribution system.

"Stations will abide a central authority as long as they get value received," Grossman said. "Strong programming helps them to get audience and to raise money."

Grossman indicated that even if PBS cannot originate programs "it can stimulate ideas and serve as a focal point for those who would produce significant national programs."

Giving programming the highest priority, he said his administration would also be concerned with expanding the audience for public television and with resolving the internal conflicts in the system.

Needs Peacemaking Skill

Close associates of Grossman, as well as public broadcasters who were involved in his selection, maintain that his experience on commercial television and advertising (he had been an executive with both CBS and NBC before starting his own advertising agency) has not submerged his essential idealism.

He is recognized also as honest, creative and forthright in his views.

But whether PBS emerges as a stronger alternative to commercial television will depend largely on Grossman's skills as a peacemaker with the opposing forces in the system, most public broadcasters believe.

Met Airs 'Godunov'

The Metropolitan Opera production of Mussorgsky's dramatic three-act opera about old Russia — Boris Godunov — will be heard on KRNU (90.3 FM) at 12:30 p.m. Saturday.

Singing the title role will be the Finnish bass Martti Talvela. The cast includes mezzo-soprano Mignon Dunn as Marina, tenor William Lewis as Dimitri, tenor Robert Nagy as Shuisky, tenor Andrea Velis in the role of the Simpleton, baritone Morley Meredith as Rangoni, baritone Lenus Carlson as Shchekalov, bass Richard T. Gill as Pimen, and bass Raymond Michalski as Varlaam. Kazimierz Kord will conduct.

Horn Concerto Is Featured

Erich Leinsdorf conducts a second all-Mozart program with New York Philharmonic on KRNU at 8 tonight. John Cerninaro, the Philharmonic's principal French horn player, will be soloist in the Horn Concerto K. 447. The program also includes the Symphony No. 36, K. 425, (Linz) and the Serenade, K. 320, (Posthorn).

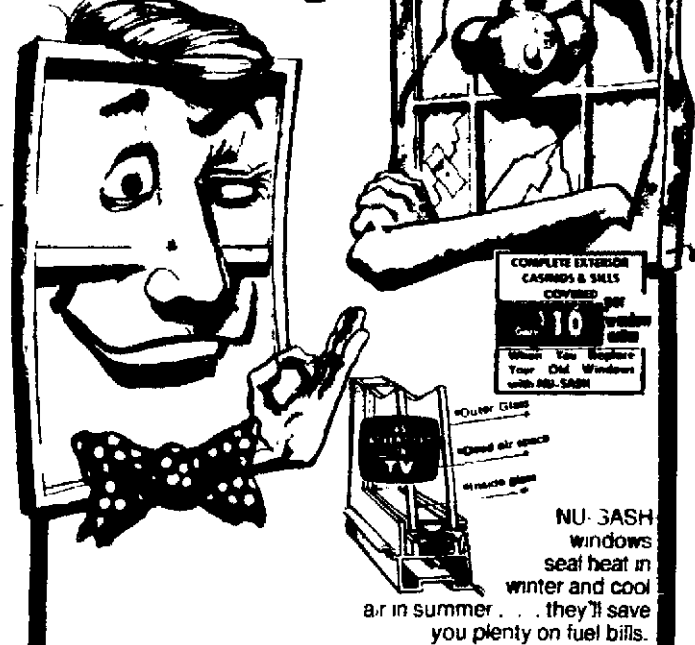

Church News Is Featured

What's Goin' On? is a new program at 10 a.m. Monday through Friday on radio station KBHL (95.3 FM). The station said the program attempts to inform listeners, including those who call in, about events in churches and related organizations in Lincoln. A Lincoln minister will be in the studio daily to discuss issues and answer inquiries, the station said.

NOISE

Sounds affect people differently. An example is that of a farmer who cannot sleep in the city with its sirens, auto horns and screeching tires, and the urbanite in the country who awakens to the chirping of crickets.

Noise is defined as any unwanted sound, but if a person hears a noise often enough he may become "deaf" to it. Noise can be of any kind of a sound that interferes with what you may want to do at the time.

MacCormack's Poetry Reading With Music

(c) 1976 Chicago Sun-Times

The strains of Melody of Love begin sliding smoothly from the instruments of Wayne King's orchestra, and the mood turns dreamy. Then this voice comes in, this voice that has been called golden and mellifluous and many other adjectives. It's a deep, soothing voice with lots of resonance and it catches and holds your attention as it begins reciting, "Why do I love you..."

If you used to listen to any late-night disk jockey around the country in the 1950s and '60s, the voice is instantly recognizable as that of Franklyn MacCormack. MacCormack died Jan. 12, 1971, after a heart attack on the air, but his voice lingers on through records that continue to sell to his fans — when the albums can be found.

Essentially MacCormack recited poetry to music. He wasn't the first to do this, but when it came to romantic poetry he was probably the best.

Even so, a lot of what he recited was so schmaltzy and saccharine-sentimental that even in the days of his greatest popularity many listened to him for a laugh. When, however, the poetry was halfway good and you were in a receptive mood, he could be almost hypnotizing.

You can hear MacCormack at his best on Franklyn MacCormack Recites "The Vagabond's House" (Torch). The title poem by Don Blanding is an 18-minute ramble of one of those characters who really existed only in adventure novels and romantic movies: the adventurer who roams the world as a soldier-of-fortune seeing and doing everything.

This vagabond has grown weary of his wanderings and would like to build himself a home, so he imagines himself up a house to suit him, and of course it will have all the treasures that he's collected on his travels, each to remind him of an adventure. The reading is accompanied by some fine moody guitar and vibes. Production and engineering are both excellent.

The original version of Why Do I Love You (Melody of Love), which is said to have sold over 4 million copies, is available on an album by Wayne King and His Orchestra called Golden Favorites, Volume 2 (Decca). King's arrangement complements MacCormack's reading without being overripe. The rest of this album is all Wayne King orchestra, with occasional chorus, on chestnuts like Young at Heart and Autumn Leaves, and no more MacCormack.

Another version of Why Do I Love You is on the Torch Is Burning (Liberty). The MacCormack readings are set to the music of Russ Garcia and His Orchestra and it leaves a lot to be desired. The electronically fixed stereo sounds weird. And the music itself is a far cry from Wayne King, excessively lush.

If you prefer to remember MacCormack as he sounded on his radio show, An Evening With Franklyn MacCormack and Another Evening With Franklyn MacCormack (both IRC) are the albums for you. The former features yet another version of Why Do I Love You? — to organ accompaniment similar to the kind that backed MacCormack's radio readings. His voice is full and fine on these albums, although the material is not very adventurous. Still, the tear-jerker Good Night Son, in which a father begs forgiveness of his sleeping son for being impatient and inaccessible earlier in the day, is a three-handerchief performance with the maestro sobbing his words by the end.

Our Little Town, Smile & Response; Common Language

Superior

The boys were small of stature with huge soulful dark eyes; their shining black hair was neatly trimmed. Dressed in the flimsiest of apparel they shivered in a forlorn little group, conversing among themselves in a language foreign and rapid.

They seemed bewildered, confused, disoriented. The scene was the Denver airport during a blizzard right out of the history books. Planes were delayed, flights cancelled; people were rushing about with no destination in mind, airport personnel were overtaxed and harried.

These youngsters looked so lost and lonely that I felt compelled to do something to alleviate their plight so I just walked up to them and smiled for a starter.

A smile must be understood in any language for they turned to me and offered up a torrent of words right out of my own personal history.

just what was happening to them.

What a joy it was to see fear lift from their young faces, to see doubt replaced with certainty, bewilderment with knowledge.

So for the next two days I grandmothered three of the politest gentlemen ever to leave sunny Mexico for frigid Scottsbluff — Ramon, Pepe and Ricardo.

They opened doors, they helped me up icy steps. I bused them to a motel and ordered their food. We laughed a lot at our continual misinterpretations and often resorted to drawing pictures to convey our thoughts. Not a real artist in the bunch.

Who needs a diplomatic corps to foster good relations?

What this nation needs is a few more grandmother-grandsons to share meals, laughter, shops, the countryside.

Parting. Were the tears in their eyes or in mine?

Adios, muchachos. Via con Dios.

Forty years ago I had fought like a fanged tiger to get out of taking second year Spanish, a requirement for graduation. A dead, dead language or so I had thought, of no use really.

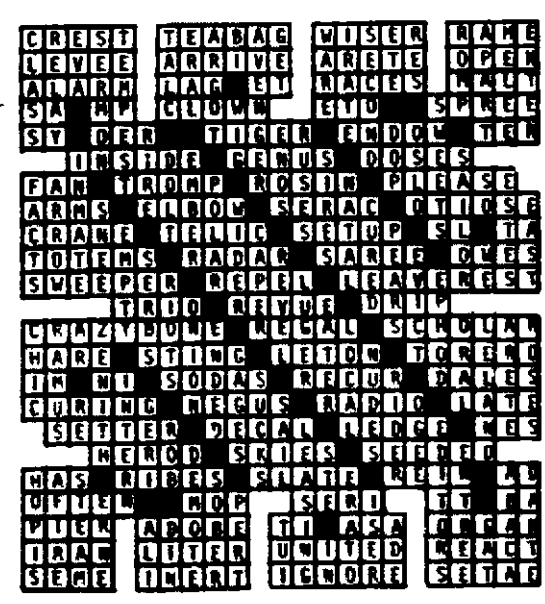

Not dead but dormant, my Spanish, asleep for 40 years.

From the hidden resources of my mind gushed forth the lessons of my girlhood and, because of a school administration that knew better than I, I was able through much gesturing and repetition to convey to my three young friends

Hotel, Casino In Highlands

Genting Highlands, Malaysia (UPI) — The highest hotel in Malaysia, at 5,614 feet above sea level, and the first casino are only a 32-mile drive from the capital of Kuala Lumpur. The hotel offers a spectacular view of the natural landscape of the Malay Peninsula, including the jungle facing the South China Sea, and from the west, the horizon of the Straits of Melaka.

50-State Flag Stamps Sheet Will Be Issued on Feb. 23

The previously announced sheet of 50 commemorative stamps honoring each state of the United States during the bicentennial year will be issued on Feb. 23 in Washington, the U.S. Postal Service has announced.

The sheet of 50 13-cent stamps depicts the flags of individual states arranged in order of the admission of the states to the Union.

The first day of issue coincides with the plenary session of the mid-winter meeting of the National Governor's Conference.

The stamps will be placed on sale nationwide at 11 a.m. local time on Feb. 23. Two types of cancellation will be available in conjunction with this issue. The first day of issue cancellation will be available in Washington only. Special cancellations will be available in each state capital.

Postal clerks and Philatelic Sales Division clerks will not honor customer requests for purchase of specific state flag stamps (single specific stamps nor quantities of specific stamps). Customers not desiring stamps removed from sheets at random will be required to purchase full sheets.

Customers desiring either first day of issue or state capital cancellations will be required to affix stamps to their covers. Postal Service personnel will apply cancellations only.

The cancellation to be applied in state capitals will bear the words "50 States — One Nation/USA Bicentennial" in the killer bars. Collectors should note these will be machine cancellations and that only covers sent to "50 Flags Cancellation," c/o Postmaster, capital city, state and specific ZIP code will receive the cancellations.

First day of issue cancellation orders must be postmarked by March 9. These should be addressed to "50 Flags, Postmaster, Washington, DC 20013." Customers should not mail covers until they have purchased stamps and have affixed them in any desired combination. The address should be written low and to the left and a filler of postal card thickness will help to assure clear cancellations and to prevent damage to envelopes. No remittance should be sent.

State capital cancellation orders must be postmarked by March 9. These cancellations will be applied to covers of all types and stamps other than the state flags issue will be canceled if desired. As with first day of issue cancellation orders, no remittance should be sent. Customers should, however, include self-addressed envelopes, postal cards, post cards, etc., to which sufficient postage has been affixed for return to the sender. Unstamped covers will not be serviced.

The Philatelic Sales Division of the Postal Service will provide full sheet first day of issue cancellations. The sheets will be affixed to large white envelopes. Each sheet will bear 14 "bull's eye" cancellations and one first day of issue cancellation with killer bars. The cost of the sheet will be $6.50, the face value of the stamps, and the usual 50-cent handling charge has been waived for this issue.

Orders for the sheet must be postmarked by Feb. 23 and should be addressed to "50 Flag Sheet, Philatelic Sales Division, Washington, D.C. 20265." Remittance must be by check or money order; neither cash nor postage stamps will be accepted as payment. Customers are requested to include return address labels with their orders.

The 50 flag sheet was designed by Walt Reed of Westport, Conn. These are his first stamp designs.

The American commemorative series panel for this special issue will contain a randomly selected block of four flag stamps. The panels are available by mail order from the Philatelic Sales Division at $2 each and are also on sale at a number of post offices throughout the country.

The 1976 Souvenir Mint Set, scheduled to be placed on sale near the end of the year, will contain one randomly selected flag stamp representing the entire issue.

In NEBRASKA

The blizzard of 1888 is too far back for living Nebraskans to remember, but there are thousands who think the storm of 1975 (see below) belongs in the same record book with the one that left this scene.

Last Week's Picture

On Jan. 10-11, 1975, Omaha and its environs were struck by a snowstorm that left about 14 inches of snow and a lot of misery in its wake, but which covered only a relatively small part of Nebraska. Snow removal equipment was overwhelmed most of an afternoon and night in Omaha, with the result that thousands of cars were temporarily abandoned.

Old NEBRASKA

1867: Sen. Phineas W. Hitchcock submitted a bill to Congress for appropriation of $40,000 to erect a penitentiary in Nebraska.

1876: It was announced that B&M passenger trains would be equipped with Westinghouse airbrakes. The new brakes would mean that the brakeman would no longer have to rush through the coaches and set the brakes by hand. More important would be the increased safety.

About 75 men left Omaha for the gold diggings in the Black Hills. A party about as large went through Lincoln about the same time.

1896: Wisconsin Furniture and Coffin Co. bought lots of 6th and L, where construction was to begin immediately on a wholesale building.

To the disgust of farmers, corn was selling at 18 cents a bushel in Butler County.

1896: With the bicycle fever at its height, the publication of a four-page bicycle Sunday supplement was announced.

J. Sterling Morton was elected president of the State Historical Society.

1906: The Imperial Chinese Commission appointed to investigate the educational system of the United States paid a visit to Lincoln.

The new agricultural hall at the state farm, as the University of Nebraska's Agricultural College campus was called, was dedicated.

1916: Nebraska dealers were complaining that a severe box-car shortage was curtailing in-shipments of lumber and coal.

1926: The State Board of Agriculture urged more progress in bringing about legislation that would place agriculture on an equality with other industries.

1936: Former President Herbert Hoover spoke in Lincoln before an audience of 9,500 at the University of Nebraska Coliseum, outlining a platform to help U.S. agriculture.

Gov. R. L. Cochran proposed to extend the facilities of the University of Nebraska extension division to inmates of the state's penal institutions.

1946: Eighty government constructed AAA grain bins were sold in Scottsbluff to persons intending to convert them into homes to ease the housing shortage.

About 7,000 packing house workers at Swift, Cudahy, Wilson and Armour, and the Kingan & Co. packing plants in Omaha went on strike. Housewives began stockpiling meat in fear of a shortage.

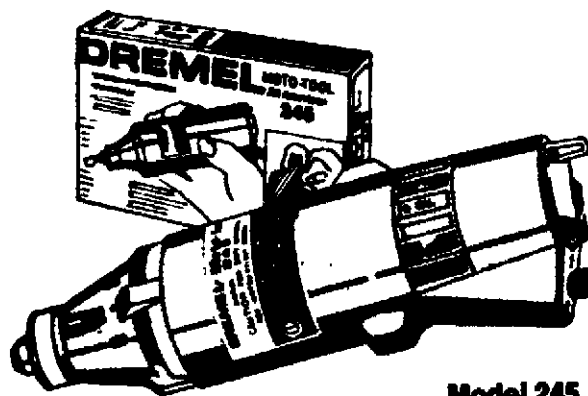

1956: Lincoln City Forester Darrel Parker was bound over to District Court on a charge of first degree murder in connection with the death of his wife.

The Library Board proposed a new $850,000 three-story, stone and glass main library, to be located on the south side of N, between 14th and 15th.

1968: Fire which broke out in the upper part of the Glo Wall Placknett Farm, Inc., elevator near De Witt, destroyed the elevator and about 8,000 bushels of corn, alfalfa pellets and protein additives. About 2,000 head of cattle were moved to a commercial feed lot at Valley.

GIANCANA

true?—H. C., Chicago.

A. It can, but no one is ever going to get the CIA to admit complicity in the Giancana assassination.

Q. Aren't most Congressional wives little more than repressed stage props?—Jerry Brecher, Los Angeles.

A. Most of them would describe themselves in a different manner—most probably as "strongly supportive housewives"—but repressed stage props is probably more truthful. Few Congressional wives have the gumption or character to disagree publicly with their husbands. Good book on the subject is "The Power Lovers" by Myra MacPherson.

Q. Is Jane Fonda going to star in a film on the life of Patty Hearst?—Gretchen Moody, San Leandro, Cal.

A. Says Jane Fonda: "I wouldn't dream of making a movie about Patty Hearst. She's been exploited enough."

Q. President Ford appointed singer Pearl Bailey a member of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations. Is this because Pearl has so generously entertained for him at the White House, or because she is a diplomat of experience and expertise?—J. R. R., Alexandria, Va.

A. Pearl Bailey is a black singer of tact and expertise. Most probably the President appointed her out of gratitude and because she gets on so well with people of every stripe.

Q. Is it a fact that Sean Connery is an illegitimate member of British royalty? How did he get started in show biz?—Jackie May, Asheville, N. C.

A. Sean Connery is a commoner of legitimate birth. He was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, on Aug. 25, 1930. He started in show business as a chorus boy in the British stage production of "South Pacific."

Q. Does Elliot Richardson, now Secretary of Commerce, want to become President of the United States?—Iolanthe Biggers, New York City.

A. Richardson has never made any secret of his ambition. He considers himself in the public service and would like the top position, preferably in 1980.

Q. Can you tell us anything about the actress who plays Nurse Ratched in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest"?—Ellen Sharpe, Chicago.

A. She is Louise Fletcher, 41, an actress married to producer Jerry Bick. She has two sons, John, 12; Andrew, 14; was a TV actress of some note before she retired from the profession in 1962. She was born in Alabama, the oldest child of deaf parents. She was educated in Mississippi and North Carolina. Since "Cuckoo," she is in demand, plans to choose her future roles carefully.

LOUISE FLETCHER AND JACK NICHOLSON IN 'ONE FLEW OVER THE CUCKOO'S NEST'

Q. I have been told that some of the waste from nuclear power plants is radioactive and must be kept from contaminating the environment for thousands of years. Is that true?—Mary Ellen Bischoff, Sacramento, Cal.

A. Yes, it is true. Plutonium wastes are highly radioactive and must be stored underground in giant vats or in mines or in other secure locations where the radioactive element does not contaminate man.

Q. Is Carl Albert, Speaker of the House, hung up on Koreans?—S. T., Baltimore, Md.

A. Speaker Albert is fond of many Orientals, among them some Korean females.

Q. I have been told that in all of Hollywood there are only two "bankable" female stars. What does that mean, and who are they?—Cindy Berger, Long Beach, Cal.

A. It means that banks will finance only those motion pictures starring Barbra Streisand or Liza Minnelli.

BARBRA STREISAND

LIZA MINNELLI

Q. What has happened to Anastas Mikoyan, one of the last of the original Bolsheviks? Is he alive or dead?—Henry Fisher, Mt. Vernon, N.Y.

A. Mikoyan celebrated his 80th birthday on Nov. 25, 1975. He was awarded for the sixth time the Order of Lenin, which is the highest civilian decoration granted by the Soviet Union. Mikoyan, a member of the Bolshevik party before the Russian Revolution, was appointed a member of the Communist Central Committee in 1923. Stalin had Mikoyan scheduled for execution when Stalin died. Mikoyan was rescued from near-exile in 1958 by Nikita Khrushchev, whose first deputy he became. "I am lucky," says Mikoyan, "to be alive."

Q. I have been told that American film stars in Japan receive more money for TV commercials than Japanese film stars. What's the story?—Neal Fenwick, Deal, N.J.

A. The story is that Alain Delon, a French film star, receives more for commercials in Japan than anyone else. After Delon comes Peter Falk. Delon last year was paid 75 million yen (U.S. $250,000) for promoting the D'Urban brand of suits, while American TV star Peter Falk was paid 65 million yen (U.S. $215,000) for plugging the Mackenzie line.

When you're exploring a fascinating new technology books alone are not enough.

If you're like most men, deep down inside there's still a bit of the boy who loved to go exploring... and who'd love to go again.

Well, now you can.

Only this time you'll explore the expanding world of electronics... a world more fascinating than any you ever dreamed of as a boy.

Learn by exploring... Bell & Howell Schools offers an exciting way for you to gain new occupational skills in electronics.

Everybody enjoys learning something new, but why learn it the old way? Classes to go to. Lectures to sit through. And only a bunch of books to keep you interested. Bell & Howell Schools' adventure in learning is a far cry from all that.

You can probe into electronics and learn exciting new occupational skills right in your own home, in your spare time. On whatever days and whatever hours you choose. So there's no need to give up your present job and paycheck just because you want to learn something new.

What's more, when you're exploring a field as fascinating as electronics, reading about it is just not enough. That's why throughout this program you'll get lots of "hands on" experience with some of today's latest electronic training tools.

You'll be stimulated for hours on end as you build, experiment and learn while using the latest ideas and techniques in this fascinating field.

As part of the program you'll actually learn to build and work with your own electronics laboratory. Using it to put many of today's most dynamic electronic discoveries to the test... including electronic miniaturization.

Among the things you'll discover is how the development of tiny integrated circuits has made possible an electronic calculator small enough to fit into a shirt pocket! And a wristwatch that flashes the time with the push of a button.

You'll investigate the concept of "logic circuits". An idea that has been with us for centuries but only in recent years put to use as the "brain" behind all the new digital consumer appliances we see today.

But more important than anything else is the new occupational skills you'll develop in electronics troubleshooting. While no assurance of income opportunities can be offered, you will develop skills that could lead you in exciting new directions. Use your training.

1. To seek out a job in electronics industry.
2. To upgrade your current job.
3. As a foundation for advanced programs in electronics.

You build and perform many exciting experiments with Bell & Howell's Electro-Lab[®], an exclusive electronics training system.

Using our successful step-by-step method, you'll build:

1. A design console, for setting up and examining circuits.
2. A digital multimeter for measuring voltage, resistance and current (it displays its findings in big, clear numbers like a digital clock).
3. A solid-state "triggered sweep" oscilloscope—similar in principle to the kind used in hospital operating rooms to monitor heartbeats. You'll use it to monitor the "heartbeats" of tiny integrated circuits. The "triggered sweep" feature locks in signals for easier observation.

Step-by-step you'll build and experiment with Bell & Howell's new generation color TV—investigating digital features you've probably never seen before!

This 25" diagonal color TV has digital features that are likely to appear on all TV's of the future. As you build it you'll probe into the technology behind all-electronic tuning. And into the digital circuitry of channel numbers that appear right on the screen! You'll also build in a remarkable on-the-screen digital clock, that flashes the time in hours, minutes and seconds. Your new skills will enable you to program a special automatic channel selector to skip over "dead" channels and go directly to the channels of your choice.

You'll also gain a better understanding of the exceptional color clarity of the Black Matrix picture tube, as well as a working knowledge of "state of the art" integrated circuitry and the 100% solid-state chassis.

After building and experimenting with this TV, you'll be equipped with the skills that could put you ahead of the field in electronics know-how.

We try to give more personal attention than other learn-at-home programs.

1. Toll-free phone-in assistance. Should you ever run into a rough spot during the program, we'll be there to help. While many schools make you mail in your questions, we have a toll-free line for questions that can't wait.

2. In-person "help sessions". These are held in 50 major cities at various times throughout the year where you can talk shop with your instructors and fellow students.

No electronics background needed.

What you really need is the thing you've never lost. A boy's love for exploring. Now you can go again, only this time learning new occupational skills all along the way!

Mail the postage-paid card today for more details!

Taken for vocational purposes, this program is approved by the state approval agency for Veterans' Benefits.

CAR-POOLING If you drive 10 miles each way to work in an ordinary car, your annual commuting costs approach about $950. If you join a five-person car-pool, you can save $650 of that amount. The Federal Highway Administration claims car-poolers save that much in gasoline, repairs, parking, insurance and depreciation.

CORPORATE MORALITY Some months ago Fred T. Allen, president of Pitney Bowes, commissioned Opinion Research Corp. to conduct a survey of executive attitudes on bribery. In the survey, 531 top and middle managers from a representative cross section of American business were polled on how they viewed the bribing of foreign officials by employees of U.S. corporations in attracting and retaining contracts.

The results:
-- While 50% of the executives surveyed said that bribes should not be paid to foreign officials, 48% said they should be paid if such practices were prevalent in the particular foreign country.
-- When asked if U.S. legislation would be effective in preventing such bribery by U.S. nationals, 92% felt that it would not -- that such bribery would continue despite U.S. legislation. Interestingly, however, the executives felt that publicity would be more effective in discouraging such bribery.

-- Of those who condoned the practice, 68% said bribery was a cost of doing business in certain countries. Thirty-eight percent said it was an established practice, implying that there was no way around it.

In a speech to the American Chamber of Commerce in Switzerland, Fred Allen declared: "Businessmen must realize that because of the almost daily revelation of corporate immorality and illegality over the past two years or so, the public now thinks in terms of 'corporate corruption,' not 'corporate morality.'"

"I feel we [business] should say to the public that we do not condone and will not make excuses for those who offend our sense of corporate morality."

"When we consider corporate morality, we must conclude that no price is too high, for the reality is that in the long run we have no alternative to ethical business behavior."

"Business organizations usually reflect the character of their leader. Thus, it is necessary for the corporate leadership to establish and publish the pattern for business ethics which will permeate the entire company."

TITO WARNS KGB, the Soviet security apparatus, has spies everywhere--not only in capitalist countries but in Communist ones as well. These men not only seek out information, they act as provocateurs.

A few weeks ago Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia sent Stane Dolanc, secretary of the Yugoslavia Presidium, to Moscow with an ultimatum. Unless Moscow stopped supporting Cominform groups in Yugoslavia, Tito warned, he would arrest the conspirators, place them on trial, and reveal to the world the extent of Soviet interference and trouble-making in the domestic affairs of so-called friendly and sovereign countries.

STACKED DECK Before President Ford departed on his Pacific tour last month to Peking, Djakarta and Manila, Mrs. Betty Ford was quietly visited in the White House by Mrs. Imelda Romualdez Marcos, First Lady of the Philippines. Betty and Imelda shared tea for 45 minutes during which Mrs. Marcos promised the Fords an overwhelming welcome in Manila.

Mrs. Marcos came through. Thousands of Filipinos lined the motorcade route along Manila Bay, waving American flags and performing native dances as President and Mrs. Ford were chauffeured into the city.

What the American journalists who accompanied the Presidential party failed to report was that prior to the Ford arrival in the Philippines, a circular was distributed to government employees ordering the Filipinos to line the motorcade route on Saturday, which is for most of them a day off.

The Marcos government warned employees that attendance would be taken at the route-site. The Filipinos assigned to perform dances were told, however, that they would be allowed to keep the new native costumes and Barong Filipino shirts given them.

AGNELLI Last June in Italy's regional elections, the Communists marched into power in practically all of Italy's major cities.

As the ruling Christian Democratic Party founders, Italians who still believe in capitalism say that their only hope lies in finding a crusader who can form a new party. Their nominee: Giovanni Agnelli, the head of the Fiat auto empire, Italy's single largest employer (200,000 people), and Italy's richest man (estimated worth: $900 million).

Agnelli, 55, is chairman of the Italian Federation of Industries. For years he has eschewed politics. But now that Italy is inexorably going Communist, he may be the only man who can run the government in some sort of tandem with Enrico Berlinguer, the Communist leader and most popular politician in Rome.

Agnelli has always maintained good relations with the trade unions, and his supporters say he is the only man in their nation who can stem the Red tide. At this writing, however, Agnelli has not yet made a decision to enter politics. In the final analysis, it may be the only way there is for him to hold onto his empire.

GIOVANNI AGNELLI ABOARD HIS YACHT WITH A WOMAN FRIEND

CHINESE ASTRONAUTS Prof. Heinz Kaminski of the Bochum Observatory, West Germany's leading space authority, believes the People's Republic of China is now capable of directing nuclear weapons to any city or point on the greater part of the inhabited world.

Kaminski believes Chinese satellites are now capable of spying on military installations throughout the Soviet Union. He says, "The People's Republic of China is in a position to direct tactical nuclear weapons to any point between the 70th northern and the 70th southern parallels."

Kaminski made his observations after studying China's latest successful space venture, in which it brought its fourth satellite down to a soft landing. Having solved the "return problem," the Chinese, according to Kaminski, have mastered the takeoff and landing techniques that will enable them to send manned spaceships into orbit just as the U.S. and Soviets have.

It is significant that the Chinese waited until President Ford and his party were in Peking this past December to retrieve their fourth satellite.

Since the Kissinger-Nixon visit to the People's Republic of China, the U.S. has secretly been providing Peking with space reconnaissance photos of the Sino-Soviet frontier and the disposition of Soviet troops.

A few weeks ago China launched a fifth satellite, thereby announcing to the intelligence community that it has now achieved its own space spying capability.

WIFE-SWAPPING CLERGYMEN Pierre Levejac and Charles Feurnich, two Protestant pastors in Paris, have set up a ménage-à-quatre. They share their wives, Claire and Monique, their four daughters and two sons, and, of course, their sizable home.

Levejac and Feurnich regard their project as a theological experiment, but the French Reformed Church's Commission of Ministers suspended the two clerics for two years. The pastors, however, with the consent of their congregations, continue to hold well-attended services.

In Copenhagen, Gilte Berg, 38, an unmarried clergywoman, has given birth to a son out of wedlock. Chaplain Berg, who preaches to the inmates of a prison in a Copenhagen suburb, is as popular with her flock as ever.

In other European countries--Holland is a particular example--Roman Catholic priests are opting for marriage, insisting that matrimony does not constitute a betrayal of their priestly duties. Marriage, they say, is not incompatible with the religious life.

NATION OF IMMIGRANTS The United States is a nation of immigrants, of which a majority come from Europe. Between 1820 and 1974, 46,712,725 immigrants entered the United States; 76.8% of these immigrants (35,888,309) were Europeans. Herewith a chart documenting the number of immigrants in millions and their land of origin.

PRINCESS GRACE AND PRINCESS CAROLINE: MOTHER-DAUGHTER CHIC

PRINCESS GRACE Princess Grace of Monaco and Philadelphia has been overshadowed of late by the hectic social life of her tall, beautiful daughter, Caroline. But now a biography of the former Grace Kelly has been written by British author Gwen Robyns. Although Robyns' latest books have contained critical life stories of actresses Vivien Leigh and Margaret Rutherford, Robyns is rapturous about Princess Grace -- "The kind of woman who will only ride sidesaddle." Another characteristic Robyns reveals about Monaco's princess is that she believes firmly in the occult and astrology. For example, most of the guests invited to her 40th birthday celebration were born under the sign of Scorpio, from Oct. 23 to Nov. 21. Princess Grace, now 46, was born Nov. 12, 1929.

U.S. team counts on Sheila Young of Detroit to win a pair of gold medals at the Winter Olympics in Innsbruck, Austria, next month.

Speed Skater Sheila Young— Our One Hope for the Olympics

by L. H. Whittemore

Once again, the Olympics. The focus now turns to the 1976 Winter Games at Innsbruck, Austria, to begin in February. Four years ago, in Japan, the United States earned only sixth place and just three gold medals. What chance, if any, has America this time?

The nation's hopes may have to rest primarily on its speed skating team. In fact, there is only one American favored in any category of the Winter Olympics to win a gold medal: Sheila Young, 25, the champion "sprinter" on skates from Detroit.

To make matters more tense, mainly for Sheila, the green-eyed, dark-haired skater is expected to pick up not one but two gold medals, in races of 500 and 1000 meters. Those victories have been a personal goal in her life for the past 10 years. (Her best competitive time for 500 meters is 41.8 seconds and for 1000 meters 1 minute 26.58 seconds. Both are U.S. records but not world marks.)

"I started having nightmares last spring," she says. "I'm at the Olympics, but I haven't prepared enough. I'm being called to the starting line, but my skates aren't even sharpened. The race is beginning, but I'm so nervous that I break into a sweat. That's when I wake up, terrified, in the middle of the night."

The bad dreams have something to do with the Innsbruck rink itself where Sheila took a bad fall in 1974 and lost the Women's World Sprint Championship title she had won at Oslo in '73.

"I'm doing well," she was thinking after that race had begun. She and another skater, each in her own lane, sped against the stopwatch. Sheila's powerful legs pushed sideward in strong, smooth glides and her arms swung like pendulums as she picked up speed. Going into the first curve, with her torso bent almost parallel to the ice, she began crossing her legs in scissors-like fashion. Coming out of the turn, she thought, "Yes, my time is going to be real good." Then it happened. The tip of her left skate came down too soon and Sheila was suddenly flying forward onto the ice and then sliding headlong on her stomach and thinking, "Oh, no, no, no!"

But that was only a momentary setback in Sheila Young's steady progression toward the upcoming Winter Games. Last year she regained the title Salute to news hounds. A while back, we bit back at some of the sharks in the news business, who shoot from the lip. But fair is fair. We know that for every sharktoothed lipshooter, there are scores of conscientious news hounds who dig carefully for the facts and think twice about gnawing on skeletons that aren't really there. The happy result is that the truth does eventually win out, even the truth about America's complex energy problems, which are still far from solved.

Nosing out the facts. We're impressed by the way the press has ripped apart Congressional proposals to break up the larger integrated oil companies. Typical was this from Alabama's Birmingham News. "To argue that vertical integration causes higher prices is ridiculous," said the News. "Usually it is done to achieve greater efficiency and to keep prices as low as possible. It is because of their great size that the major oil companies are able to make the huge investments which are needed to open up new oil fields, build refineries, and operate fleets of tankers, barges and trucks. Breaking up the largest oil companies would severely restrict the industry's ability to raise the capital that will be needed to increase domestic production in the years ahead."

We couldn't have said it better, except maybe to remind our readers of the old cries to break up baseball's New York Yankees. Now that the Gehrigs and Babe Ruths are no longer there, wouldn't it be nice to see some of their home-run efficiency again?

Ahead of the political pack. Finding large new supplies of domestic crude oil and natural gas means looking more offshore, because that's where the most promising exploration areas are. Happily for U.S. energy prospects, more and more journalists understand that (even if many politicians are still dragging their feet). In Wilmington, Del., which is not far from some of the proposed Atlantic drilling, the Evening Journal champions environmental protections offshore (as we do), but says (as we've been saying) that they must be balanced against the need for "...those activities that may be imposed...by the national interest—i.e., the need for offshore oil." In other words: the environment counts but so do new jobs and the health of the economy.

A leg up on government. While the press and public continue to deplore the politicians' low-gear crawl toward an equitable energy policy, Mr. and Ms. America received these kudos from the Washington Post: "The trend to more economic and efficient cars means that Americans are beginning to build themselves a national energy policy from the bottom up—without much guidance from their government, but with a good sense of present necessity and future prospects."

To which we add: grassroots movements work faster when they've got the help and coordination of the men and women running the country. Maybe Washington will finally get the message and provide the sound energy policy the country needs.

SKATER CONTINUED

at the competition in Goteborg, Sweden.

The second of four children, she started speed skating in Detroit at age 9. Her father, a traffic manager for an automotive-supply plant, encouraged her to work hard and persevere.

Three times after Sheila's graduation from Denby High School in 1968, she tried and failed to make the U.S. Sprint Team as a speed skater. The turning point came in late 1971, when she finally succeeded, only to place fourth in the 500-meter race at the 1972 Winter Olympics.

"That's when the real work began," she says. "It showed me how much more I'd have to put into the training."

And train she did. Her coach, Dutchman Peter Schotting, told her that within a year she could be the best female sprinter in the world. His prediction proved correct: Sheila Young is the only American to have won the world sprint championship twice. And, forcing herself to skate hours each day to shave just seconds off her time, she has won 19 international medals.

A bicyclist, too

In addition, Sheila is a top bicyclist. In 1973, in Spain, she won the Women's World Sprint Cycling Championship. She has been cycling since age 12 and, while it helps to keep her in shape for the skating, she regards it as a separate amateur sport.

The grueling work has taken its toll. "I could never go through another four years of this," says Sheila. For her, the Olympics at Innsbruck will mean now or never.

Meanwhile, the preparations go on. The U.S. Olympic Team trials for speed skaters were held in West Allis, Wis. A select group of 14 members then left for Inzell, West Germany, to practice until the Winter Games begin.

Aside from Sheila Young, perhaps the brightest prospect is Dan Carroll, 26, a top all-around speed skater who is making a sensational comeback. Carroll, a native of St. Louis, competed in the 1968 and 1972 Olympics, but then quit skating "because I was physically and emotionally tired." After two years, plus a serious knee operation, he started again. Within months he was reaching new heights and, in the Men's World Championships last year, he placed second in the 1500-meter event. His overall standing of sixth was the best for an American in 25 years.

Other contenders

Also in the running for Olympic speed skating medals are Leah Poulos (World Sprint Champion in 1974, when she temporarily dethroned Sheila Young); her fiancé, Peter Mueller; and Dan Immerfall, all from Wisconsin.

This country's leading figure skating entry will be Dorothy Hamill of Riverside, Conn. In Alpine skiing, the best chance for the U.S. lies with Cindy Nelson of Lutsen, Minn., but Abbi Fisher of South Conway, N.H., is also strong. The American ice hockey team possibly could finish second behind Russia or, as some believe, as low as sixth. Elsewhere, the U.S. is too weak for contention.

All of which serves to intensify a serious, almost bitter complaint from coach Schotting and many of his speed skaters. Why, they ask, if they are America's best prospects for the Winter Olympics, are they so neglected in terms of financial and other kinds of support?

"It doesn't make sense," says Schotting. "Unlike European skaters, who are subsidized with special facilities, organized training programs and expense funds, the skater in the U.S. has been under a tremendous handicap."

The West Allis rink

One obvious hardship is the fact that the artificially frozen, oval outdoor rink in West Allis, a suburb of Milwaukee, is the only 400-meter Olympic track in all of North America, and the only one suitable for training and testing.

Also, the rink is located in a depressing industrial section at the far end of the Wisconsin state fairgrounds and opens too late in the fall and closes too early in spring. (European rinks are open an average of 157 days a year; the Russians get 225 skating days, American skaters only 82.)

This season, skaters in other countries began working out in early September, but U.S. skaters had to exercise on dry land until late October. "By then," Schotting points out, "we were on our way to West Berlin, where we could try to catch up with the others." The trip lasted six weeks and cost about $1200 for each of 45 American skaters, who paid for it themselves.

A speed skater needs four years of development, according to Dan Carroll, "but there's almost no help until after you've made the Olympic team and are off to the games."

At one time, Carroll worked as a janitor at night, went to Marquette University in the morning and trained in the afternoon.

"When those speed skaters are at the Olympics," Schotting says with an edge of disgust, "they will be standing there, not so much for the United States, but alone, for themselves. Because they won't owe anybody anything."

Sheila Young herself is less harsh. She admits, for example, her own failure to "sell" herself and gain support, say, from a U.S. company. And she is fortunate that her father chipped in $1000 a year for skating and cycling.

A frequent traveler

But she is also grateful for a life full of travel and the thrill of competing in amateur international sports. Sheila has made 11 overseas trips—eight for skating, three for cycling—since 1970.

"I do the sports only secondarily for my own personal satisfaction," she says. "The main reason is the traveling and coming into contact with different people all over the world. It'll be hard to give up."

What, exactly, do the Olympics mean to her? "What they don't mean," she replies, "is politics. I meet so many girls from all different countries. We each have a common goal—our skating. None of us thinks of the political aspects. We're all fighting against the clock. To me, the idea of one country trying to beat another is terrible."

Sheila points to the fact that she and a Russian girl have become friends because of their skating. Neither can speak the other's language, but both know a bit of German.

"When we're able to communicate," Sheila says, "we get excited, and it's great. I'm proud to be an American, but I don't see the games as nationalistic. It's governments, not people, that fight each other."

Aside from the travel and skating, Sheila Young's life has been a rather narrow one, almost devoid of college education (six credits in German from the University of Wisconsin), normal social activity and career training.

Her eye on the goal

In fact, she has kept putting off most major decisions for her life until after the Olympic Games in February. Living in West Allis, she has "no real serious ambitions" for the future. Over the long, uphill struggle, she has been a waitress, off and on, and a clerk in a bookstore. She has a boyfriend but trains up to six hours a day and thinks of little else but skating.

"I think about it from the time I wake up," she says. "I plan my whole day around the skating. And afterward, I think about how the workout went."

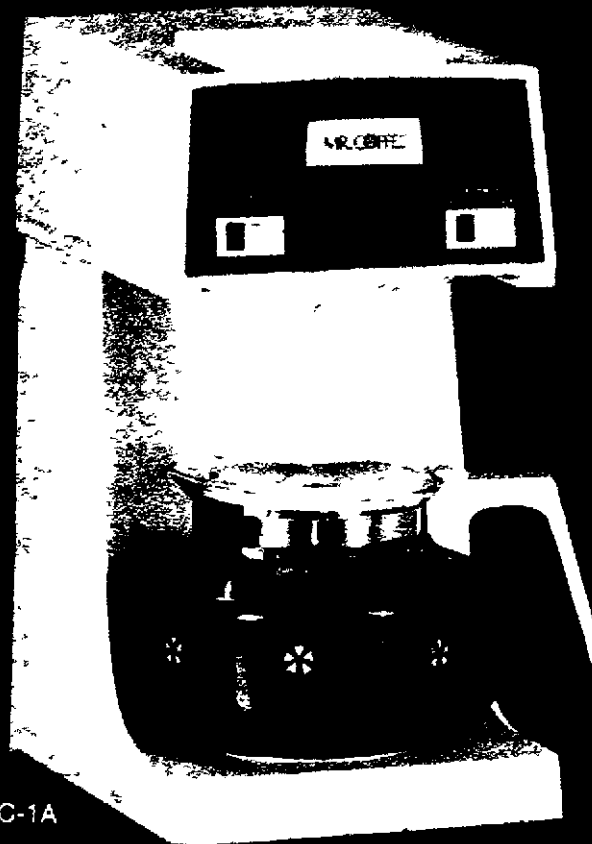

Once she steps up to the starting line in Innsbruck, however, her life will be compressed into single-minded concentration. At 127 pounds, just under five-feet-four, she will become a dynamo of strength and speed. To win, her technique must be flawless.

The betting is that Sheila Young, after years of personal sacrifice, and nightmares notwithstanding, will have it.

CARDS WITH FESTIVE CAKE

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

The next time you invite guests for an evening of cards, be ready with a beautiful cake, mellow with fruit and swirled with luscious frosting. With it serve a frosty, refreshing punch with or without "spirits," as well as coffee.

FESTIVE CAKE

3 cups all-purpose flour	1½ cups vegetable oil
2 cups sugar	1 teaspoon almond extract
1 teaspoon baking soda	2 cups chopped firm, ripe bananas
1 teaspoon salt	1 can (8 oz.) crushed pineapple
1 teaspoon cinnamon	Cream Cheese Frosting
1 cup chopped almonds
3 eggs

Mix and sift flour, sugar, baking soda, salt and cinnamon; stir in almonds. Beat eggs slightly; combine with oil, almond extract, bananas and undrained pineapple. Add to dry ingredients; mix thoroughly, but do not beat. Spoon into well-oiled 10-inch tube pan. Bake at 325 degrees for one hour and 20 to 25 minutes. Remove from oven; let stand 10 to 15 minutes; invert on wire cake rack; remove pan. Cool thoroughly before frosting. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

CREAM CHEESE FROSTING: Soften one package (8 oz.) cream cheese and ½ cup butter or margarine to room temperature. Cream together with one pound confectioners (powdered) sugar and one tablespoon instant chocolate. Place cool cake on cake plate; frost top and sides. Store in refrigerator until ready to serve.

FROSTY FRUIT PUNCH

Combine two cans (6 oz. each) or one can (12 oz.) frozen Fruit Juicy Red Hawaiian Punch concentrate, partially thawed, two cups water and one cup unsweetened pineapple juice. Stir well. Slowly stir in two bottles (12 oz. each) carbonated lemon-lime beverage. Add ice cubes. Makes about two quarts or 16 half-cup servings. For a "spirited" version, add one cup light rum. Makes 18 half-cup servings.

Syndicate of terror: This devastating bomb blast at London's Old Bailey court was laid to the Irish Republican Army. But outrages like this are made possible by the support of a well-heeled, efficient international organization.

Terrorists:

How They Operate a Worldwide Network

by Walter W. Howard

Wounded terrorist being carried from Vienna building after bold attack by pro-Arab leftists last Dec. 21 on conference of high officials of the oil-producing countries.

BEIRUT, LEBANON.

In a lavish headquarters here, a squat, bespectacled little man named Habib Bakary recently spent nearly an hour talking to three Latin Americans about a job he wanted done in France. Early the same afternoon, he dictated a letter to a Japanese secret organization called the Red Army, reviewed plans for a frontier raid into nearby Israel, and telephoned a government official in Libya to ask why the regular quarterly payment hadn't arrived. All the while an armed associate kept watch outside the heavy steel door to his office, which is located in the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) Research Center.

One last item remained on Bakary's desk calendar. Shuffling through his papers he contacted an Irish Republican Army quartermaster to report that a shipment of Czech-made Scorpio sub-machine guns fitted with silencers and folding butts was scheduled to arrive from Prague the next morning. Then Habib Bakary picked up his briefcase and left for a golf date with a Basque Nationalist agent.

Sound fantastic? Not any more, it doesn't. Terrorism, which not too long ago was a sporadic, potluck, hit-and-miss affair, has burgeoned into a systematic, efficient, amply funded international industry that is costing innocent lives throughout the world and is making millions of dollars for cynical and often unprincipled entrepreneurs.

The industry operates with assembly-line efficiency and reaches into many countries. One of its main targets is Israel, which has been hit not only by Palestinian infiltrators but by hired mercenaries like the Japanese Red Army contingent that killed 27 civilians, mostly Puerto Rican pilgrims, at Lod Airport on May 30, 1972.

U.S. is hit, too

But the terrorist professionals also supply equipment, manpower, or both to groups like the IRA, operating in Northern Ireland and England; the Breton separatists, whose activities in France have included sabotage of a nuclear power plant; the Basque Nationalists of Spain, who have attacked police officers; and the South Moluccan group that recently gained worldwide notoriety by murdering hostages on a train they seized in Holland. Even the United States isn't immune, as witness the bomb outrages perpetrated by Puerto Rican radicals.

"Terrorist groups pose a threat to the whole civilized world," Major-General Eli Zeira, former Israeli intelligence director, has said.

Much of the terrorist planning is done in offices in the Middle East, where a gusher of Arab oil money is available. Libya's President Moamer Qaddafi, the truculent and unpredictable Big Daddy for several organizations, subsidizes terrorism to the tune of $90 million a year—with bonuses for what he considers particularly successful operations. Cash grants from Libya, Algeria, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia reach an annual total of $265 million.

Corporate techniques

With this kind of cash backing, terrorist organizations have adapted many trappings of corporate big business—executive titles, tables of organization, flow charts, public relations officers, press releases, souvenir key rings, even paid vacations and pension funds for employees. The Syrian-based as-Saiqa has seven different administration sections, one of which coordinates with similar commando groups elsewhere. The IRA has access to a computer complex in Belfast, while the PLO has offices in Beirut, Tripoli, Rome and Paris, along with agents like Said Hammani, who operates out of the Arab League office at 1 Hay Hill in London.

The international cooperation of terrorist organizations has taken on the managerial efficiency of an elaborate cartel. West Germany's Baader-Meinhof gang, made up of revolutionary freebooters, recently found it difficult to conduct explosives and firearms training on its home bases, so they sent recruits to Jordan for field experience with Palestinian instructors. At least three Palestinian advisers serve with the IRA in Ireland today. In Benghazi, Libya, a punishing, systematic, two-month course in commando training is available to all comers.

Help available

The availability of this kind of professional help and guidance has simplified the task of bringing a new terrorist organization into being. Few people outside of Holland had heard of the South Moluccans before they organized their train seizure in December. A Basque lawyer named Jose Echebarrieta flew to Dublin in November, 1974. After enlisting the active help of top IRA personnel, including explosives expert Patrick Young, his group was able to pull off a series of killings, bank robberies and raids on military bases.

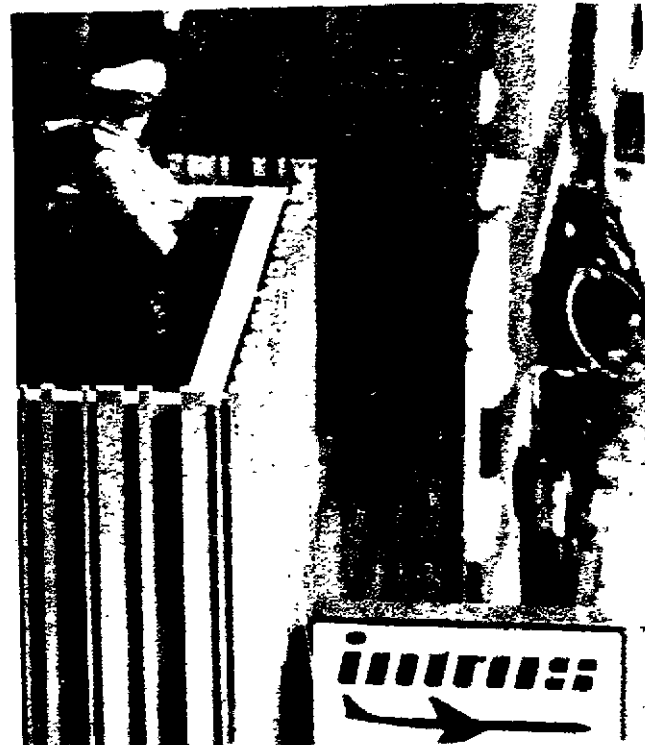

What binds different terrorist groups the world over so closely together is a mutual commitment to the act of terrorism itself. As several entrepreneurs of violence are quick to admit, the individual aims of these organizations can vary widely. Groups like the Palestinians, the IRA, the Puerto Rican Nationalists, the Basques and the South Moluccans each pursue specific and well-defined political objectives, however impractical and unlikely they may seem. Yet they cooperate with one another because they all agree that terrorism is their most effective weapon—and that they can learn from each other how best to use it.

Arafat's turning point

A turning point in the status of the world terrorist movement occurred last year, when Palestinian chieftain Yasir Arafat formally addressed the United Nations. Congratulatory letters, calls and cables from a dozen groups in Europe, the Middle East, Latin America and the Far East arrived at PLO headquarters in Beirut. Why not? After all, the fact that Arafat had been invited to appear at the world forum gave all terrorists—whatever their goals—more prestige and respectability.

The tremendous increase in scope and sophistication of the terrorist movement has finally produced an upsurge of countermeasures by established governments all over the world. Now that terrorism has become a major industry, Israel, the U.S. and other countries cooperate closely with Interpol, the international police communications network. Interpol recently hired three former terrorists to sift its voluminous picture files in search of familiar faces.

Governments have also improved and strengthened their own security agencies, organized special new anti-terrorist units, and developed close working relationships with each other, whatever their basic political differences, in an effort to beat down the threat. Except for Libya and Yemen, even the Arab states participate in the undercover anti-guerrilla campaign, although most of them pay lip service to the Palestine commandos.

Octopus fights back

The U.S. has made countermeasures against terrorists an interagency responsibility of the CIA, the FBI, and the Defense, Treasury and State Departments. Security at diplomatic centers and military airports abroad has been beefed up in personnel and technology. One of the most resourceful U.S. weapons is a device called Octopus, computerized files in Langley, Va., into which are fed itineraries, travel schedules, names and profiles with the aim of developing probable patterns of terrorist strikes.

Despite these and other security developments, terrorism promises to remain an ever-sharpening threat. The entire world has become a theater of war, a target area in which bombings, kidnappings, robberies and murders can be planned and carried out to order. Terrorists have always had the capacity to kill at random or to grab innocent hostages. Now with their growing power and sophistication they're learning how to zero in on officials higher and higher in the business, diplomatic and governmental hierarchy.

Says Capt. Paul Horst of the West German police grimly: "Two women, both relative amateurs, came fairly close to killing President Ford. What happens when experienced professionals go to work?"

Don't Worry If You're Shy

by Charlotte K. Beyers

PALO ALTO, CAL.

Your heart races, you feel hot and sweaty and your mouth is dry. Your knees may quake and your hands shake. These are common symptoms of shyness. If this has happened to you, take courage from the work of Dr. Philip Zimbardo, Stanford University professor of social psychology.

Dr. Zimbardo began studying shyness in 1972 when a number of his students came to him after class to ask about solutions to this common form of anxiety.

"To satisfy my curiosity as well as theirs, we started a survey," he says. "From the first survey of 400 Stanford students, we tried to discover the most likely consequences of shyness and how prevalent it is." Zimbardo says he was surprised to find that at least 40 percent of the respondents had experienced shyness.

As a follow-up, Zimbardo and two graduate students, Paul Pilkonis and Robert Norwood, distributed a questionnaire to 1000 students at Stanford, the University of California at Berkeley and at Palo Alto High School.

While over 40 percent of those surveyed considered themselves as shy right now, an amazing 82 percent said they had experienced shyness at some time during their lives. Seventeen percent admitted to reacting shyly in specific situations such as having to give a speech or ask a favor. Only 10 of the 1000 students said they had never known shyness.

In a third survey—of 533 naval personnel at San Diego Naval Base—Zimbardo found that shy people see the world differently from others. This survey was conducted by the Personnel Human Resources Management Center at San Diego and was an attempt to have the men and women evaluate their officers or persons supervising them.

Here are some findings:

- Shy people represent an untapped reservoir of leaders. They have intelligence, ability and many task skills that are often lost through inability to accept interpersonal obligations.

- Shy people are often found to be full of personal dissatisfaction and to see their shyness as an undesirable characteristic. They tend to transfer or project this negativity onto situations in which they feel shy. In some cases, they blame other people (supervisors) and life situations for their unhappiness.

Zimbardo is optimistic about helping shy people and hopes to start a clinic on the Stanford campus. "People who do not make eye contact during conversation or who do not know how to start and end a conversation can be helped by using videotape feedback, by more social interaction and by assertion training," he says.

For the past three years the psychologist has been conducting seminars to help students overcome shyness.

Larry Leo, a psychology major, as part of a class assignment interviewed both shy and non-shy people. Surprisingly, he found that shy people were more receptive than others to being questioned. "For once in their life, they found someone interested in them and really opened up," he says.

Leo added that the realization that so many people are shy helped him. "I found that my own shyness was a crutch that I had been using to prevent me from doing certain things," he explains.

The best treatment, Zimbardo believes, is through sharing and emphasizing community or group goals. Parents should bring children up with the knowledge that they do not have to perform well to receive love. "Love is not an economic commodity," he says.

PARADE asked a number of famous people for their personal experiences with shyness and their recommendations for dealing with it. Here are their answers.

MELVIN BELL, lawyer, lecturer and author: "Yes, I have often been shy. I become flamboyant to hide shyness. Lots of times I would rather stay home than have to go to banquets and large parties where I am asked to speak or even sing a note. I want to crawl under a chair sometimes when that happens.

"I have never been shy in court. Sometimes I have to press or force myself to overcome this. My stomach will get all knotted. As a law student, I hated to recite. To overcome shyness, you have to fight. To be a public speaker, you must force yourself.

"Lots of people who overreact, or who are flamboyant like me, are really shy."

JOAN SUTHERLAND, opera star: "As a child I was always shy because I was so outsize or large. I still am shy. It's a form of nervousness. I feel it sometimes when I meet people in other fields, like famous writers or scientists. Because you lack a little knowledge of their discipline, you feel you might make a gaffe, say something wrong.

"I used to be terribly shy on stage.

Didn't know how to control my feet or hands. My drama coach and producers helped me overcome this. They showed me how ridiculous I was to worry and convinced me that I was not alone. Others have these feelings, too.

"I have felt so terrified that I didn't want to go on stage. But at the same time, I always knew it was impossible to run away. It's a case of sink or swim. No one can do it for you. If you are going to perform, you must get out there."

KINGMAN BREWSTER, president of Yale University: "Yes, I was shy as a child. I guess I was full of a sense of being in a critical world. My younger years were full of shyness that comes from paranoia, the feeling that the world is down on you or feeling inadequate. It was an animal shyness. I got over it by just growing up, by realizing that all people are fallible, becoming less self-conscious. Exposure from public life helped.

"If I were to advise young people today, I would say participate in many different circumstances so that you realize everyone is fallible, everybody is inadequate.

"There is a sense that you are always testing yourself. A shy person may have a sense of always testing himself, whether by competition or absolute standards. This is conducive to a sense of inadequacy."

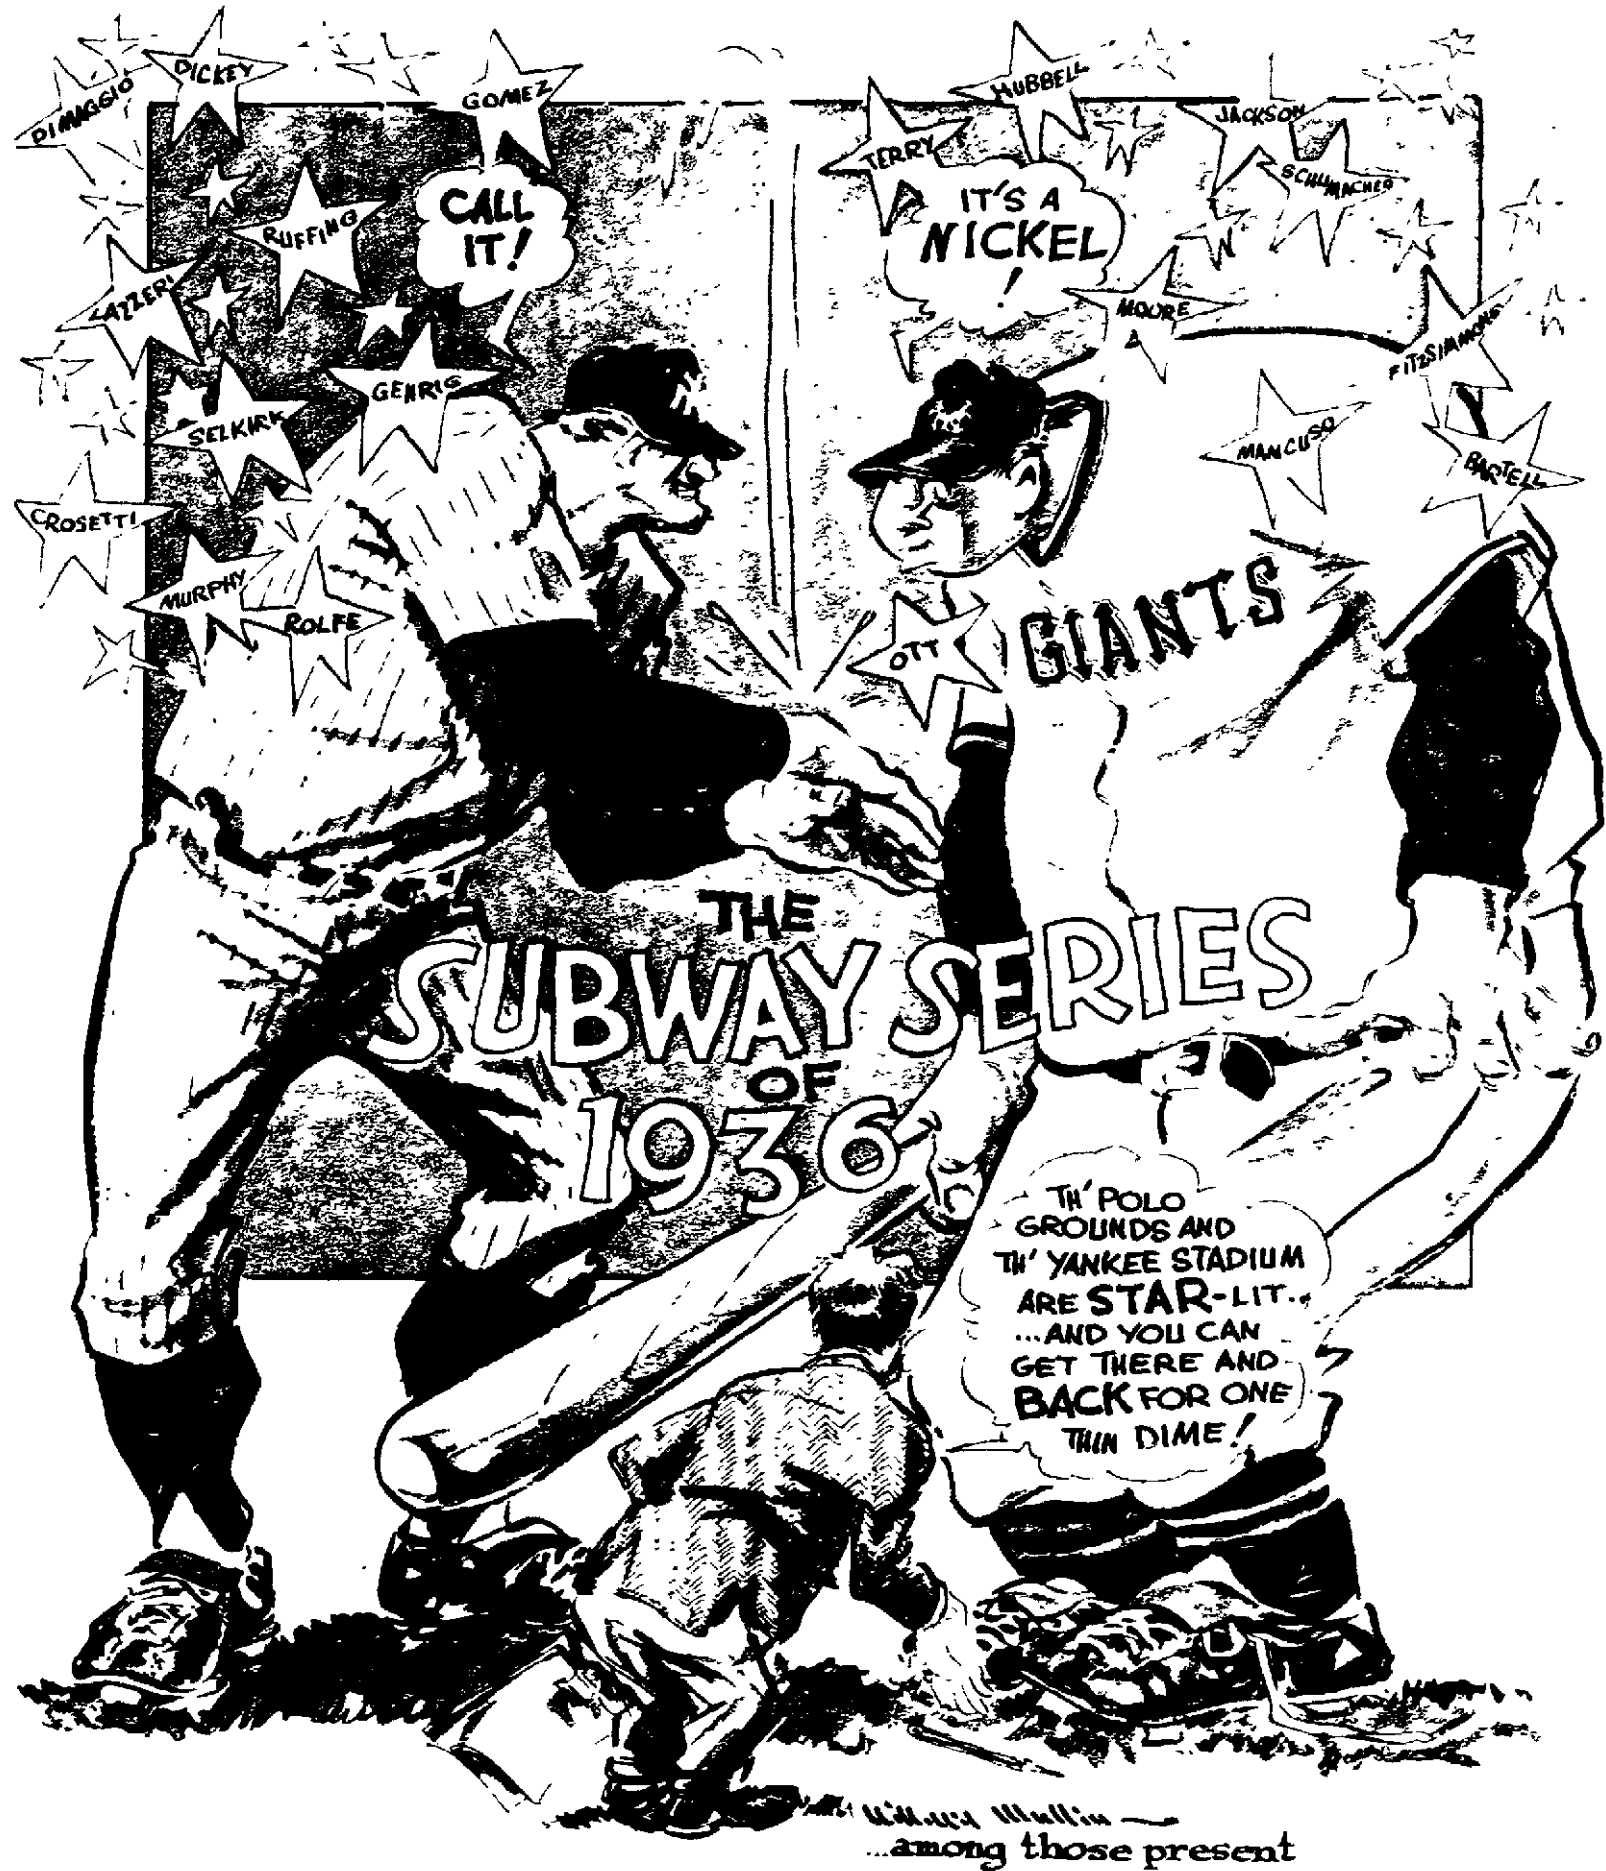

LEE STRASBERG, theatrical director: "Shyness is an unusual sensitivity, an emotional response. It is not a negative characteristic, although society makes it seem that way. There are many shy actors. We help the actor to deal with experiences he has to create on stage. We try to help him learn by relaxation to permit the impulse to find its own expression. Relaxation means the elimination of any unnecessary energies.

"Many people who are inhibited are not shy. They have strong responses. Life and society haven't encouraged these responses. Many people seek acting as a way of expressing themselves under the controlled conditions they could not find elsewhere."

ROBERT MOTHERWELL, painter: "Shyness is a form of alienation, or an inability to identify with a situation. A group of businessmen or small children can still make me shy, whereas I can identify easily with graduate students and aspiring artists."

ISAAC BASHEVIS SINGER, novelist: "I am a shy man and have been shy nearly all my life, perhaps for 50 years. During the last five years, as I have become more known, it is perhaps a little better. Shyness is a compulsion to avoid people and to avoid being exposed. I have suffered a great deal from it.

"It's a kind of inhibition. I wanted to go to a party and I couldn't go. I don't think that people should get over being shy. It is a blessing in disguise. The shy person is the opposite of the aggressive person. Shy people are seldom the great sinners. They allow society to remain in peace."

There is seemingly little to connect an epileptic boy in Tennessee, a California woman going through childbirth, a "cold fingers" sufferer in Boston, and patients elsewhere with headaches, wry neck, heartbeat irregularities, and paralysis from stroke.

Yet all have one thing in common: they are among the beneficiaries of the newest applications of biofeedback, which teaches the individual to control unconscious bodily processes.

For centuries, a handful of yoga and Zen masters have claimed to know how to do this. Only in the last half-dozen years have doctors begun to study such control seriously with the aid of electronic equipment.

While charlatans have been busy offering biofeedback to those who seek a quick turn-on for achieving mystical levels of relaxation and creativity, serious researchers have been trying to apply it to many medical problems, and legitimate payoffs are coming.

Biofeedback is simple in principle, but it may be one of the most fundamental medical discoveries. Biofeedback extends our normal way of learning.

Everything we learn depends on the "feedback" cues we get from various sources—our eyes, ears, hands, feet. In tennis, for example, we hit the ball and, in doing so, feel our arm move, see how the racquet connects with the ball, see where the ball goes—all cues to guide us toward correcting the arm movement for better ball placement next time.

But, normally, we get limited cues about what's going on inside the body. We have no awareness of ups and downs of blood pressure, changes in brain wave rhythm, fluctuations in the state of muscles, and many other events.

Beeps or flashes

Sensitive, electronic equipment can give us such awareness. Through electrodes attached at various points on the body, it can detect, amplify and display tiny internal fluctuations—in the form of sound beeps or light flashes. And we can then learn, in effect, to "hit the ball better."

When, for example, rapid signals indicate elevated blood pressure, a patient sitting in front of a biofeedback machine can focus his mind on trying to bring the pressure down. A slowing of the signals tells him when he succeeds.

It's still somewhat mysterious—exactly how a person can induce in himself a body or mind state that lowers blood pressure, relaxes muscles, changes brain wave patterns or even alters skin temperature. But he clearly can learn.

And, after a period of practice with the equipment, a patient commonly learns well enough so that thereafter he is able to induce the desired state of will, without equipment.

Much of the pioneering work in biofeedback was done by psychologist Neal E. Miller and his colleagues at New

by Lawrence Galton

Biofeedback, a new field that depends on modern electronic devices to help persons learn to control unconscious body actions, has many medical applications. Here, Dr. Robert Gregg of California uses biofeedback to train a pregnant patient to relax—it's part of preparation for delivery.

York's Rockefeller Foundation. In many ingenious trials, making use of rewards, they were able to get dogs to increase and decrease intestinal contractions and blood pressure, and to train rats, in just 90 minutes, to increase or decrease heart rates by an average of 20 percent. And several months later, the rats retained the ability to control heart rate.

CHILD BIRTH. Recently, Dr. Robert H. Gregg, clinical professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Loma Linda (Cal.) University, was approached by a patient, a woman whose husband is an engineer in a laboratory making biofeedback equipment. She wanted to know whether the technique might help her prepare for her own labor.

"She'd had a difficult delivery with her first child, was apprehensive about the second, so I was willing to let her try it," Dr. Gregg recalls, adding that the results "were pretty impressive." And they were when he went on to try biofeedback training for 30 other patients.

The women practiced relaxing with equipment that converts electrical muscle patterns into sounds. A low rumble indicated when the muscles were most relaxed. The women practiced twice a day, half an hour at a time, until they could relax at will, both with and without the equipment.

When it came time for delivery, the women used only one-third the usual amount of sedatives and one-fourth the usual amount of analgesics. Moreover, their labor time was shorter—4.1 hours, on average, compared with 6.7 for other women.

"Childbirth," Gregg has reported, "is a perfect application for biofeedback. With other methods of prepared childbirth, a woman practices a technique but doesn't really know how it will work till she goes into labor. With biofeedback training, she can enter labor confident she'll be able to relax."

STROKE AND SPASM. At Emory University's Woodruff Medical Center in Atlanta, biofeedback shows promise in helping stroke victims to "will" paralyzed feet and legs to walk.

There, Dr. John V. Basmajian has developed a miniature electronic device, a muscle trainer, which is hooked up to paralyzed muscles to detect very subtle muscle activity that normally would go unnoticed by patients themselves. When the muscle activity begins, the device buzzes. And patients learn to make the buzzer sound—a result of muscles responding to brain signals "willing" action.

"The person with paralyzed muscle," says Dr. Basmajian, "finds dormant abilities that cause the buzzer to buzz and cause his muscle to move. We found that patients learn to pull up their feet at the ankle and keep them from dragging on the ground." And already some patients are able to walk without braces.

Similarly, biofeedback training is showing promise for patients with stroke, cerebral palsy and other movement disorders, and severe muscular spasm at the Institute for the Crippled and Disabled Rehabilitation and Research Center in New York City, where a special unit headed by Dr. Joseph Brudny has been set up.

Some of the most striking results at the institute have been for patients with torticollis, or wry neck, a muscle spasm disorder that twists the head and neck into an abnormal position. Typically, one man for three years had his chin pointing 90 degrees to the right, unable to straighten his head despite desperate efforts. Within eight weeks after he began three half-hour biofeedback training sessions a week, he learned control of his neck muscles, could keep his head in neutral position, has returned to work.

HEADACHES. Both migraine and tension headaches are being treated successfully with biofeedback.

Migraine is believed to result from pressure in enlarged blood vessels in the head. In a technique developed at the Menninger Foundation, Topeka, Kan., a patient has temperature sensors taped to a finger and to his forehead. A meter shows the difference between head and hand temperature. The objective is to "will" the meter needle to the right by relaxing the hand's blood vessels, thus increasing its temperature. With the relaxation comes a redistribution of blood that reduces pressure in blood vessels in the head.

Relief of tension

For tension headaches—the most common kind, caused by contraction of forehead, scalp and neck muscles—cure or alleviation rates of 75 to 80 percent have been reported, and hospitals now are beginning to use biofeedback in outpatient clinics.

At Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center's clinic, sensor electrodes are applied to the forehead to record muscle tension. If the level is high, the biofeedback machine emits rapid beeps that patients hear through earphones. As tension is reduced, the beeps come more slowly.

COLD FINGERS, HYPERTENSION AND HEARTBEATS. It's called Raynaud's disease, but many sufferers know it as "cold fingers." Even in early autumn the victims often wear gloves. With blood circulation impaired, their fingers become numb, look pale, sometimes turn blue, and when the disease is advanced become fiery red and intensely painful on exposure to cold or even during an emotional upset.

At Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, one of the first patients for whom biofeedback was tried was a 31-year-old man. A sensor produced a tone that changed pitch when he managed to increase his finger temperature. After eight training sessions, he no longer needed the equipment, he could control his finger temperature, enabling him for the first time in years to touch even cold objects without pain.

With biofeedback training, a patient learns to reduce tension and thus ease headaches.

BIOFEEDBACK CONTINUED

At Baltimore City Hospital, promising studies have been carried out with patients suffering from premature ventricular contraction, a potentially dangerous heartbeat irregularity. Through electrodes taped to the chest, heartbeats trigger lights. When a patient sees a green light, he knows he should try to speed his heart rate; a red light indicates he should slow the rate. After about 10 hour-long sessions, many patients can change the heart rate on command and can do the same at home without the lights.

At Boston City Hospital, similar techniques have been used for patients with high blood pressure, and decreases of as much as 33 points have been obtained in systolic pressures.

MANAGING EPILEPSY AND GASTROINTESTINAL PROBLEMS. Recently, decreases in the frequency and severity of epileptic seizures, even in patients not helped by medication, have been obtained in studies at the Brain Research Institute at UCLA, Children's Medical Center in Tulsa, and at the University of Tennessee's Department of Psychology in Knoxville.

Among patients in Knoxville, for example, was a 19-year-old man subject to two or three attacks daily; he now has no more than one a week and has gone as long as two weeks without a seizure. A 19-year-old woman, once subject to 15 to 20 psychomotor seizures and one or two severe grand mal attacks a month, now has no psychomotor seizures at all and no more than one grand mal attack a month, much shorter in duration, and some months she goes without an attack at all. A 17-year-old boy, who had eight to nine grand mal and many petit mal and psychomotor seizures a week, now has seizure-free periods of two weeks or more.

The possibility that biofeedback training can help patients with gastrointestinal disorders is also exciting researchers. At The Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Dr. Marvin M. Schuster has worked with patients suffering from incontinence caused by failure to control an anal muscle after childbirth tears and other injuries, and with others with severe heartburn caused by failure of a circular muscle at the entrance to the stomach, allowing acid stomach contents to move back upward into the esophagus.

Of the first seven incontinent patients—men and women in their 40's and 50's and one 6-year-old girl—three of the adults and the child are now completely continent after biofeedback training. Similar successes have been obtained for the heartburn problem.

"In our experience and that of others using the technique," says Dr. Schuster, "learning is gratifyingly rapid. Patients can learn almost as if by insight. They can develop control rapidly . . . and reinforcement is not required."

As new developments in medicine go, biofeedback has come a long way in a short time. It is still in its infancy and is likely to hold much greater promise in the future.

Clearly, what goes on in the body is not separate from what goes on in the mind and many body functions once thought beyond control can now be consciously regulated for the better.

"Bill and I have never felt happier in our home! We redecorated practically every room with the money I earn as an Avon Representative."

Charlotte Johnson

Torrance, California

We've made enormous changes in our home since I became an Avon Representative a little over eight years ago. And every time I look around and see all the lovely things I bought with my Avon money, I feel a great sense of pride.

I've always earned good money selling Avon products. Avon gave me the opportunity to learn about cosmetics—and how to sell them. Now I've got a nice business going for myself. I'm my own boss. I make my own hours. It's a great feeling to be independent!

Thanks to Avon, I've gotten to know my neighbors real well. Over the years, I've made a lot of good friends. And Avon products are so well liked, people make me feel welcome when I call.

All in all, being an Avon Representative has been a wonderful experience for me.

By Nancy Hall — as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

There's nothing like 185 pounds to come between a husband and a wife. Especially when I was the one carrying all the weight. Billy's friends used to call me Big Red, but I didn't know it at the time. All I knew was that Billy was staying out with the boys more and more while I stayed home and got fatter and unhappier.

I blame Billy for part of my weight problem, though. You see, I was a teen-age bride and he took me on so many ice cream dates before we were even married that I started popping diet pills just to get into my wedding dress. But the pills made me so jittery, I almost had a nervous breakdown. Finally, on my doctor's advice, I gave them up.

Of course, after I was married, I wanted to impress Billy with my cooking. But it's rough when there's not much money. So we had a lot of pinto beans, pork, lard, bread and ice cream — unless the hunting season was on. Then we'd have deer and rabbit casseroles and we'd see who could outeat the other. Billy is over 6' tall and I'm only 5'1½" yet I usually outdid him. Naturally, I piled on the pounds until I split the seams on everything I owned.

By the time I'd eaten myself into a size 18 dress, I was really a grouch. I wouldn't even let Billy have his friends over. And I absolutely refused to go camping with him. I knew the other wives would be there in their cute bikinis and all

Now I'm 107 pounds, Billy likes me in a bikini, even if the sun isn't out.

BEFORE AND AFTER MEASUREMENTS

	Before	After
Height	5'1½"	5'1½"
Weight	185 lbs.	107 lbs.
Bust	44"	34"
Waist	39"	25"
Hips	42"	33½"
Dress	18	7-9

I had to show off was a lot of rolls. As a result, Billy began going his way and I went mine. Even so, it wasn't till someone took my sister for my daughter that I finally did something about my weight.

I'd seen those magazine stories of people who had taken Ayds® Reducing Plan Candy, so I decided to buy the chocolate fudge kind at my local drugstore in Crossville, Tenn. I took two with hot water before each meal (I don't drink coffee) and those Ayds did it for me. By following the plan, I lost a pound or two a week with no strain.

Quite honestly, I'd never been a breakfast eater, so I just had the two Ayds in the morning. At lunchtime, I had two more, then a sandwich or salad. And before dinner, I'd have my last two Ayds for the day. Then I'd eat what I wanted — even some dessert. Only I ate much less because Ayds had a way of satisfying my appetite. And Ayds didn't make me nervous. They contain no drugs.

I must admit that it took about three months before people noticed I was getting slimmer. The reason was I was still covering up my figure with my old clothes. But when I finally got down to 107 pounds and bought a new wardrobe, everybody thought I'd lost the weight "overnight." The change in me was so dramatic that I became a completely new person, both physically and mentally. I'll tell you, Billy didn't want to go anywhere without me.

This brings me to one last thing I'd like to say for the benefit of all women. Don't think as I did that once you get your man, you can do anything. There's a lot of competition out there, so losing your man can be easy if you let yourself go. That's why I say losing 78 pounds on the Ayds plan saved my marriage.

Note: Want to try the Ayds plan? We'll send you a certificate worth $1.00 off on your first box of Ayds (redeemable when returned to us with proof of purchase), plus a free fact-filled 32-page booklet on the causes of overweight, and how Ayds helps you. Mail 10¢ for postage and handling to Campana, Dept. PE-016, Batavia, IL 60510.

MY FAVORITE jokes

by GERRI GALE

EDITOR'S NOTE: Gerri Gale likes to have some audience participation in her act, and this can lead to funny incidents. Recently she was doing her impression of Carol Channing in "Hello, Dolly!" and brought a man up out of the audience. As she had done countless times before, she put a long-haired wig on him, and when she took it off, his toupee came off, too—not that she meant to do this, but Gerri does look for those unplanned moments of comedy.

"I like to think of myself," she says, "as the kind of comedienne who carries a card in her wallet which says: 'In case of accident write down everything funny that happens on the way to the hospital.'"

Gerri's appeared in top clubs throughout the country and on TV with Milton Berle and Victor Borge

Here are some of her favorite jokes:

Apartment are so high-priced today it can cost $400 for three rooms—a living room, bedroom and mailbox. The mailbox is the one with the window.

And I'm glad to see the mail has speeded up. I mailed a letter yesterday and I got it back today.

Water pollution is so bad that when the tide goes out it doesn't come back—it calls in sick.

Two burglars were planning to break into Muhammad Ali's house. One of them said: "Are you kidding? If he catches us he'll beat us to a pulp." The other burglar said: "Muhammad Ali ain't gonna fight anybody for less than 2½ million dollars."

TV is affecting our kids. I heard one little girl tell her father, "Daddy, I love you better than any other brand."

I like antiques. I got a teacup that es back to the days of my grandfather and a beer mug that goes back to the nights of my grandfather.

My favorite sport is ice fishing. One day I brought home 200 pounds of ice.

Parking is so bad in New York the motto is: "If it doesn't move, tow it away." The other day a fellow left a poodle outside a supermarket and a police dog towed it away.

The way medical costs are today a hospital bed is like a parked taxi with the meter running.

I can never win anything in Las Vegas. Once I lost $50. Now that doesn't sound like much—but in the gum machine?

They now have computer dating centers. One fella went in and registered his qualifications. He wanted someone who enjoyed water sports, liked to dress formal and was very short. So the computer sent him a penguin.

I have a friend who doesn't believe in no-fault insurance because she claims it's never her fault. Once she hit an airplane on a runway and blamed the pilot for not taking off on time.

At a student wedding in college when the young bride was asked: "Do you take this man for richer or for poorer, for better or for worse . . . ?" one co-ed whispered to her friend: "Personally I've never been too crazy about those odds."

I saw an ad in the paper which said: "Elderly lady with hearing aid wants to meet gentleman with batteries."

When we were kids we always made a lot of noise when we played while my father would take a nap in his big chair. One day we were really noisy and he never moved. We got scared, so I walked over and opened one of his eyes. I knew everything was all right—he was still in there!

Talk about being a loser, remember the TV show "The Millionaire"? I was the only one who got a bum check.

Keeping Up...With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Paddling and Spanking

Teachers are allowed to spank students under particular circumstances. So ruled the U.S. Supreme Court recently.

The court ruled, however, that corporal punishment must be observed by at least one witness, students must be warned in advance, and parents must be accorded a written explanation if they request one. Three states specifically prohibit spanking: Massachusetts, New Jersey, Maryland.

In the case ruled upon by the Supreme Court, a student was paddled in a North Carolina elementary school whose principal explained, "Nobody gets hurt by a paddling. It's good for you when you deserve it, and the law that permits it is good."

Hoover's Perversion of Power

Employing forged documents, the FBI, with the approval of the late Director J. Edgar Hoover, sought to discredit the University of Texas in Austin and Antioch College in Yellow Springs, Ohio.

On Aug. 12, 1968, the San Antonio office of the FBI sent Hoover a copy of a newspaper article headlined "Free Love Comes to Surface On and Around U.T.-Austin." The San Antonio office noted that the bureau had previously advocated the use of articles "to show the depravity of New Left leaders and members."

The FBI memo recommended that an anonymous letter be sent along with the clipping to Texas State Sen. Wayne Connally, brother of then Gov. John Connally, and to Frank Erwin, chairman of the University of Texas Board of Regents.

"This letter," said the memo, "could be written in the vein of an irate parent who was considering sending his son and/or daughter to the University of Texas to receive a college education.

"The anonymous letter could protest such activity at a state-supported university."

J. Edgar Hoover authorized sending the letter. So reports the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Hoover also approved a plan conceived by officials of the FBI in its Cincinnati office. It called for agents to plant a story in the "Cincinnati Enquirer" "questioning whether Antioch [College] is in fact highly intellectual and whether students are actually receiving a quality education there." The article was then to be sent anonymously to parents of prospective students, to the college's board of directors, and to prospective employers of Antioch students.

These tactics were part of the FBI's domestic counter-intelligence campaign, "Cointelpro," to discredit those people and organizations with whom J. Edgar Hoover disagreed ideologically in the late 1960's and early 1970's.

Nine Out of 10 Are Thieves

Almost nine out of 10 boys in London have stolen by the time they leave school.

A shocking report, sponsored by the British government, is based on interviews with 1400 London boys. The report took six years of research and was supervised by Dr. William Belson of the London School of Economics.

The boys, aged 13 to 16, were chosen from a cross section of British society. All were promised their names would be kept secret. Under the circumstances they spoke forthrightly.

Their "confessions" have stunned the English public. Here they are:

- Of every 100 boys questioned, 88 said they had stolen at school, 70 from a shop, and 33 from a stall.

- One in four had stolen from a car or a truck, one in six from a telephone cash box.

- One in six had stolen a letter or a parcel from the mail, one in 20 had stolen a car or a truck.

- Thirty percent had received money or goods via threats or blackmail.

Some of Dr. Belson's findings explode widely held social theories. For example, broken homes are not a major cause of theft among the young. But boredom is. "There used to be somebody to tell Mum or Dad," explains Dr. Belson, "if Johnny stepped out of line. Now nobody knows who Mum or Dad is."

What can be done to stem the junior crime wave? Make life more interesting, more hopeful, more livable for the youngsters.

How They Rank

A survey of business school deans reveals that the Stanford University Graduate School of Business is rated the nation's leading business school in academic quality.

It is also tied first with Harvard University in the perceived value of its Master of Business Administration degree in the job market.

In academic quality the deans rated the various graduate business schools as follows:

- 1) Stanford
- 2) Chicago
- 3) Sloan (MIT)
- 4) Harvard
- 5) Carnegie-Mellon
- 6) Wharton (Penn)
- 7) Tuck (Dartmouth)
- 8) UCLA
- 9) Columbia
- 10) Berkeley (U. of Cal.)

In employment value they rated the schools as follows:

- 1) Stanford & Harvard
- 3) Wharton
- 4) Sloan
- 5) Chicago
- 6) Tuck
- 7) Columbia
- 8) Carnegie-Mellon
- 9) Northwestern
- 10) UCLA

WIFE LINDA AND PAUL MCCARTNEY

McCartney Barred

Unless someone can pull some influential strings in Tokyo, former Beatle Paul McCartney and his rock group, Wings, are not going to play Japan.

In 1973 McCartney was convicted in England for possessing marijuana. Japan's immigration control law prohibits entry to anyone who has been convicted of a drug charge.

"The whole thing is very disappointing," says a Wings spokesman, "not only from the performance point of view but also because Paul and his family really wanted to tour Japan, a country they admire very much."

"How I lost 980 mg. of 'tar' the first week... without losing out on taste."

"Switching to a low 'tar' cigarette is no piece of cake if you're a menthol smoker like me. There just are not many low 'tar' menthols to choose from that taste good.

"So I was surprised when I tasted Doral Menthol. A terrific taste, and 7 milligrams less 'tar' than my old brand. That adds up to 140 mg. less 'tar' a pack—for me 980 mg. less 'tar' a week...on my Doral Diet."

What made our country and the rest of the world what they are today? Any answer would have to include military conflicts of the past — the battles and strategies, the fighting men and machines, the winners and losers.

That's why military books have always been so fascinating, both as a source of information and reading excitement.

Now, the Military Book Club invites you to build a prized library of such books at big savings . . . with a wide selection of often-hard-to-find and seldom-discounted books on military affairs. The Club offers you a unique opportunity to enjoy hundreds of accounts of battlefield brilliance and stories of personal bravery, while at the same time adding to your knowledge of history and world affairs.

As a member of the Military Book Club, you can step back in time and visit the great battle-scenes of the past . . . on land, at sea, and in the air. You will follow the movements of armies to victory or defeat in the battles of Bunker Hill and Bataan, Murfreesboro and Midway, Stalingrad and Saipan, Coral Sea and Choshin Reservoir. You will ride with the U.S. Cavalry through the West in our Frontier Wars of the 1800's . . . share the fears and triumphs of our submarine men in their silent under-sea war against Japan . . . tackle the entire Luftwaffe with outnumbered R.A.F. pilots over the North Atlantic in World War II . . . wade ashore and engage in vicious hand-to-hand combat along with our GI's at Anzio and Iwo Jima.

As a member of the Club, you can choose books detailing the brilliant careers of such World War II personalities as Patton, Spruance, MacArthur and LeMay, and understand the qualities that enabled these men to command huge forces and influence the course of history. And you'll be able to relive, through words and pictures, the adventures of heroic men like Jimmy Doolittle in his crusade for air power, Audie Murphy in his one-man war against Germany, and Horoo Onoda, the Japanese soldier who fought a lone, lost war for 30 years in a desolate outpost. He finally surrendered in 1974, 29 years after the war was over.

to supersonic F-15's, from crude armored vehicles to the fearsome tanks of modern warfare.

You can be sure the works you receive from the Military Book Club are authoritative and up-to-date. But they are never dull, dry texts. The Club combs the publishing world to bring you books that are as entertaining as they are reliable.

So join the Military Book Club and start enjoying the exciting and informative reading it will bring to your home. Right now, you can take any four of the books shown on this page for only 98¢, plus shipping and handling, with membership. As a member, you will continue to receive a wide range of selections at substantial savings.

How The Club Works

To apply for membership, send no money now. Simply mail the application. Once you're accepted as a member, you'll get the four introductory volumes you've chosen for 98¢ plus shipping and handling charges. If you're not satisfied for any reason at all, return your books within 10 days and cancel your membership. You won't owe anything.

If you decide to remain in the Club, you'll receive a copy of the Club's magazine about every four weeks (14 times a year) describing the coming selection and alternates which will average 30% less than the prices of publishers' editions plus shipping and handling.

If you want the Club selection, do nothing. It will be shipped to you automatically.

If you prefer an alternate, or no book, indicate your choice on the convenient reply form. Just return the form to us by the specified date. You'll have at least 10 days to decide. If for some reason you do not have 10 days and we send you a selection you do not want, just ship it back to us at our expense.

As a member, you need take only four more books at regular low Club prices during your first two years of membership. You may resign any time thereafter or continue without further purchase obligation.

Military Book Club, Garden City, N. Y. 11530

WONDERWORD

HOW TO PLAY: First read the list of words then look at the puzzle. The words are in all directions — vertically, horizontally, diagonally, backwards. Circle each letter of a word found and strike it off list. The letters are often used more than once so do not cross them out. It is best to find the big words first. When you find all the words listed in the clues you'll have a number of letters over which spell the Wonderword.

SOME OF THE MOST INTERESTING PLANTS are carnivorous or "insect eating" plants. These plants are not only extremely different from most "ordinary" plants that we know, but are great fun to grow and watch, and are a delight with the kids. There are basically four families of plants that feed on insects. The most popular is the Venus Flytrap, but other plants include the pitcher plants, the sundews, and the bladderworts.

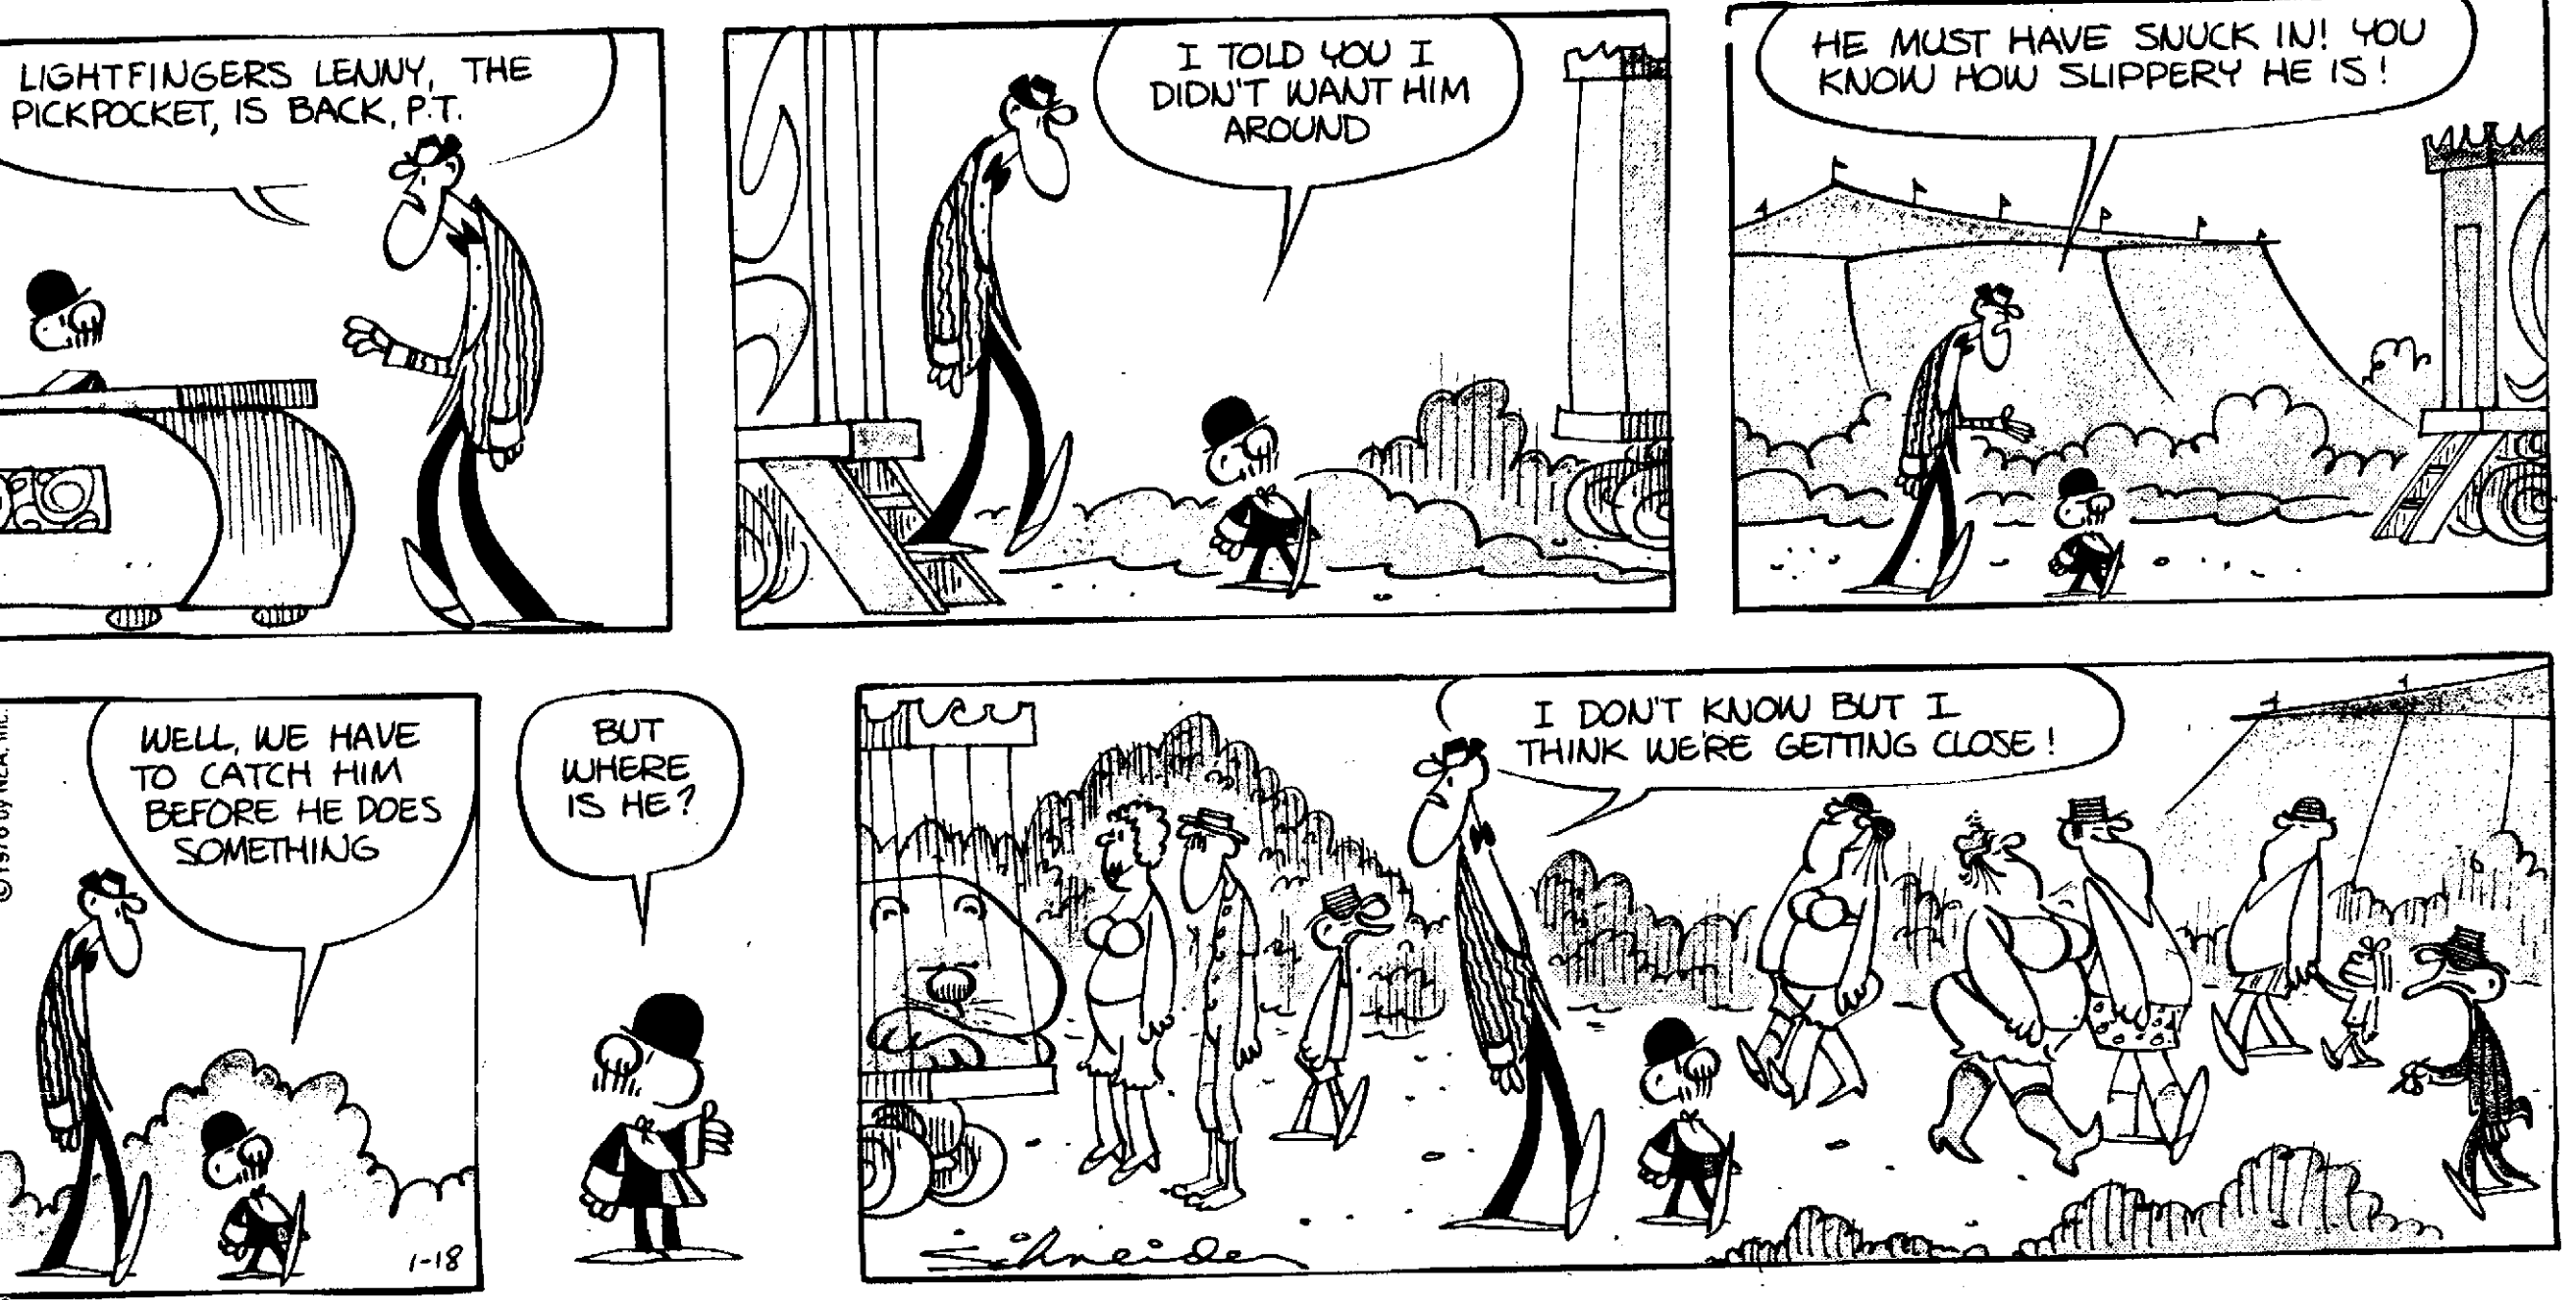

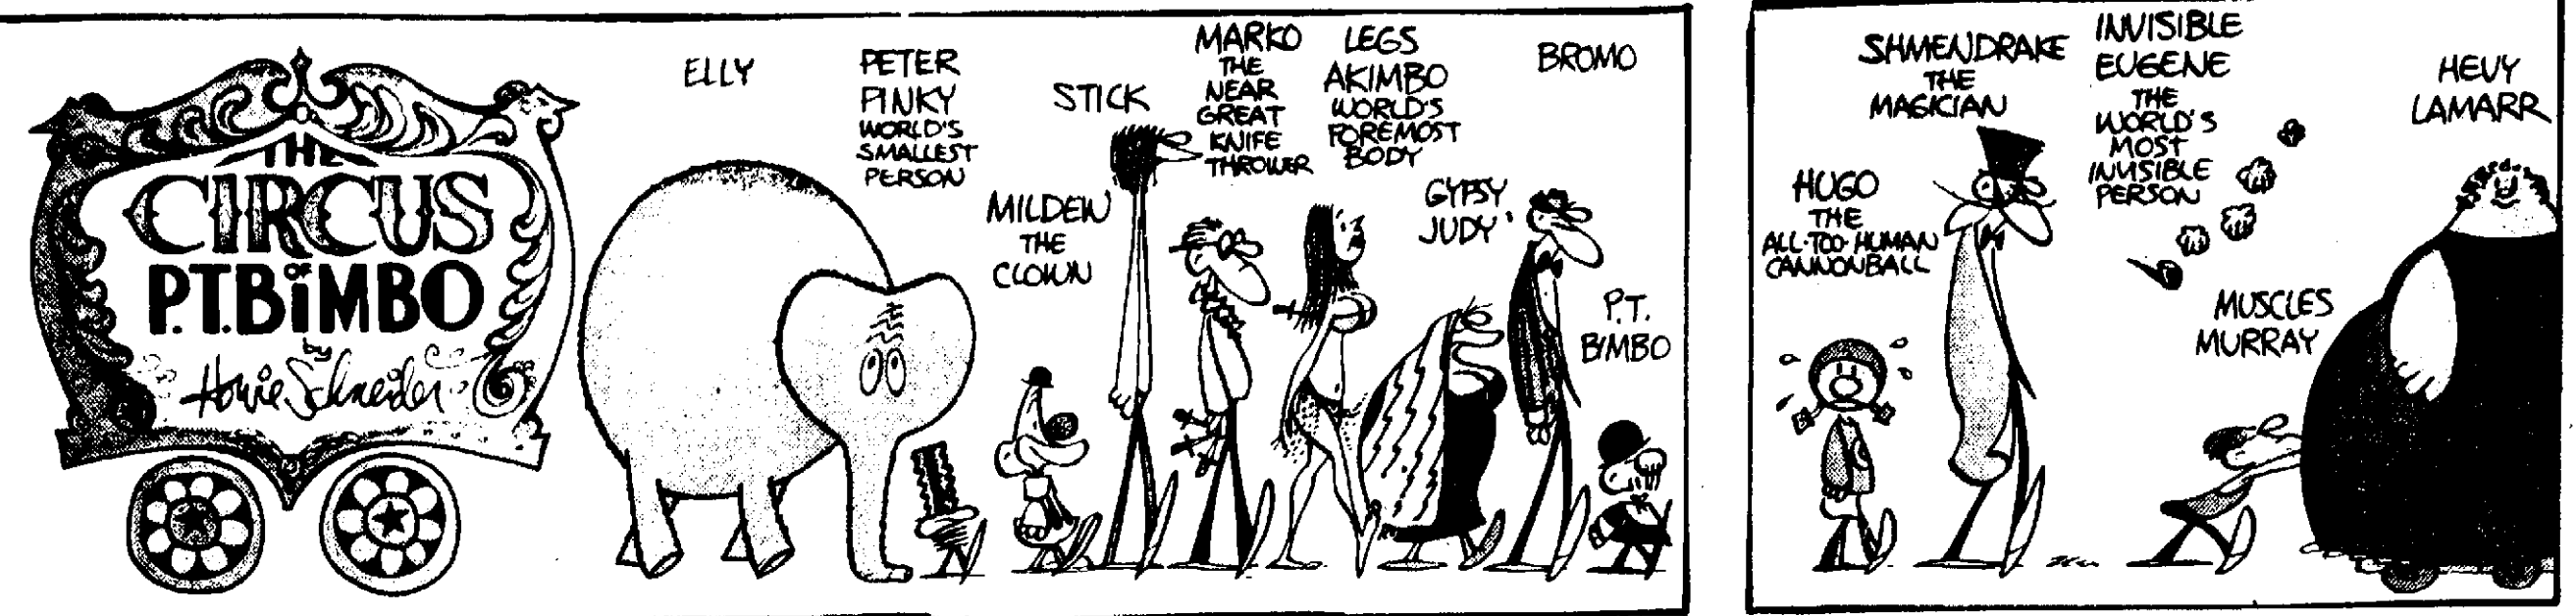

Growing these interesting plants is easy and fun. All of them grow naturally in wet, boggy soil, so they're best grown in a terrarium or large fish bowl and the soil kept moist and the air humid. Keeping the bowl partially covered with glass will help keep the air humid, however there should still be plenty of ventilation. They should be watered frequently using distilled water or rain or snow-melted water. They should be planted in a mixture of peat or sphagnum moss and rich garden soil that is slightly acidic. They require plenty of sunlight and a high temperature of around 80°F.; so place them by a south or east window.

Many of the smaller plants such as the bladderworts and sundews may be planted together in a mixed terrarium. All are available at most local garden centers, or by mail order from plant and seed companies.

Grow your own "insect eating" houseplants.
